THE COLD WEATHER and the necessity of heating street cars, calls attention to the question of their proper ventilation and sanitary condition. At times very much overcrowded, the street car is a profile means for the propagation and spreading of disease. Too much attention cannot be given to the care of the cars. Spitting is prohibited in the cars in most cities, but, with the introduction of the pay-as-you-enter car, the conductor is not in the same position to check this nuisance as formerly. The conductor should also give careful attention to ventilation. The upper windows are put there solely for the purpose of ventilation, and these may be opened without the risk of creating a draft and causing passengers to feel uncomfortable. If conductors would give this matter attention, it would obviate the necessity which some passengers feel of opening the lower windows for the admittance of fresh air. This, while accomplishing the object sought by the passenger at the window, creates a strong draft, which is decidedly objectionable to those in the rear.

Conductors should be instructed as to the proper ventilation of their cars; they should be the only persons authorized to open or close windows, and a notice to this effect should be posted in the car. The company should, however, insist that their employees give ventilation careful attention.

Conductors could also with advantage give their cars closer inspection to check the spitting on the floors. They have ample time between stops, and this inspection would add very little to their duties.

Street cars should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected when taken off the run at night.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE SHOULD INQUIRE.

WHEN THE FARMERS' BANK failed, the then Minister of Finance, the Hon. W. S. Fielding, received much adverse criticism. How much excuse there was for the minister then is a matter on which there are divided opinions. It is stated that he had warnings of the mismanagement of the bank's affairs and neglected to take action. However this may be, the bank failed, and thousands of people, who had placed savings in its charge, lost them, while the fortunes of many shareholders were also swept away and caused at least one premature death.

The other day, a chartered bank doing business in Canada from one end to the other, received severe censure for its loose methods of banking, which may have been a contributory cause to the downfall of one of its managers for misappropriating the bank's funds. Publicity has been given to the charge, and the present Minister of Finance, the Hon. W. T. White, should not let the matter pass without inquiry.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"GENERALS win battles, but soldiers win wars," says Lord Kitchener. That's why Canada is still gathering men for the trip to Berlin.

REMEMBER, he war doesn't make any difference to the kiddies—they've got to have Santa Claus come just the same.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED the Peterborough Canadian Club? Are they all dead ones?

DO YOUR SHOPPING before Christmas.

The Opportunity for Service.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

If there is any time more than another when humanity should burst its shell of reserve and self, and have real brotherliness for the less fortunate, it will be this Christmas and during the following Winter. In the families where there is Christmas abundance and overflowing luxury, will there not be impelling reminders that others are struggling with despair? The foregoing of some special indulgence would not mean much to many persons, but how precious would be the corresponding benefit to others without food or fuel! With the vast majority of people, it is only lack of contact with cases of real misery or prejudicing experiences with habitual mendicants that holds them from a far wider helpfulness to those in sore trouble. Let us trust that this Christmas, though to many it be far from as joyful as usual, will bring to thousands upon thousands of hearts the pleasure of real beneficence that was Scrooge's. The opportunity for service in this respect was never greater.

The Duty of the Hour.

(Toronto Star.)

If we make the British armies great enough the war of next spring will be relatively harmless—preponderating forces will determine results. It is plain enough that this is the purpose that Lord Kitchener has in view. He knows the temper of the British people, and does not intend to begin war in real earnest until he can force matters to a quick conclusion.

In the interests of peace itself it is the duty of Canada to raise large forces and deliver them in England before next April. In order to do that there ought to be such a work of enlistment during the month of December as we have not seen in this country as yet. The more men we raise the less lives we shall lose.

Refining Canadian Ores.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The Government has aranged to make a comprehensive examination of the books of the United States nickel companies. If it is found after the fullest investigation that Canadian nickel is still finding its way to Germany, then export to the United States will be immediately stopped. If on the other hand no evidence can be found to justify the assumption that the United States refiners are not fulfilling the undertaking which they gave, there does not seem to be any reasonable reason why the industry should be interfered with. In the meantime it would seem to be the duty of Canada to see to it that something is accomplished as soon as possible toward having Canadian ores refined in this country.

Another Machine to Smash.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

The truce that was declared in party warfare in Canada on the outbreak of the European conflict has been loyally observed by most of the leading and responsible men on both sides, but it is becoming a severe strain on the patience of the machine politicians. The opportunity to belittle an opponent or to make a little cheap party capital seems too precious to be wasted, no matter what the consequences might be. We have been hearing a great deal of late about the wonderful efficiency of the Prussian military machine, but it may be doubted if, at its very best, it has much to boast about over the Canadian party machine.

MR. STOCKER EXPLAINS.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Attention is called in the issue of The Review of Saturday to the fact that the large posters which are on the boards to advertise the Patriotic Fund campaign were printed out of the city. That they were printed out of the city is true.

These posters are a gift from myself to the campaign. There is no cost whatevr to the Fund, either for cost whatever to the Fund, either for is entirely complimentary. As a British subject I conceive it my duty and privilege to do what I can and as handling posters is my business I wished to make a contribution in my line of work if possible.

I was enabled to get these posters from people with whom I have business dealings, and who have a plant for such a class of work alone, where it can be done quickly and at reasonable prices. Having dealings as indicated, I was enabled to secure these posters at a price at which I am certain the local printers would not have been able to do the work and make a profit, and as the object of all work is to make a profit nothing has been missed.

I have yet to learn that a man may not do as he likes with his own. If the people who are doing the kicking will fall to and do as much as I am doing, though that is not nearly as much as I would like to do, it will be time to raise a row. It is only an instance of jumping at things without making enquiry and ascertaining the facts. Had they asked Mr. Dobbin I am sure he would have told them, though the thing does not call for explanation.

Yours respectfully,

WALTER STOCKER.

An Explanation of Double-Yolked Eggs

One of the most common abnormalities in egg production is the double yolk. An egg of this description can usually be identified by its size and peculiar shape, and if incubated—which is never desirable—it will hatch out a four-legged chicken or other equally undesirable monstrosity. The freak is accounted for by the fact that owing to the egg organs being unduly excited through stimulation—the result of errors in feeding—the ova are produced too rapidly, causing two of them to drop into the egg passage together. These become encased in one shell, forming a twin egg, and Nature, doubtless taking umbrage at such a perversion of her law, produces as the result of incubation a freak instead of an ordinary chick.

For a similar reason the ova will sometimes mature over and above the normal rate of one egg each day, and instead of entering the egg passage in pairs, the two will drop in separately, but on the same day, the result being an egg that is either soft-shelled or devoid of shell altogether. Though a soft-shelled or shell-less egg may result from neglect to supply the fowls with shell-forming material, it is not so in this instance; but because the shell cannot be formed in time to coat the egg immediately it matures.

Crooked or mis-shapen eggs are not infrequently met with. These are due to the fact that whereas twenty-four hours usually suffice for the formation of a perfect shell, owing to stimulation, a second ovum follows close on a predecessor, reaching it before it is laid. The second egg, which is up to that moment soft and yielding, is brought into contact with the hard one against which it reclines, and when laid by the hen is flat and crooked in consequence.

A SEEDLESS TOMATO

Scientific Gardening Has Evolved Perfect Specimens

The "Navel Tomato" promises to be a valuable addition to our list of vegetables. A. J. Doty, an enthusiastic amateur plant breeder and horticulturist of Porterville, California, has evolved a tomato of extreme size, which is to the usual vegetable what the navel orange is to the ordinary fruit. The resemblance is borne out by the navel formation at the blossom end of the fruit, where the navel characteristics appear.

In common with the navel orange, the new tomato is almost entirely seedless, the usual seed pulp being replaced by solid flesh.

Mr. Doty was at work on the tomato for several seasons before he secured the production of them true to type from season to season. The inexplicable characteristic of the fruit is found in the fact that the early tomatoes from the vines contain seeds but after the first few ripen the remaining ones are absolutely without seeds.

Austria has captured a city from little Servia at last. The theory of the capture, however, is that the Austrians were running so hard from the Russians that they dashed into Belgrade to escape.

The Idea of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is This:

THE soldiers have gone to fight not for their home town or any particular locality but for all Canada.

The whole of Canada should combine to take proper care of their families.

The Fund is One Fund and each locality is administered by the local branch.

In Peterborough for instance, families of the soldiers will be looked after by the local Branch acting for the National Association.

All the families throughout Canada will receive aid on the same basis and none will be neglected.

This is a sensible and patriotic plan. Peterborough will fall in line. Do all you can but do it now.

THE LOCAL OR CONTINGENT RELIEF SIDE OF THE PETERBOROUGH PATRIOTIC FUND is for the purpose of Aiding Families who may be in need owing to the war, through lack of work. There are many such and will be more. They must be judiciously aided and not want.

We are face to face with the realities of war, more dreadful than we at home yet understand, but imagination needs no help in picturing what the war means to the women and children whose natural protectors have been taken from them.

With rent to be paid---with winter coming and no fuel in the house--with the little children crying for warm clothing--with foodstuffs rising in price, war is, indeed, carried to the very hearthstones, unless WE DEFENDERS AT HOME stand in the way.

Toys For French Children.

MARSEILLES, Dec. 7. — (Via Paris.)—The United States naval collier Jason came into port yesterday and unloaded fifty wagon loads of gifts for the children of Marseilles whose fathers have been killed, or wounded or who are at the front. The townspeople, massed upon the quays to watch the landing, gave a warm greeting to the ship. The Jason left New York Nov. 12, laden with Christmas gifts for the children of the belligerent countries, leaving them at the ports for which they were intended. Her last calling place was Devonport, Eng., whence she steamed Nov. 28 for Marseilles.

Her Age.

The lady with the upturned nose
Came into court one day.
She seemed to say, "I know it all."
At least it looked that way.

"What is your age?" the counsel said.
"My age is twenty-three."
But she was thirty-six, all right.
That any one could see.

"I thought you were quite well informed,"
Said counsel, with a frown,
"But when it comes down to your age
You do not know it all."

A. F. KNIGHT, Acting Manager

SUNDAY AFTERNOON TALKS AT ST. PAUL'S BY MR. BURNHAM M.P.

Since last Sunday I attended a lecture in Knox Church given by the Rev. Principal Sharrard of India. In his lecture he described the re-creation of India on an industrial basis dating from the awakened ambition of the people as a result of the Russo-Japanese war. India is determined to become alive to her own interest and not to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for other nations. Immediately after the war, factories wholly unknown before began to spring up and foreign capital began to come in. The result is that at the present time India is on the eve of becoming a great world-industrial power which the other countries will have to reckon with. The most skilled of her laborers receive from 30c to 40c a day, and her workmen after a little training are able to do just as much as any other workmen in the world, man for man. They have wonderful initiative powers and intellect. The reason that their capability has not sprung into existence heretofore is that industrialism did not exist anywhere in the world before 1845. It did not exist before 1860 in Germany or the United States, but India was dependent not only upon foreign capital, but also upon extension of railways. Facts speak for themselves, and the building up of hundreds of factories for the manufacture of everything known to trade in a country of 315,000,000 of people, eager, keen, self-reliant and capable is something that the other nations of the world will have to take notice of very soon. It may be ten years hence. It may be only five. But the rapidity with which India is becoming able to supply her own wants, and reach out, as in the case of jute and steel, for the export trade of the world, is something that the others nations need to take into their serious consideration. There can be no doubt that if it is able—and it is able—the East, with its cheap labor and natural resources, will supply its own wants, and, with the opening of the Panama canal, will be able to invade foreign markets. Prices of products and prices of labor must fall unless the western nations devote their attention more to the home trade and its preservation by means of home development and any other device that may be deemed necessary to preserve their civilization and status.

The suggestion that Canada would become a land of farmers if we had not protection (apart altogether from the rivalry of countries now exporting cheap cereals which did not export before) is to ignore the fact that three-fourths of what is raised by Canadian agriculture is consumed in Canada, so that if the industrial market, or home market, as it is called, practically disappeared, one-half the farmers would have to disappear also from Canada. In the last analysis, the only safe condition for a country is to be well balanced in all directions at home, and to strive for that development at home which free traders picture for the world at large on the supposition or assumption that the world at large is one in race, civilisation and aspirations. It certainly is not. When little communities three centuries ago were sufficient unto themselves, people there were happy in their small and narrow way. Though comunities have, by means of railways, etc., become nations, yet the same principle must prevail if they are to be self-dependent and happy.

Some years ago we in Ontario put an export duty on sawlogs in order to keep the logs in Ontario to supply our own mills with. No one but the limit-owners disapproved of this measure. The consistent free trader must, however, disapprove of it, and of any protective tax of any kind at any time, and most of all an embargo on exports. It will be seen from the case of the logs that the chief aim of the sensible man is to provide work for his own people, and not to allow himself to become the victim of prejudices, that is, if he wants to build up his own country in all departments of trade and make it an all-round and thoroughly strong and self-dependent nation. That is all protection is for. It is intended to be used when useful for the home-people, and no further. If we find it is a good thing to protect, let us protect; if had, then let us avoid it.

In closing, I want to place the picture with which I set out, before you again. Let us suppose that one million Chinese decide to settle in Canada. Finding that their mode of living and low wages enables them to oust the Canadian, they send word home, and twenty million more men and women and children come over. Where would the mass of our own people be in a few years? That is the problem we have always before us, whether in actual people or in their products, which are nearly the same thing. Asiatic labor is cheaper. Its goods are cheaper. They satisfy all the conditions of Free Trade. Are you in favor of such an influx either of people or goods, without restraint? Any restraint is just so much protection. Free Trade in time would develop in Canada that one particular way which it was naturally best suited to. But that would not do us in Canada. We do not wish to be tied to others' policies; we want our own civilization, our own system of government, our own way of doing things, and our own country. We do not want to be developed in one way, and in others dependent elsewhere: to be shepherds only, grain growers only, or manufacturers only (as in Britain). In protected countries we practise some free trade, for example, where we cannot do the work ourselves. The "Made-in-Canada, keep-the-money-in-Canada" movement is all protection. Let me again point out that free trade is the best for the moneyed man, the employer and consumer, but death to those wage-earners whose wages are higher than those of the lowest able to do the work in other countries. How is the home market built up? In Britain, which is not an agricultural country, but a paradise for the employer manufacturer, by cheap food for the employed. In Canada, able to supply all its own needs, it ought to be built up by fair play all round. Free trade over and above a mere revenue tariff means, as we have seen, absolutely unrestricted trade and absolutely unrestricted labor competition. Under it the peoples of the world would pass to and fro without organization of any kind, let or hindrance small or great, for organization means control, and any form of union or control means the protective or restrictive principle.

Perfect freedom in action is anarchy. Perfect freedom in religion is liberty to acknowledge God, or not, as we see fit. Perfect fredom of trade is chaos, not system. Freedom to be freedom must therefore be tempered by discretion, and any form of discreet tempering is protection more or less, but protection all the same. They who preach perfect freedom of trade become intoxicated with the sound of the word "freedom,"" which, like the free wind, bloweth where it listeth, and no man knoweth whence it cometh or whither it goeth. Organization, control, unionism, protection, are all one and the same. Control is, in other words, the modern doctrine of efficiency, which, when it is itself controlled, permits of all that men can do for the benefit of each other and the well-being of the world. "Let things take care of themselves. They will right themselves," is the motto of free trade.

Can anybody in the light of modern knowledge consent to such a proposition? And no country in the world practises free trade. All trade policies are necessarily compromises. It is not really a question of Free Trade against Protection, but of taking just so much of both as is best for us. It is here that the Free Trader makes his crucial mistake. He pretends even to himself that he will not compromise and deludes himself with the idea that he does not. We know better. Facts are stubborn things and are against him. The ardent protectionist may be inclined to go too far. But since he admits that Free Trade can be good where needed, there is hope for him, and he will compromise. Unless we learn to compromise, and thus make use of all that is best, we will stand in our own light and retard our growth and prosperity.

Apple Charlotte.

The literature of the kitchen sometimes sheds a light on the traits of historical personages. For example, it is not uninteresting to read in a book of recollections of the origin of that rather agreeable dish of breadcrumbs, fruit and spices known as "apple charlotte." It appears that the thrifty wife of George III. invented the pudding in order to use up the weekly palace crusts.

BISHOP DEDICATES NEW CHURCH IN EAST CITY

Bishop Scollard of North Bay and Rev. Father McShane of Montreal Assist in the Services

The Church of the Immaculate Conception was dedicated Sunday morning by Bishop O'Brien, and a large congregation was present. Only the basement has been completed, but sufficient accommodation is provided for the present.

The walls are finished in white which, along with the numerous windows, causes the auditorium to appear very bright. The ceiling is not at all low, as many anticipated, and the ventilation is perfect. The altar is white and on the gospel side is stationed a statue of the Sacred Heart while on the epistle side is a statue of the Immaculate Conception. The latter is surmounted by an illuminated crown. The pulpit is of mission oak as are the pews and the confessionals. The confessionals are placed at the rear of the church similar to the church of the Sacred Heart.

The Ceremony.

The first part of the ceremony was the blessing of the exterior of the church at the conclusion of which the Litany of the Saints was chanted. The interior was then consecrated and this was followed by Pontifical High Mass, celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. Dean McColl, the rector of the new church was priest of honor, Rev. Father McShane, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Montreal, was deacon; Rev. Father McCarthy, the curate of the Church of the Immaculate Conception was sub-deacon and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, was master of ceremonies. His Lordship Bishop Scollard of North Bay was present in the sanctuary. The altar boys assisting were: A. O'Brien, P. Malane, F. Welsh, J. Condon, E. Sheehan, T. McCabe, E. Heffernan and R. McCabe.

The Sermon.

The sermon for the occasion was preached by Bishop Scollard who took his text from Paralipomenon: My ear will be attentive to the prayers of those who pray in this place. "You are here today," began the speaker, "witnessing the dedication of your new church to the service of God. The Bishop has proceeded around the exterior of the building sprinkling blessed water and likewise has blessed the interior, repeating psalms and invocations to Almighty God. It is the ceremony which calls down the blessings of God upon the building. Almighty God has deigned to hear the prayers of the officiating prelate and the church has been sanctified and set aside for the service of the Most High.

All material substances to be used for church purposes must be blessed to remove the ban, God put upon it when He cursed the earth. This church has been blessed and is now a sacred building. The malediction of God has been withdrawn and his blessing is on it and the ground upon which it stands.

No edifices on the face of the earth are so magnificent, and on which so much art and architecture is lavished, as Christian temples. Before the time of Christ the heart was the temple from which gratitude was offered to God but the heart became corrupt and we read that Patriarchs erected tables of stone upon which to offer up their holocausts. When man again fell away from God, He called Abraham the father of the chosen people to Him and revealed how men must worship. On another occasion God called Moses to Him and made known the details of the temple which was to be called a tabernacle where sacrifices, prayers and thanksgivings were to be offered up. Almighty God made known that fact that men could worship Him not only individually but also collectively. He revealed the plans of the temple of Jerusalem to Solomon and we read that the opening ceremonies of that edifice lasted eight days. A mysterious cloud surrounded it and there was to be heard beautiful music both vocal and instrumental.

The temple of Jerusalem was a mere figure of the more perfect temple to be worshipped in during the Christian era. God was only present spiritually in the temples of old but in the temples of today he is truly present. No matter how humble the temple is He is present and in that fact consists the excellence of the Christian temples. When we look for the first Christian temple we must find where Christ commenced His sacramental life on earth. It is recorded in the Holy Gospel according to St. Luke, chapter 22, "And having taken the chalice He gave thanks and said, Take and divide it among you. For I say to you that I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, till the Kingdom of God come. And taking bread, he gave thanks, and brake; and gave to them saying: This is My body which is given for you. Do this for a commemoration of Me. In like manner the chalice also, after He had supped saying: This is the chalice; the New Testament in My blood, which shall be shed for you."

From that moment till now and on till the end of the world Christ is always present in the Christian temples. He performs the same wonders as He did when He trod upon this earth and dwells as He did in Nazareth. If we were privileged with visiting Bethlehem and trodding the sacred soil of Gethsemane we would be moved to extreme piety but to the Catholic imbued with deep sentiments of faith the scenes are all to be found in the Catholic church.

The distinguished speaker urged the parishioners of the new church to come there when troubled and ask the Almighty for assistance. He referred them to the words of his text, "My ear will be attentive to the prayers of those who pray in this place," and remarked that if one is uncertain as to his or her calling in life, Christ in the tabernacle should be appealed to and He will answer the prayer. If it is His will to have one lead the life of an ecclesiastic He will have it so and if it is His will to have him or her lead a married life He will grant the necessary grace and strength to have the married life led for the honor and glory of God. The voice of the humble is never despised. "I hope and pray," Bishop Scollard concluded, "that from now till the end of time this new church will be a store house of heavenly grace and benediction, dedicated to the honor and glory of God to enable souls to be prepared to reign for ever with God Almighty in the Kingdom of Heaven."

BISHOP O'BRIEN

Bishop O'Brien's Remarks.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien spoke a few words at the close of the Mass. He referred to the joy which came to him on the occasion of a church being dedicated to God Almighty. He urged the parishioners to make the church a point of attraction and visit Jesus in the Tabernacle regularly.

His Lordship referred to the work of H. T. Hickey the contractor, who built the church and also Architect Holmes of Toronto who designed the building. Their work was executed in a faultless manner. After the mechanical work was performed the rest was in the hands of Dean McColl, who even before his appointment took great interest in the new church. Bishop O'Brien urged that the members of the Church of the Immaculate Conception co-operate with Dean McColl in his every desire and if they would do this, their salvation was assured.

In the evening His Lordship celebrated Pontifical Vespers and Rev. Father McShane, pastor of St. Patrick's Cathedral of Montreal, spoke.

The Choir.

The members of St. Peter's Cathedral choir composed the choir for the opening, and the singing of that body cannot be too highly commended. Under the leadership of Choirmaster A. New and Miss M. Doherty, the organist, the choir of St. Peter's is making rapid strides of advancement. The solos yesterday were taken by Misses T. O'Donnell, A. Sullivan, A. McCabe, and G. Rudkins, and Messrs. J. Minicola, E. Hanrahan and G. Daly.

The Masses on Sunday at the Church of the Immaculate Conception will be at 8.30 and 10.30 and Vespers at 7 o'clock. The week morning Mass will be celebrated at seven thirty.

Dean McColl and his assistant, Father McCarthy, are to be found at the House of Providence until the new rectory is completed.

HOME GUARD LIKENED TO DAVID'S ARMY

Organization not to be Considered as Folly and Uselessness Says Rev. J. R. Webb

Some trenchant remarks were made by Rev. J. R. Webb last night during his sermon, on the showing made by Canadian and English born citizens who had enlisted for the war. He declared it would interest him to know exactly how many Canadian born men had gone to the front from Peterborough. When he counted the few who had gone he was led to believe that the youth of Canada missed something in their blood their fathers had possessed.

Speaking of efforts he thought were being made to hush these facts, he declared that some of the letters which appeared in the daily press last week under the non-de-plume of "Observer" were nothing but trash. He asked why people were so anxious to shield certain individuals if there was no blame to be attached to such conditions. But the fact remained that we were very peculiarly proportioned.

Rev. Mr. Webb spoke very thoughtfully in regard to circumstances which made it obligatory on the part of many to remain behind. In a great many cases it was a young man's duty to stay at home. One youth whom he knew, fairly itched to enlist but he must remain behind and follow the plow. Men of that calibre, similarly conditioned, were fully as much to be commended as those who took up arms and left.

Like David's Army.

Rev. Mr. Webb compared the men who stayed at home with the men in David's army who were compelled to remain at home and guard supplies, record of which is given in Samuel 20:24th. They should share and share alike in the matter of honor and reward when the battle was over.

Reverting to the organization of Peterborough's home guard he gave it great praise. Yet he believed there must be hundreds of young men in their twenties who were not connected with it when he was informed that the average age of the present members was thirty-four.

"There is a great deal of good natured chaff over this home guard," he said. "Some people call us the awkward squad, but while it may be somewhat humorous, there is something intensely serious about it. There are hundreds of these men who realize that the greatest of earth's nations has been insulted and these men find it exceedingly hard to believe the poet's famous words "they also serve who only stand and wait."

"You who have thought this matter out," said Mr. Webb, "know to your own satisfaction where your duty lies. If you have decided, then let the benediction of God rest upon your head."

Not Folly and Uselessness.

He scored severely the remark heard on the street about the folly and uselessness of the home guard. People were saying that certain emergencies could never happen. On the contrary we were living in an age when anything could happen. Who would have dreamed a year when every one was preparing for Christmas that one year later the whole world would be deep in the throes of the greatest struggle known to history. Suppose the news was flashed over the wire that 150,000 men were under discipline in Canada ready for service, might it not have a magnificently demoralizing effect upon Germany as the struggle developed.

The Patriotic Fund.

He closed his stirring address with an appeal on behalf of the whirlwind financial campaign to be conducted this week in aid of the patriotic fund. It was the duty of every citizen who was able, to help keep back the assaults of poverty from the doors of those who might be in want as the result of the war and the removal of the breadwinner.

Too Much Expense.

"Yes," said Mr. Tyte-Phist, "I was just stepping on the car when the conductor gave the motorman the signal to go ahead, and the car started. "My foot went out from under me, and I sat down on the muddy crossing, ruining a twenty-two dollar suit of clothes."

"Then you sat there, swore like a trooper and gnashed your teeth in rage, I suppose," remarked the sympathizing listener.

"No," said Mr. Tyte-Phist. "I may have sworn a little, but I didn't do any gnashing. My teeth are new and cost me $30."

BURDENED BY HIS YOUTH

I. B. Lucas Cannot Down His Boyish Appearance

Not so many years ago his friends called him the "boy statesman," and at one stage they had hopes of calling him the "boy Premier." Youth alone does not make a boy, for when a person gets down to years, the Hon. I. B. Lucas is working pretty well up the slope towards the half-mile mark. Yet anyone who saw him across a room would be quite willing to knock fifteen years off his forty-seven and would be able to understand how he earns his pet name. His friends called the Hon. Mr. Lucas the "boy statesman" because there are two sides to the man, and the two words fit the two sides better than any other combination from the English language. In other words, when he isn't so busy that he has to be a statesman, he can be as youthful and as good company as the youngest.

Naturally, a person does not look for anything like camaraderie in a member of the Ontario Cabinet, much less from one who has upon his shoulders all the worry of making financial ends meet once a year, but down in the Hon. Mr. Lucas' heart there is that fellowship and instinct of youth which makes him go about with a smiling face even when great questions are wavering in the balance. There is a tinge of grey playing about in his hair and it is that which helps him in the serious role of statesman, when he settles down to that duty as he has been forced to do for the past few years.

Perhaps the personal following of the Hon. Mr. Lucas is the largest of any member of the Cabinet, which may be partly due to the fact that he is the youngest member of the Ministry and all have had a fatherly eye upon him. While he has been in the political game long enough to have had all his rough edges polished and his manner smoothed, he has but two years of Cabinet history behind him. His career in the general Legislature dates back to 1898, when Centre Grey first declared they wanted him as a favorite son. So far as elections go, it has been pretty soft for him ever since, but he had to wait until 1909 before Sir James Whitney tested him out by making him a Minister without portfolio. Then Hon. A. J. Matheson was taken ill, and Mr. Lucas got further fire baptism by bringing down the annual budget. He did that for two yeras, and the success which attended that experiment was sufficiently marked to warrant the Premier calling upon him to fill the chair of the Provincial Treasurer last year. Perhaps his Irish upbringing may have accounted for his later success. At any rate, his parents of Irish ancestry let the Hon. Mr. Lucas see something of farm life before sending him to the University of Toronto. The end of his school education found him a member of a law firm in Owen Sound and Markdale, his home town, to which business his interests were devoted until Cabinet honors took up his whole time.

One of the strong cards of Mr. Lucas is his ability upon the public platform, or the floor of the Legislature. In this capacity again the man has two sides. He can hit with Irish relish, if the occasion demands it, but he affords far more interest to the House when he hits with Irish humor. Some call him the prize "josher" of the Conservative party, and at any rate it is a fact that he can hit harder and leave less of a personal sting behind than can any other member on the Government benches.—Star Weekly.

GERMANS OFFICIALLY CLAIM TO HAVE OCCUPIED LODZ

Attempt to Pierce Russian Centre Having Failed Von Hindenberg's Army is, Now Engaged in an Effort to Envelop the Slav Flanks---Russians Have Taken Rzgow From Enemy.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—According to a wireless despatch from Berlin early this morning, an official announcement has been made by the main headquarters of the army that the Germans occupied Lodz in Poland on Sunday. No word has been received from Petrograd confirming the reported German success.

In the absence of any official contradiction of the German claim, the statement from Berlin is being accepted as a fact here.

The Germans, if the statement be finally verified, paid the price, for it is estimated that the Germans lost in this battle close to 200,000 in killed, wounded and missing.

Information of a reliable character regarding the developments in the battle around Lodz is lacking, owing to delays in transmission of messages because of the storms which have interrupted communication. But it is known that as late as last Thursday the Germans, having failed to pierce the Russian centre, had commenced, with the aid of considerable reinforcements, another attempt to envelop the Russians on both flanks.

In this effort the fighting developed strongly at Ilovo, to the north of Lodz, and at Piotrkov, to the south of the city now reported fallen. Both these positions are much in advance of those just previously reported to have been held by the Germans, and their presence there indicated a rapid advance, threatening Lodz even at that time.

Advices from Petrograd say the town of Rzgow, seven miles south of Lodz, now immortalized by a Russian victory, which for the time has cleared the approach to Lodz from south heights. Rzgow dominates all the locality south of Lodz. Thence the enemy's batteries could command the entire causeway from Lodz to Pabjunice, and the Germans would have threatened Lodz from the north and south and seriously embarrassed Russian operations.

The Siberians did not permit the Germans even to entrench strongly on the occupied hills. They had marched sixty miles, yet begged their commander to allow them to storm the heights the same night. Touched by the heroic spirit of his regiments he sent the tireless Siberians at the enemy, with his blessing.

The Russians approached the hill whereon the Germans were posted, the assault being unexpected, but the enemy speedily recovered, and repulsed the first attacks. Then the Germans attempted to assume the offensive, but were hurled from the summit, strewing the slopes with dead bodies, and retired on Rzgow trenches.

The following bulletin has been issued by the Russian War Office:—

"Nine combats continue to rage on the Lowicz front, notably in the Lodz region, and routes from the west toward Piotrkow. Fire from our machine guns and our artillery caused great loss to the enemy.

"There has been no essential modification of the situation on the remainder of the front.

"The strength of the German forces opposing the Russian left wing is estimated at five corps, occupying a front from eight to ten miles in extent.

"There are indications that, owing to exhaustion of the troops composing the German centre, most of those regiments, which lost a large percentage of their fighting strength, have been withdrawn, or are resting on their arms, and fresher troops are holding the line during a temporory cessation in the battle.

"Despatches from the front attribute the chief cause of the Russian success in thrashing the German forces near Lodz to almost miraculous endurance and tireless aggression of the Siberian troops."

The capture of one of the advanced positions at Przemysl is regarded as conferring a valuable advantage to the Russians in their attack on the fortress. Leaving this city to the attentions of the besieging armies, the Russians are pushing in small bodies steadily across the plains of Hungary, and fugitives are said to be pouring toward Budapest.

OSLER RESIGNS

Sir Edmund Gives up Place on Varsity Board

TORONTO, Dec. 7. — In order to "meet the needs of the university and the students," it is understood that Dr. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, is endeavoring to exchange with universities in the United States, the services of Profs. Mueller and Benzinger and Herr Tapper, the Germans who were given leave of absence by the board of governors on Friday, for other professors.

The leave of absence extended to the professors extends to July next, or to the end of the college term. It is thought by the president that the students who are studying the courses in which German professors taught should not be curtailed in their academic standing, and with this end in view professors from other colleges will be secured if possible, to take the places of those who will not teach here during the term.

Sir Edmund Osler stated last night that he had resigned from the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto. This information was given in reply to a question as to whether or not further protest would be made against the three German professors.

THIRD OF ARMY GONE.

Montenegrins Have Suffered Heavily Thus Far in War.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 7.—(Via London.)—King Nicholas of Montenegro has telegraphed The Bourse Gazette that a third of his army has fallen on the battlefield.

"Nevertheless," King Nicholas adds in his message, "Montenegrins will continue to defend their country and deliver attacks on the enemy's territory. Their means are exhausted, and they will be most grateful for assistance either in money or supplies."

The war strength of the Montenegrins army is estimated at approximately 50,000 men.

A despatch from Berlin on Dec. 4 stated that, according to an unofficial announcement made there, a number of transports escorted by British and French warships had reached Antivari, the sole seaport of Montenegro. The assumption was that these transports carried troops who would assist the Montenegrins in their campaign.

ALLIES ADVANCE IN FLANDERS AND ALSACE IS PROGRESSING

March of Franco-British Forces in North Has Met With Opposition at Weidenbrest, But Have Crossed Yser Canal---Two Armies in Alsace-Lorraine Are Forging Ahead Rapidly.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The end of another week finds further substantial progress recorded for the allied troops in Flanders, though their advance appears to have been checked for the present at Weidenbrest, on the outskirts of Langemarck to the northwest of Ypres. According to the French report, part of Weidenbrest still remains in their hands, while the Germans assert the French attacks were repulsed, which is taken to refer to the maintenance of German resistance at this point.

Between Dixmude and Ypres the French have also established a footing on the east side of the Yser canal at the point fiercely contested for the last month. The subborn and persistent defence of the Germans at this point is illustrated by the statement that the visible results of this advance was the capture of the ferryman's lodge.

Some advantages are claimed by the Germans in the neighborhood of their strong position at La Bassee, where they have lately been hard pressed. Toward Arras the French have held the ground won by them in spite of the resolute bombard by the German heavy artillery.

The following official communication was given out in Paris Sunday afternoon:—

"In Belgium, on Dec. 5, not far from the Hasseur house, the capture of which was reported Saturday (referred to as that of a ferryman on the canal between Dixmude and Ypres), our heavy artillery destroyed a German field fort. The enemy made a vain attempt to recapture Weidendreft.

"On the rest of the northern front there has been an absolute calm.

"It was calm also in the region of the Aisne.

"In the Champagne district our very active artillery successfully counteracted the batteries of the adversary.

"In the Argonne, in the war, the sapper was pursued. We continued to progress slowly, repulsing all the enemy's attacks.

"Slight progress was likewise made in the region southeast of Varennes. The German artillery there has been silenced.

"On the remainder of the front there is no notable occurrence to report."

An official communication issued last night said:—

"The same activity prevailed yesterday as the day before. We have consolidated our position to the north of the house of the ferryman, on the canal, between Dixmude and Ypres, which was captured Dec. 4."

It is reported in London that the German people are becoming alarmed over the apparent inability of the Emperor's troops to check the invasion of the empire in East Prussia, in Alsace and in Lorraine.

Since an "invading army that ceases to invade and takes up the defensive" loses its quality of being formidable, so much more does the country whence the invaders came lose cast when it, in turn, is invaded. That is the reasoning employed here by those most conversant with military affairs and, it is believed, the same logic must have struck home even through the Germans' own self-confidence.

Two huge French forces are marching forward victoriously, one pursuing its way northward toward Metz, in Lorraine, while the other is pushing toward the Rhine by way of Altkirch, where the French and Germans, it was reported Saturday, had engaged in a severe struggle that did not stop the French forward movement.

Germany is said to have relinquished all attempts of an aggressive campaign in the west.

In preparation for the battle, the right wing of the army of France has been doubled in strength, and south of Metz an attempt is being made to cut off all communication of the Germans between Metz and St. Mihiel, while later an endeavor will be made to launch an attack on the fortress of Metz itself.

The French in Alsace are making a drive eastward in an attempt to secure control of the Rhine and Rhine Canal, which offers an open road to Strassburg and then to push toward the Rhine, probably in the neighborhood of Breisach.

A new aggressive movement in the direction of Roulers, which stronghold serves as one of the bases of German operations in Belgium, has been organized by the allies, aided in considerable measure by their capture of important positions east of the River Yser.

Toward the east of the great battle front there is a continued recrudescence of the hard fighting. It is evident the struggle is very severe in the trenches in this forest country, and that they have repulsed all counter attacks in Alsace. The renewed importance of the fighting in the region of Muhlhausen is indicated by the German statement that their troops are progressing to the west of Altkirch, though it does not point to any substantial gain, while the French report there is nothing important in either Alsace or Lorraine.

HEAD OF C.P.R. REPLIES TO BOARD OF TRADE LETTER

A diplomatically worded reply has been received by Mr. B. D. Hall, president of the Board of Trade, from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, in response to the latter organization's enquiry about passenger train reduction of service through Peterborough.

Sir Thomas says:—

Dear Sir, With the enormous shrinkage in our traffic, we are naturally compelled to economize in our train service. Since the receipt of your letter, I have asked for a report about the passenger train service that Peterborough will have under the new time-bill, and I find that you will have four trains a day to and from Toronto, and one train in each direction between Peterborough and Port McNicholl, then a mixed train will be run in each direction to permit of the early morning delivery in Toronto and Peterborough of freight loaded the evening before, as well as to take care of local passenger business.

The company has a very keen appreciation of the considerate treatment always received at the hands of Peterborough, and would not willingly do anything that might cause injury to the city.

Yours truly,
J. G. SHAUGHNESSY,
President.

STATUS FIXED LAST YEAR

Italy Then Refused to Aid Allies Against Servia

ROME, Dec. 7.—The Italian Chamber Saturday passed a vote of confidence in the Government 423 to 49.

Admiral Bettolo, ex-Minister of Marine, presented the resolution calling for a vote of confidence in the Cabinet. The admiral said he approved of the reasons of neutrality as given by Premier Salandra.

The majority of those who spoke in the Chamber, especially the Extreme Left, tried to construe according to their own views of the statement made by Premier Salandra at the opening of Parliament on Thursday. The Premier at that time advised that Italy maintain an attitude of armed and watchful neutrality. Some of the speakers at Saturday's session urged the Government to make more explicit declarations, while others attacked the Cabinet because, they said, notwithstanding her military expenses, Italy was obliged to remain neutral owing to her military unpreparedness.

Former Premier Giolitti showed that in August, 1913, during the Balkan war Germany and Austria, especially the latter, planned an invasion of Servia. Austria and Germany justified the proposed move by declaring it was a purely defensive step. Italy then formally notified these two powers that she considered herself relieved of the obligations of the Triple Alliance.

The former Premier was interrupted at this point by great applause. He concluded his address by urging the maintenance of neutrality until the necessity should arise to protect Italy's rights. Until then, he said, there should be loyal observance of neutrality, which alone can give, in any moment, complete liberty of judgment and action.

DECORATIONS AWARDED

King of Belgium and French Are Honored

LONDON, Dec. 7. — King George has returned from France, where he visited the British forces at the front. The King arrived at Buckingham Palace Saturday night, after coming from Boulogne to Dover in a torpedo boat.

According to a Flanders despatch, his Majesty decorated King Albert of Belgium with the Order of the Garter after reviewing the Belgian troops.

During his visit in France, King George conferred the Order of Merit on Sir John French, commander of the British forces on the continent.

The Victoria Cross has bestowed upon Private George Wilson, 2nd Battalion Highland Light Infantry, for "most conspicuous gallantry in attacking a hostile machine-gun."

Ostend In Flames.

LONDON, Dec. 7. — A despatch to The Daily Chronicle from Dunkirk says:—

"Ostend is reported to be on fire. It is believed the conflagration was caused either by a British bombardment or German incendaries."

FUGITIVE INDIAN SHOT.

Second of Slayers of Turnkey Coxford Dies From Bullet Wound.

PEMBROKE, Dec. 7. — Anthony Jocko, one of the Indian slayers of Turnkey Robert Coxford in the jail here a week ago last night, yesterday paid with his life the penalty of his crime. Jocko was Saturday surrounded by a posse in the home of a half-breed named Chalbut, about 20 miles from the Golden Lake reserve.

The Indian left the house in the morning and endeavored to escape. He was called on to halt, but continued to run. Several shots were fired at him, one of them striking him in the foot. He continued to press on, but another bullet struck him in the groin, the bullet passing through his abdomen. He died early yesterday.

Messrs. Eno and Wade, of Killaloe, and Ruddy brothers of Round Lake, composed the posse which shot the Indian down.

Peter White Duck, the other Indian concerned in the slaying of the turnkey, was captured Tuesday last, and is in the jail here awaiting preliminary hearing.

A Quaint Old Clipping.

From an old scrapbook, under the date of Oct. 25, 1791, is the following:

A young Fellow, of the City of Bristol, being in London lately, was, out of Curiosity, led to see the Lunatics at Bedlam. His first Approach was to the Cell of a poor Man, to whom he addressed himself thus—"So ho! what brings thee here?" The miserable Object remaining silent, he repeated his Question, and was answered only by a Languishing Look, which so enraged the Visitant, that he immediately spit in the Man's Face through the Grate. This caused the Lunatic gently to wipe his Face wit a Whisp of Straw, and raising his drooping Head, he made this calm, sage and sensible Reply—"I am here, Sir, because God deprived me of that Blessing which you never enjoyed."

HAS CROSSES AND HELMETS

Rev. G. L. Starr Returns to Kingston From the Front

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Among the passengers on the American line steamer St. Paul, which arrived here yesterday from Liverpool, was Rev. G. L. Starr, Dean of Ontario, and rector of the cathedral at Kingston, who, with the rank of major, has, since Aug. 7, been a chaplain in the British army. He would not discuss his experiences in the war, but he had no hesitatancy in exhibiting a half-trunk full of German helmets and Iron Crosses, which he picked up on the different battlefields on which he saw service.

One of the dean's souvenirs was an Iron Cross of the first class, whose date showed it to have been awarded for the valor of its wearer in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870.

The chaplain was assigned to the Irish Guards and attached to the 37th Brigade. He said the Irish Guards, as well as the Coldstream and Grenadier Guards, suffered severely in the beginning of the war.

AUSTRALIA MISSING?

German Official Press Bureau Says Battle Cruiser Cannot Be Found.

LONDON, Dec. 7. — Information given out to the press yesterday by the German Official Press Bureau says that, according to a report received by the Italian newspaper, Corriere Della Sera, the Australian battle cruiser Australian apparently is missing.

The Australia was last reported in Hawaiian waters last September, when a merchant ship picked up a wireless message from the Dreadnought saying that she was in full chase of the German cruiser Nurnberg. There is no report in London as to her being missing or having sustained a mishap.

German Had Plans of Bases.

ROME, Dec. 7.—A German, named Steiner, bearing an American passport, has been arrested at Gibraltar aboard the steamer Duca D'Aosta, bound from New York for Naples, as a spy. The British authorities at Gibraltar say they found in Steiner's possession, detailed information regarding the British naval bases in the Atlantic.

Flies' Eggs.

Eggs of flies are so small that you must use a microscope in order to see their real peculiarities. Each female fly lays on the average of 150 eggs. For her cradle she selects a heap of garbage or refuse. The eggs hatch into minute maggots. In five days the maggots turn into little chrysalids, or pupae, shaped like miniature beans. Within another five days these give birth to flies, which develop with amazing rapidity into adult insects, and then the mischief begins.

Goethe.

Besides his five or six consummate works, which by universal consent are practically above criticism, it may be said that Goethe's songs are the best in the world. He is the greatest of all literary critics, and in subtle and abundant observation of human life and in the number and value of his wise remarks and pregnant sentences he is one of the greatest writers of all time. Goethe may be classed as one of the "greatest men."

Had Her Reasons.

When the sewing machine was much newer than it is today a blithe and brisk sewing machine agent drove up to a prosperous looking farmhouse and soon had the lady of the house much interested.

"I would like to buy it," she said, "but you must first see my husband."

"Where is he?"

"Over by the stable."

The agent looked out and saw a colored man at work.

"What!" he said. "Are you married to a colored man?"

"Yes," she replied. "You will understand how that happened when I tell you that my first husband was a sewing machine agent."

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

SIX Y.M.C.A. SERVICE MEN WITH FIRST CONTINGENT

Notable Work has been Done By the Association in Connection with the Canadian Overseas Forces.

The excellent work which the Young Men's Christian Association has been enabled to do for the Canadian soldiers in the summer camps during the past forty-three years, has been an inspiration and an example to the association leaders in other countries, so that now this phase of work is made a prominent feature, not only in Canada and the United States but in Europe, Asia and Africa.

Hundreds of men were enlisted and thousands of dollars were invested in the work done by the Y.M.C.A. in the United States during the Spanish-American War. American secretaries went with the Japanese troops into Manchuria, the Emperor of Japan giving $5,000 personally to the support of the work, and T. F. Best and Dr. Barrie were sent out by the Canadian associations with the Canadian contingents to South Africa during the Boer War.

The First Canadian Contingent has with it, as special service officers, six men sent out with the approval of the Minister of Militia and as the representatives of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Canada: H. A. Pearson and A. W. Forgie, of Toronto; Albert Pequegnat, of Stratford; O. D. Irwin, of Collingwood; Harry Whiteman, of Quebec, and Chris. Graham, of Amherst, N.S. These men were active in the work done by the Y.M.C.A. at Valcartier, will co-operate with the British association officials in the work on Salisbury Plains, and will go to the front with the Canadian troops to continue the work of personal service for the soldiers in whatever situation they may find themselves.

In addition to these six men, W. W. Lee, the national immigration secretary of Canada, went to act at the training base as the intermediary between the Canadian Y.M.C.A.'s and the men at the front. One particular feature of Mr. Lee's work has been the forwarding to the men at the front, letters and papers from home, and also any parcels of clothing or supplies which may be addressed to the men in his care. At present his address will be, Lieut. W. W. Lee, Y.M.C.A. Representative, Headquarters Canadian Contingent, Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plains, England. Special care should be exercised to give not only the name, but the company and regiment, to which the soldier is attached. A large quantity of such parcels, sent to men at Valcartier Camp but received too late to be given to the men before sailing, have been forwarded to England to be distributed by the Y.M.C.A. representatives.

One special service the Y.M.C.A. establishment performed at Valcartier, was that of putting an end to the practice of robbing volunteers by the storekeepers who established themselves there. These gentry, most of whom seem to have been descendants of the impenitent thief, charged exorbitant prices for ordinary refreshments and little articles like lead pencils. The Y.M.C.A., to fight this sort of thing, opened booths with articles at moderate prices. The commercial camp followers were so incensed that they appealed to the authorities to have this branch of Y.M.C.A. activity suppressed. They were hoisted with their own petard. Having brought themselves to the attention of the Government, the outcome was that the authorities undertook the regulation of prices, and the practice of robbing soldiers ceased.

France's beet sugar business has gone all to pieces, but, take it from us, the Beet Germany industry is flourishing.

Good Christmas For Allies.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—(Via Northeastern France.)—"We shall have a Christmas present worth while for our people, if things go well," is the remark recently attributed to Gen. Joffre, of the French army and field commander of the allied forces.

From this remark of Gen. Joffre, it is commonly supposed that the allies have some movement of importance planned whereby they expect to come out victorious by Christmastide, or else that the general anticipates a decisive victory to be won by that time along the lines already mapped out.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

It is reported that the Italian War Office intends to buy 20 flying boats, and it is probable that they will be built in New York.

A Minsk correspondent says that an endless stream of Austrian and German prisoners is passing through that city on the way to the interior of Russia. The number Saturday alone was 86 officers and 5.014 soldiers.

Dr. F. S. Pearson, president of the Mexican Tramways Co., has received a cable from his representative stating that the entire property has been confiscated by the political factions now in control of the city government.

After an illness of some weeks, the death of Mother Mary Lourdes occurred at St. Joseph's Convent, Toronto, on Saturday morning, the end being somewhat unexpected though it had been known for some time that the termination would be fatal.

Mounted Police Strengthened.

Five hundred extra police have been enlisted in the west by the Government for service with the Royal Northwest Mounted Police this winter. Most of the men taken on the force are ex-members, who have voluntarily offered to serve temporarily in helping to maintain order and render assistance to the many in need during the next few months.

The large foreign element in the west, coupled with considerable unemployment in some districts, has rendered it necessary to largely increase the police force. This situation also explains why the Government has not been able to meet the desire of large numbers of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police to go to the front with the Canadian expeditionary forces. Their experience and knowledge of the thousands of foreigners now scattered throughout the west are doubly valuable at the present time. Comptroller L. K. Fortescue has gone to Regina to look after various matters in connection with the force.

Nickel on Banned List.

A far-reaching contraband of war order-in-council has been passed by the Dominion Cabinet to prevent the exportation to an enemy country any articles which would be useful during war to the enemies of Great Britain. Divested of technical terms the order-in-council means that Canada will take particular care that nothing will find its way from the Dominion to the enemies of Great Britain which would be of any assistance to them.

A number of articles are specially mentioned, such as nickel, nickel ore, woollen goods, food, explosives, horses, fodder, leather, coal, copper, petrol, aeroplanes, barbed wire, etc.

Canadian Dry Dock.

The Canadian Government is now negotiating the purchase of an additional site at Lang's Cove, at Esquimalt, B.C., for a dry dock capable of accommodating the largest ocean liners in the world, as well as the biggest dreadnoughts of to-day or tomorrow.

MR. BOWSER TRAVELS

And Finds Much to Vex Him on the Night Train

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MRS. BOWSER was in tears.

The cook was in tears.

The cat was in tears.

When Mr. Bowser reached home and saw the tearful state of affairs he was about to make a great roar, but Mrs. Bowser handed him a telegram.

It was from her mother and read that the old lady was very ill.

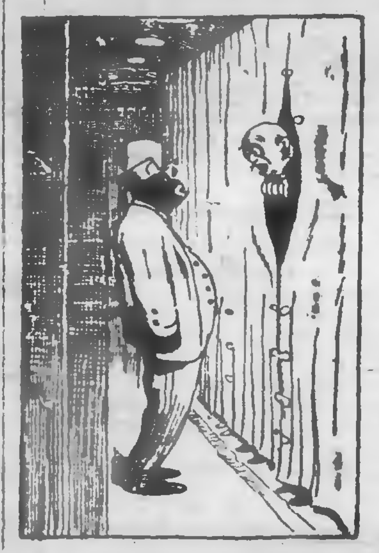
"Ain't it awful!" sobbed Mrs. Bowser.

"It surely is," replied Mr. Bowser and magnanimously added:

"She's my mother-in-law, of course, and she never visits us except to make things uncomfortable for me, but I'll forgive her. I'll not only forgive her, but as you are not feeling well I'll run up to Concord and see just how she is and cheer her up all I can. In fact, I think I'd rather enjoy the visit."

"You—you don't mean it!" gasped Mrs. Bowser in astonishment.

"Why, of course I do. Just throw a few things in the satchel for me, and I'll take the night train up. I haven't been out of town for a year, and I shall rather enjoy a short trip."



"WHAT'S HAPPENING NOW?"

"But I'm afraid you can't sleep on the sleeping car."

"I'll sleep like a top. It's all settled that I go."

A Generous Estimate of Mr. Bowser.

And two hours later Mr. Bowser was a passenger aboard the night train enjoying the feeling that a good action always brings happiness. Every berth in his sleeper was taken, and there were several children aboard. He made friends with two or three from the start, and before the train had gone fifty miles he was gratified on hearing one mother say to another:

"Now, there's a man who makes his home and his whole neighborhood happy. I don't believe that anything ever puts him out or that he has a cross word for anybody."

Mr. Bowser is in the habit of tumbling into bed, rolling on his back and falling asleep within five minutes. As soon as he strikes the bed the family cat, rats and mice walk about on tiptoe and the grocery wagons, butcher carts and fire engines never pass his house if it can be avoided. The small boy who would dare utter one "coo-ee" in front of his house after 10 o'clock at night would realize that he was taking his life in his hands. He got into his berth in the sleeper expecting the usual results to follow, but somewhat to his surprise they didn't. As is usually the case, two or three men were not yet ready to turn in, and they began discussing politics. Every word was audible from end to end of the car. For about ten minutes Mr. Bowser wondered over their impudence. For five more he was amazed at their disregard for the rights of others. Then he jumped to the conclusion that it was a personal matter, and he called the porter and said:

"This is the sleeping car. I have gone to bed to sleep. Those men must shut up or get out!"

Mr. Bowser's Ire Aroused.

"Yes, sah," replied the porter, and he went off about his business instead of delivering the message. He had been on a sleeping car long enough to know that twenty-three people had no rights in case the twenty-fourth didn't feel sleepy. The discussion continued for ten minutes. Mr. Bowser poked his head between the curtains of his berth and exclaimed:

"Are you fellows going to keep that chatter up all night? How does it happen that you didn't take the hog train?"

There was an exchange of courtesies. The language was vigorous. Mr. Bowser was derided and defied, but his dander was up, and he called the porter and conductor and insisted so strenuously on his rights that the political discussion came to an end. As a windup, however, Mr. Bowser was called a crank, a kicker and a cheese head and was advised to go off in a lonely spot by himself. There had been seven or eight minutes of comparative quiet and his eyes were closing in sleep when a man in the opposite berth began to snore, and pretty soon the snore was ornamented with a gurgle.

"That's got to stop!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he sat up and poked his head out. "Here—you over there—stop that infernal bazoo of yours! Porter, come here and wake up that fellow across the way!"

The "fellow" was roused. He got in two more snores and three long drawn groans before the dig in the ribs broke in on his slumbers. Then he indignantly demanded to know who had dared to disturb him.

"You were snoring," explained Mr. Bowser.

"Well, what of it? Is it any business of yours?"

"You bet it is! If you want to make a hog of yourself get off and take the stock train!"

More Trouble.

The quarrel lasted ten minutes, and as two-thirds of the passengers sided with Mr. Bowser, and as the snores diminished to sighs and gasps, he felt that the victory was his. This time quietness brought sleep, but sleep lasted forty winks. The wail of a child brought Mr. Bowser's eyes open; a second wail sat him up, and a third caused him to exclaim:

"Have I got to murder some one on this car before I can get an hour's sleep? Where's the mother of that young 'un that she don't stop his noise?"

"My little boy seems to be ill," replied a female voice.

"Seems to be ill? Don't you know whether he is or not? If he is sick get up and attend to him. If he's only dreaming give him a cuff and wake him up. Why the law allows a woman to gad about the country with a child I can't understand."

"And I thought he was such a nice, good natured old man!" murmured the woman as she petted the child to sleep again.

This time there was no sleep for Mr. Bowser. He was now so mad that his eyes wouldn't close, and he tumbled around and wished he was home so that he could say something to Mrs. Bowser to make her feel bad. He was ready for another fracas when the train drew up at a station. He heard people talking, baggage trucks rumbling and a man passing along and striking wheels with a hammer. At last he called to the porter, and when the man had arrived he was accosted with:

"What's happened now? What are all those people gabbing about?"

"It's people at the depot, sah," was the reply.

"Yes, but are the people at the depot allowed to whoop and chatter and scream and wake up every sleeper in the cars? Fine managed road this. What's that rumbling and banging and flashing?"

"Loadin' up the baggage."

"Oh, is it? In order to load up a few old trunks they must hustle and bang and stand everybody's hair up. I'd like to talk to the manager of this road for five minutes! And what's that dunderhead pounding on the wheel for?"

"Testin' 'em, sah."

"Well, I'd like to test him! By smoke, but the people of the United States are the biggest lot of fools on earth to put up with such impositions. I'll sue somebody tomorrow for $50,000 damages."

An Impudent Fellow Passenger.

There was yet another cause to kick. The train hadn't left the station ten miles when there was a bump on the floor of the car, followed by a yell. One of the children had fallen out of bed.

"In the name of mercy, what's that?" howled Mr. Bowser as the curtains parted again.

"Look here, old man," answered a masculine voice, "you seem worried. Why don't you shut up and go to sleep?"

"Because I've got to murder seven or eight people before I'll be allowed to go to sleep, and don't you tell me to shut up!"

The man put his head out and gazed at Mr. Bowser. Then he advised him to eat a bean mash, soak his head and hang on to his chin. Mr. Bowser replied in kind and added a threat to lick his fellow passenger if he had to pursue him around the globe to find the occasion. The whole car was in a row before the conductor could be brought in as a peacemaker, and Mr. Bowser was one of the half dozen who dressed and sat up for the next three hours and glared around him and muttered under his breath.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Mr. Bowser entered his own house and flung his satchel on the floor.

"How did you get home so soon?" asked Mrs. Bowser in alarm. "And is mother better or worse?"

"I didn't get to Concord," he replied.

"You didn't? Then is she dead? You got a telegram?"

"I got nothing. The infernal railroad undertook to bulldoze me around and deprive me of my rights, and I wouldn't stand for it. I got off at a junction and took the first train back, and I'll be hanged if I don't see a lawyer and start about 400 damage suits!"

When a man enlists he enlists to go to the front. The crown prince is an exception. He goes to the rear.

ANOTHER FALSE CLEW.

In Which the Bottom Drops Out of a Shocking Discovery.

SHE called to him softly from a nook in the conservatory.

"There is something I wish to say to you," she murmured.

"I scarcely know where to begin," she continued after a moment. "The subject of which I speak is rather—er—delicate, and I'm the last one in the world to make trouble or carry tales. But I thought you ought to know."

"I see," he said kindly. "Go on."

"I came in here five minutes ago. My head was aching, and I wanted to get away from the light and the chatter. After a little while I heard voices. I was provoked to think that I must get up, but I couldn't be an eavesdropper. So I started to leave, only I recognized the voices or at least one of them—the woman's."

"I see." He was becoming interested.

"And something that was said arrested my attention. It was all perfectly silly. But really I thought you should know. He told her she was his ducky darling, and she said she would always love him. And then they began kissing."

"There are several engaged couples here tonight," he suggested.

"But they were not engaged," she said. "The woman was— Oh, how can I tell you?"

"You must tell me," he said.

"Well, if I must, the woman was your wife. Now, please don't do anything rash. Promise me you will consider before you act."

For a moment he seemed at a loss for words. He was palpably confused.

"You see," he said apologetically, "we've only been married a week, and all that. I—I was the man you overheard with my—er—wife."—Puck.

Very Busy.

"Line's busy."

"It has been busy for some time. Why can't I get my number?"

"Oh," said the telephone girl nonchalantly, "one lady is paying another lady a telephone visit."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mutually Satisfactory.

Mrs. Crawford—So you find that the best way to manage your husband is to always ask his advice?

Mrs. Crabshaw—Yes, dear. He's pleased to have me ask him, and I'm pleased because I never follow it.—Judge.

Not Worth While.

"Shall I summon your husband's spirit from the vasty deep?"

"Wouldn't be no use to try," declared the lady with the massive chin. "My husband never had no spirit."—Kansas City Journal.

THE SPORTING WORLD

ARGONAUTS ARE THE DOMINION CHAMPIONS

Scullers Won From Varsity on Saturday by 14-2 and Secured Grey Cup for the First Time

Toronto, Dec. 7. — The Argonaut club, a branch of the famous Argonaut Rowing Club, favorably known throughout the four quarters of the globe, achieved the greatest glory on Saturday at the Stadium that any club can acquire, when after eighteen years of a varied career on the gridiron, they at last won the Canadian Rugby title and the Grey Cup which goes with it. It was a proud day for the old and seasoned members of the ancient club, more so than the young gladiators who represented their colors.

It was a fitting finale to a great and glorious season by the Scullers, and their victory was made all the greater by having played three games in seven days, a feat unparalleled in the history of sport, and one that will go down in the annals of the game as the greatest achievement wrought by any team. Two of these games were against aggregations that were fresh and eager for the struggle, and the Argos vanquished them all, and, best of all, their third match was the greatest exhibition.

Argonauts 14, Varsity 2, tells the score, while Argos' triumph on the field may be summed up thusly: Ability to secure loose balls, combined with a back division which stood head and shoulders over their opponents. On the line there was not much to choose between the opponents, and very little was gained by either side in straight line plays, although Varsity broke through on two occasions for 30- and 40-yard runs. However, these spasmodic runs, one in each half, were the only times that the Collegians showed anything against their Big Four opponents.

Argos a Great Team.

Argonauts have been said not to be a great team, but after Saturday's contest the palm must go to them as being one of the greatest aggregations that ever graced the gridiron. They, thanks to the supposed "cripples" being able to play, presented a lineup that had no flaws. Their line, which is strong, was not any stronger than Varsity around the scrimmage and middles, but the outsides, Murray and Knight, had it over their opponents. Likewise the backs were superior all around, more especially in running back punts.

THE WORLD'S BIG BANKS

Only Sixty-one Have Deposits Over a Hundred Million Dollars.

For years the mere name of the Bank of England has been a synonym for financial strength and greatness. In a list of the great banks of the world the Bank of England is sixth. There are three banks in England with a greater line of deposits. The greater banks are London City and Midland, Lloyd's bank and London County and Westminster. London City and Lloyd's each has deposits above $500,000,000. The London County has deposits of $440,000,000. The great Bank of England has a little more than $350,000,000.

The leading bank of the world, from the standpoint of deposits, is the Imperial Bank of Russia, with deposits and current accounts aggregating $630,000,000, a sum big enough to stagger the mind.

The National Bank of Argentine and the National City bank of New York are sixteen and seventeen in rank, with deposits close to $250,000,000 each. The Bank of Spain is greater than the Bank of France, much greater in deposits. But Spain cuts no figure in the finances of the world. That is hard to explain. In this world list there are only sixty-one banks mentioned with deposits in excess of $100,000,000. In this list the United States has eight banks, a good showing, as none of them depends on the deposits of the United States to help it out. — Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

O.H.A. GAMES TO BE PLAYED IN THREE TWENTY MINUTE PERIODS

The annual meeting of the O. H. A. on Saturday adopted the amendment providing for games to be divided into three 20-minute periods instead of two 30 minute periods. Some of the delegates argued that in the smaller towns where rink accommodation is poor the games would be too long drawn out and would work a hardship on the spectators. The vote on the amendment was 26 for and 20 against.

A Success.

The conversation had turned to the many men who had met success.

"There, for instance," said one man, pointing down the street, "goes a man who began life in poverty and now lives on the fat of the land."

McFee looked. "Yes, I know him," he replied. "He's an agent for an anti-fat concern."—Judge.

Men Are Brutes, Anyway.

Two weeks after the wedding she burst into her mother's home, crying like a child. "John and I have quarreled," she explained between sobs. "What's the trouble?" inquired his mother-in-law soothingly. "Why, I—said I thought it would rain today, and the brute said, 'I don't believe it will.'" —Buff.

Philosophical.

"Dear Charles," said Mrs. Flimgilt, "used to send me alimony every month without a murmur."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "He says it's a great comfort to turn over a bunch of money to you without an argument because it isn't more."—Washington Star.

Had a System.

"I am writing my husband for money."

"And does he always send it when you write?"

"Not always the first time. But I have a series of follow up forms that never fail."—Kansas City Journal.

Her Real Complaint.

"What makes her look so dismal?"

"She says her shoes are too tight, her head aches, her supper disagrees with her and she's got the blues."

"In other words, nobody has asked her to dance."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Flattering.

"What did Jones say about my play?"

"He said he certainly felt that he'd got his money's worth."

"Huh! I sent the beggar a complimentary ticket."—Pittsburgh Press.

Queer Morality.

"I can't understand why vertical writing makes forgery easy."

"Why not?"

"Because vertical writing is nothing if not upright."—Baltimore American.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE NATIONAL SPORT.

THE game of grab and graft and plunder
 Is played by one and all
Till really, truly, it's a wonder
 The country lasts at all.
Each underling, his hopes expanded,
 Likewise his hungry hooks,
For anything that isn't landed
 By larger, stronger crooks.

Each fellow with his hand extended
 For little or for much
Can on the quiet be depended
 Upon to make a touch.
Are public funds by chance or blunder
 Left open on the shelf,
He puts his little ladder under
 And straightway helps himself.

It really is a public scandal.
 But what are we to do?
The man with public funds to handle
 Can always use a few.
Nor can the worst of them be branded
 Or called upon the mat.
If in the act he isn't landed
 He wouldn't stand for that.

But in this thought is consolation,
 A ray of hope ahead:
Twas ever thus in every nation,
 The living and the dead.
The Greek, the Roman and the Quaker
 All dabbled in the dough,
But e'er the days of the muck raker
 The public didn't know.

Why He Likes It.

"Are you fond of advice?"

"Very."

"Then let me tell you"—

"Hold on!"

"What?"

"It is my own that I am fond of."

"Do you trust yourself to take your own advice?"

"Mercy, no! I sell it."

Something Further Essential.

"He is quite rich enough to marry."

"Um! Is that all?"

"All?"

"Yes."

"Yes. Isn't that enough?"

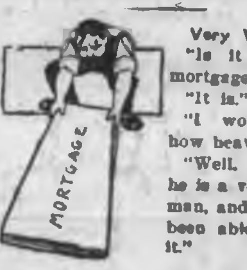
"No."

"What more would you ask?"

"That he be rich enough to divorce, if desirable."

Second Hand.

He always takes his wife's advice.
 He takes it, to be sure,
And then at once he hastens out
 And gives it to the poor.



Very Weighty.

"Is it a heavy mortgage?"

"It is."

"I wonder just how heavy it is."

"Well, they say he is a very strong man, and he hasn't been able to raise it."

HUGE SUMS FROM INDIA

Princes Have Subscribed to War Relief Funds

LONDON, Dec. 7.—(Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) — A telegram from Delhi, India, says:—

All the great native states of India have now expressed regret to the viceroy that Turkey has joined Germany in fighting Britain, under whose benign rule the Moslem has enjoyed perfect religious freedom.

All the ruling princes continue to take the keenest interest in the war. They have now subscribed about $950,000 to the Prince of Wales Relief Fund and the Indian Relief Fund and approximately $4,000,000 to the expenses of the war. This includes $2,000,000 from Nizam of Hyderabad, and $1,600,000 from the Maharaja of Mysore.

A further sum of nearly $150,000 has been given by the chiefs to provide motorcycles, telescopes and kindred equipment, and $120,000 has been given by Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, who has also presented a motor ambulance corps consisting of 41 cars for the use of the troops in Europe, and is arranging for the establishment of a convalescent home in East Africa.

YOUTHFUL MUSICIANS DELIGHTED AUDIENCE

Clever Work by Members of Childrens' Orchestra in Concert at Conservatory

No more convincing argument in favor of early musical tuition for children could have been presented that the sight of a stage filled with youngsters, few in years over twelve, giving a concert at the Conservatory auditorium on Saturday night. In every sense it was a remarkable revelation of juvenile ability and talent and without any exaggeration the performers profoundly impressed an audience that nearly filled the hall. Conspicuous in the gathering were large numbers of parents who came to see and hear their children play. This they did without any of the self consciousness of stage fright that sometimes afflicts older artists.

Difficult selections from standard composers in both popular and classic realms were accurately and skilfully interpreted. All the little ones did well but perhaps the honors fell to little Agnes Logan and Isabel Baird. When seated before the piano their feet failed by several inches to touch the floor their very diminutiveness making them instantly popular. They player remarkably well and both had to respond to encores each time concluding with a graceful little bow that won the hearts of all. Their clever manipulation of the instrument for pupils so youthful bespoke great credit for their instructors.

A popular number was "Tipperary" contributed by five boys on different instruments. The audience insisted they come back and repeat the number which they did in manly fashion marching on and off the platform to their music. The orchestral selections were exceedingly praiseworthy and were distinguishable for precision and expression especially in the more intricate numbers like "Incline Thine Ear to Me," and the "Slumber Song." Mr. Gliddon conduced the orchestra.

Selections on the violin, cornet and clarionet were also given by Harold Porter, Kenneth Lang, Paul and Otto Gliddon. Kathleen O'Connell in a piano number received a hearty applause, as did also Helen Thompson.

The little ones receive instructions from the following teachers of the Conservatory staff: Miss Dean, Miss Killmaster, Miss McKee, Miss Elcome, Miss Chiles, Miss Sullivan, Miss Smith, Miss Johnston, Miss Palmer, Miss Logan and Mr. Gliddon.

Those who took jart were:—

PETERBORO MAY BE MADE MOBILIZATION CENTRE

It is Possible That One Thousand Men, Cavalry and Artillery May be Quartered Here

The federal member and the mayor and council have been prompt and untiring in their efforts to keep Peterboro to the front in all matters pertaining to its business and welfare. It is right and fitting that the local newspapers should join in similar efforts. It is a mistake however for any journal to assume that things are not being done when they should be done. Inquiries should first be made before blame is handed out. Away back in September the Mayor and Mr. Burnham conferred on the question of having the government make Peterborough a mobilization centre if possible. Mr. Burnham then wrote to the Minister of Militia calling the latter's attention to Peterborough's advantages. Recently the chance to put in another good word for this city and district occurred and the minister some days ago replied that all these matters were being looked into. It is the invariable custom of the Militia Department in matters of routine to act through militia officers and Peterborough is no exception to the rule.

Officer Was Here.

Major Hamilton was sent here by the Minister to report on Peterborough and it is understood that his report was very favourable. The member and the Mayor and city fathers again took up the matter and are at present in communication with the department. It is not wise from any point of view let alone a military one to publish broadcast every step in a matter of this kind. It can always be taken for granted however that our representatives are doing whatever they can in the public interest.

[illegible]e is a possibility that a thousand [illegible]en, and cavalry and artillery may be quartered here.

ANCHOR ICE HERE AGAIN

Street Cars and Some Factory Hands Were Idle

The same old trouble caused by "anchor ice" resulted in citizens being put to a little inconvenience this morning. The water was shut off from early morning till noon and the employes of several factories, which operate by motor power, were forced to stand idle. The street cars were held up for a short time between eight and nine o'clock.

Fire Chief Howard stated today that at one time this morning the water pressure which is usually 65 pounds dropped to 20 pounds and in case of fire the engine would be utilized to drain the mains. The horses stood harnessed to the engine truck all morning but no alarms were sent in.

FATALLY INJURED.

Kingston, Dec. 7.—Reuben Spooner, 77, of Glenburnie, was fatally injured after his arrival in the city when the horses drawing his buggy ran away.

NEW ACTION TO RECOVER ACCOUNT

The case of Dr. McNulty vs. John O'Leary to recover $58, alleged due on an account of $158 for medical services rendered by plaintiff on the defendant's child, came up this morning at the sitting of the division court before Judge Huycke, and a jury composed of W. S. Robinson, William Shear, James Ruth, F. Rishea and S. Ridyard. Evidence was taken and the court adjourned till 2.30 this afternoon.

This case was tried a month ago and the jury disagreed.

Kaiser Summons Second Line of Landstrum

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The News in a despatch from its correspondent at Copenhagen says:—

"Germany is finding events on the east front developing far too rapidly. The General Staff considers the situation over the whole battlefield so serious that they have recommended the calling up of more men. A grand order of the Kaiser, therefore, has been posted in all the towns of Germany announcing that the second line of the Landsturm must be ready for active service on the 20th inst. This means that all men trained or untrained between the ages of 17 and 45 must serve. To allay the depression the great General Staff is doing everything to maintain hero-worship of Gen. von Hindenburg.

"The county authorities of Zarzbe, in Silesia, have unanimously resolved to change the name to the county of Hindenburg, and his consent has been obtained by wire."

The Morning Post's correspondent at Petrograd in the course of a review of the situation in Poland says:

"The German force in this second invasion of Poland is now about as strong, or stronger, than at the outset, although something like half the original numbers have been killed wounded and taken prisoners. That is to say, Russia has compelled Germany to put into the Vistula-Warta battlefields twice the number of men which the German Grand General Staff reckoned sufficient to accomplish its purpose. And that purpose is no nearer accomplishment now than it was a fortnight ago. Furthermore, the first-line troops have been twice withdrawn from the French front to make a desperate effort here, and in vain. This must have simplified matters for Russia's allies on the western front, and, in fact, we begin to hear again of trenches taken in France."

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND FROM THE COUNCIL

CIVIC PURSE WIDE OPEN

One Mill on the Dollar of Next Year's Assessment Toward Mark of $50,000 For Patriotic Purposes

The city council last evening struck the keynote for the three day patriotic fund campaign by adopting a resolution to donate $10,000 to the fund. The task took two hours of heavy bombardment of the city's money guardians by a deputation which overflowed the council chamber and even filled to capacity the corridors and halls adjoining the entrance. It was the last regular meeting of the council of ten and they truly hung up a record that will be heralded from coast to coast and will be handed down to succeeding councils as an example of true Canadian patriotism which broadens and expands on the occasion of the Mother Country facing trials and tribulations.

The deputation was mighty and embraced some of the most eloquent orators in the city. The forces in opposition stood up boldly and declared their platform which in the eyes of many seemed justified but the Mayor put all the more energy in his plea for giving with the result that the motion carried.

His Honor Judge Huycke assured the council that no legal obstacle would prevent them from making a donation as both leaders in the Provincial House have signified their intentions of passing a bill at the next session which would validate any step taken along that line by municipalities. The speaker then referred briefly to the latest book written by Bernhardi which is entitled "Britains as vassals of Germany." He claimed that in his mind the day would never come when the British or even we in Canada would be vassals to Germany. Here Judge Huycke's remarks were interrupted by a prolonged outburst of applause. He reminded his listeners that many of them could not keep Germany in check. That must be done in the trenches, yet there was a manner in which we at home could assist and one of these opportunities was confronting the council of Peterboro.

Judging by the course taken by Stratford, Judge Huycke suggested that one mill on the dollar be given to the fund by the corporation. Every men who paid taxes on one thousand dollars worth of property would then have the proud privilege of paying one dollar to the fund. His closing words were not dictation but rather a suggestion urging the council to give one mill on every dollar of assessment to the fund and thus preserve the self respect and dignity of the city.

A. J. Aylmer, F. D. Kerr, A. W. Cressman and D. O'Connell also spoke. A letter was read from T. F. Matthews who was to be one of the speakers but could not owing to an out of town engagement. Mr. O'Connell reminded the council that if success was to be attained in this campaign the committee in charge must have encouragement and encouragement would mean a handsome donation from the city. In his opinion the men in charge of the campaign could not expect a spontaneous response from the citizens if the council would not grant one mill on the dollar.

Mayor in Sympathy.

Mayor Buller who was the first of the city officials to reply, informed the deputation that he was in hearty sympathy with giving the largest sum possible to such a great cause. He was willing to assist in every way and was hopeful that in event of the city making a substantial donation some of the poorer people in the city might be excused. His Worship then called on Ald. Johnston, chairman of the finance committee.

Ald. Johnston stated that the total assessment of the city was over eleven million dollars and if $5000 would be granted to the Patriotic Fund it would mean about 43|000 mills on the dollar. If one mill were granted it would mean a little over $10,000. He stated that he was in deep sympathy with the idea and was willing to move a resolution to that effect but Mayor Buller desired to secure the opinions of other members of the council.

Ald. Green did not feel that it would be right to grant $10,000 to anything in the last dying moments of the term as councillors. If in the council next year, he would most heartily agree to give one mill, but in his opinion it would be best to leave the matter over till the first meeting of the 1915 council. Ald. Duffus expressed himself in favor of a grant of $10,000, as did Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Stratton.

A French-Canadian regiment, 1,100 strong, is in training at St. John's, Quebec, under the command of Lt.-Col. Gaudet (at the top wearing forage cap), formerly in charge of the artillery at Quebec City, and Major Archambault (at bottom of picture), Inspector of Cadets for Quebec Province. The man in civilian clothes is Mr. Lorenzo Prince, managing editor of La Presse, Montreal, who is organizing secretary of the force which consists of picked men from 6000 applications. One hundred and sixty-eight of the men are from Quebec City and the rest from Montreal and the district. Their average age is 21 years and 4 months; no soldier is under 5 feet 4 inches in height, and every man is a bachelor. In addition to the 6,000 applications, Mr. Prince received 2,200 applications from French-Canadian settlers in the New England States. This regiment will form part of the second contingent, and by reason of the severe marching training and thorough practice in shooting, will be a valuable addition to the forces at the front. They were inspected a few days ago by General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. Mr. Prince states that there will be no difficulty in getting several regiments from Quebec Province similar to the one now at St. John's training barracks.

ULTIMATE INDEPENDENCE FOR THE PHILIPPINES

Fore-shadowed in President Wilson's Address to Congress United States Has Nothing to do With European War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Washington, Dec. 8. — Following the custom inaugurated by himself, President Wilson today, read his annual message to congress. He foreshadowed a legislative program covering ultimate independence for the Philippines, ratification of the London convention for safety at sea, government-owned merchant marine for charting perilous waters of Alaskan coast and measures for economy in all branches of the government. The portion of his address which commanded the keenest attention was that in which he answered those who contend United States is unprepared for national defense. If being prepared meant putting in the field a nation trained to arms, he said, the country never would be in that sense prepared in time of peace so long as she retained her present political principles and institutions.

We have always found means to defend ourselves against attack and we shall continue to find them whenever necessary without calling our people away from their necessary tasks to render compulsory military service in times of peace.

A large navy and encouragement to volunteer training were the settled policy of the country, said the president and to go beyond this would mean "we are thrown off our balance by a war with which we have nothing to do and whose causes cannot touch us."

THANKS FOR HELPING.

The thanks of the Board of Trade are extended to the merchants and the Peter Hamilton Co. for their donations toward a gift of five large bales of clothing recently forwarded for the relief of the Gelgians. Merchants gave freely of last season's goods, the ladies numbering between 100 and 150 spent two weeks in sewing at the armouries and Peter Hamilton Company made up the bales and had them forwarded. The ladies secured one particularly good bargain when they purchased a quantity of cloth worth about $125 for $25 and this the Board of Trade paid out of funds secured from subscription lists placed in the banks.

CRESSMAN STAFFS GIVE DAY'S PAY

The employes of the Cressman Co. Limited have unanimously decided to give one day's pay to the Patriotic Fund.

INSPECTION OF THE GUARDS

By Finance Minister at the Armouries This Evening

Elaborate preparations have been made to suitably impress Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, who arrived in the city today, with Peterborough's splendid home guard. Plans for his inspection of the guard and his address in the Grand Opera House tonight were settld early today and no hitch can very well occur. Sharp at 7 o'clock the home guard will fall in by companies at the armouries, where the Finance Minister accompanied by Lieut. Colonel J. E. L. Goodwill and staff will inspect them. The party will then take their places in waiting automobiles and ride down George Street, and take up a position at the corner of Hunter and George Streets where a good view of the march past of the guard will be obtained. Here thhe formal salute will take place as the guard pass down to main street to the Grand Opera House. One half of the guard will be directed to occupy the theatre and the second half to the market hall. It is arranged that the march past will take place about 7.45.

The patriotic committee have arranged to have the platform occupied by all the leading men of the city identified with the patriotic campaign committee and the home guard. It is expected that over 150 will have places there including Mayor Buller and the council, local clergy, school board representatives, both public and separate, representatives of the county and the captains and teams of the war fund campaign.

Lieut. Colonel Goodwill and his staff are expected to be present in full strength.

READY FOR THE CURTAIN

Arrangements are Completed for the Public Meeting Tonight

SPEAKERS ARE HERE

There was satisfaction this morning at the committee rooms of the Patriotic Fund at the magnificent grant made by the City Council last evening. The Council rose to the occasion. True, there were differences, not as to the necessity and desirability of voting the amount, but as to a matter of procedure. Those of the members who suggested leaving the final decision to the Council of next year were quite right. But this is a national emergency. The Council took the responsibility of meeting the expressed wishes of a very large and important delegation. It is for that delegation, their friends and all supporters of the Fund to stand behind the Council as a whole in support of the action. Anyway, it heartens up the Fund and the movement. It speaks of success, and that is what we are working for.

A few citizens are holding to the opinion, and so expressing it, that the entire appropriation should be a matter of taxes. That there should be no subscriptions. In fact, several say that on such a basis they would have the matter done, and that way only. While many agree, here are serious difficulties. On an assessment of, say, ten millions, raising $50,000 would make a rate of five mills on the dollar. That would throw on the owner of the smaller properties and tenants of the smaller houses a very serious burden for one year. Assuming that the large property owner whose interests are more important should pay more in proportion, he should really carry more of the burden than comprised in the five mills, and the poorer man less. All plans are worthy of discussion, as long as they are not made excuses for not giving.

Final arrangements have been made for the big meeting tonight. The speakers of the evening are in the city, Rev. Father Minehan reaching the city during the morning and was met at the station by Mr. Kerr, Mr. Duffus and Mr. O'Connell. He will be the guest of Bishop O'Brien while in the city. Colonel Ponton is the guest of Mr. Jamieson of the Collegiate Institute staff, and was met by Colonel Stevenson, Major Walker and Mr. J. L. Goodwill. Hon. W. T. White is the guest of Mr. J. H. Burnbam, M. P., Mrs. White being entertained by local ladies.

When first announced, it was stated that the Market Hall would be available for the overflow meeting and that it would be heated but not seated. That difficulty has been overcome, and seats will be provided for all. It will be quite as comfortable as the opera house, and the speakers who address the meeting in the opera house will also speak in the market hall. One half of the home guard will be at the opera house, and the other half at the market hall.

The home guard did not attain all that they hoped for at the meeting of the Council, but it secured a slice to go on with. The outcome was rather better than expected when it was found that the large grant had been made to the Patriotic Fund. The men of the guard are in earnest, and they know that if never a gun is fired on the field by the men that the moral and physical benefits will well repay for time and expenditure. We all interest ourselves in different activities, and at times wonder what the other fellow sees to his delight in hens, postage stamps and antiques. It is a diversity of interests that counts. The hundreds in the guard will get a setting up that will make them feel better, and best of all realize what the responsibilities resting upon the country really mean. When that is fully realized there will be needed little urging to make sacrifices.

Last call for the three days' campaign. Muster at the rooms early on Wednesday morning.

Attended Conference

J. J. Hartley has returned from Brantford, where be attended the Ontario conference of the Bricklayers, Masons, Plasterers, International Union of America. The attendance was the largest on record and the conference proved the most successful ever held. Mr. Hartley was a delegate from the local union No. 17. Officers elected were: President, T. McClowde, Toronto; vice-presidents, A. Fowler, Kingston; W. W. Beavens, Windsor; Geo. Greenlaw, St. Catharines; secretary-treasurer, W. Burmage, Toronto. The next conference will be held at Windsor, Ont.

GERMANS ARE MORE ACTIVE

Allied Artillery is Successful in Region of the Yser and About Ypres

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 8. — Increased activity on the part of the Germans in Belgium was reported in the official statement given out this afternoon. The statement is as follows: "

"During the day of the seventh, the enemy has been more active than the day before in the region of the Yser and in the neighborhood of Ypres.

"Our artillery has answered back with success."

GERMAN CASUALTIES AROUND LODZ, ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

PETROGRAD, Dec. 8. — The Bourse Gazette estimates the German casualties in the fighting around Lodz at one hundred thousand, and says the percentage of loss is particularly high among commanding and commissioned officers. Even colonels, and occasionally generals, it says, remained on the firing line until they were able to escape only by means of motor cycles. According to wounded German officers in the prison camp at Bielostok, a number of Turkish officers are serving in the German army in Poland.

VICTORY ONLY IF RETREAT OF RUSSIANS IS FOLLOWED UP

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8. — The Berliner Tageblatt, commenting on the capture of Lodz, considers it can be called a positive victory only if the Russian retreat is followed up by German pursuit. If such pursuit prove victorious, the German centre will be strong enough to act forcibly against the northern and southern parts of a broken Russian army.

LONDON, Dec. 8. — A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says that Berlin claims the Germans captured over one hundred thousand prisoners at Lodz and there is great rejoicing in the German capital.

MORE TROUBLE WITH THE ICE

Householders Advised to Get Supply of Water

Householders were again caused considerable inconvenience this morning by reason of the water supply being cut off. Anchor ice forming round the power station was resnopsible, the same trouble as occurred yesterday morning. It not only affected the water works plant, but all the other power stations along the river.

About 12.30 p.m. the trouble was overcome and the supply was again restored. Needless to state, the stoppage proved very vexations to a large number who were put to various extremities to find water to perform their morning ablutions.

The Review was asked to warn the public they would be wise to have a certain amount of water drawn off for emergency purposes in case of a repetition of the trouble from day to day.

APPLICATION REFUSED.

The efforts of James Hoolihan to secure an application blank from License Inspector Joseph Stewart for the transference of the King George Hotel license from Dennis Corkery, the present owner, to him (Hoolihan) have been unsuccessful, owing to the fact that according to Section 20, Sub-Sections 2, 3 and 4, of the Liquor License Act, the board could not allow the transferrence.

French court procedure has all the wild strenuosity of a football game.

ATLANTIC IS STORM SWEPT

Coast Suffers From Most Destructive Gale in Years

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Huge seas, backed by a mighty tide and a howling northeast gale, battered the coasts of New York yesterday, smashing houses, wrecking boats, flooding villages, devastating summer resorts, and forcing transatlantic and coastwise steamers to remain outside Sandy Hook and fight the storm.

At Sandy Hook the wind attained a velocity of 68 miles an hour, driving in a record-breaking tide and making it impossible for pilots to board incoming vessels. In New York harbor the tide was the highest in 13 years and the waves drove the New Jersey ferryboats to cover and strewed the shore of Staten Island with the wrecks of scores of small craft. In New York city the wind blew at 48 miles an hour, diminishing to 26 miles last night, with a forecast of a shift in the gale, attended by more rain or snow.

The worst damage in this vicinity was suffered at Coney Island, where the loss within the past 24 hours is estimated at $200,000. Two or three fine houses at Sea Gate were wrecked, despite the fight of a small army of workmen to build defences with hundreds of sandbags. The waves threw them aside, rolled in and tore the houses apart. Fifteen buildings along Coney Island had been damaged last night, including big bathing pavilions and summer cottages.

At Brighton Beach the boardwalk was demolished, and the waves surged around the Brighton Beach Hotel and wrecked many small buildings near it.

TEMPLE BAND.

The Temple Band of the Salvation Army will be inspected together with the one battalion of the Home Guard tonight at 7 o'clock, by Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, and will afterward march one of the battalion to either the Opera House or market building.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1914

THE TORONTO UNIVERSITY CASE.

THERE SEEMS to have been more trouble than necessary over the professors of German birth on the staff of the University of Toronto. Queen's University settled the matter in one meeting of its Senate by simply requesting any of its German professors to become naturalized British citizens or resign. There was no great outcry, and one, refusing to become naturalized, resigned. That ended the matter.

The University of Toronto has seen fit to sidle around the question rather than tackle it. There was more cause for action in Toronto than in Kingston, for a number of German professors there went so far as to protest to the Board of Education of Toronto against the presentation of the British case in the schools.

Surely there should be no ground for equivocation in this matter. The people of this province will not tolerate alien enemies on the teaching staff of their largest university. The men involved may be efficient in their way, and difficult to replace, but war is no respecter of persons. The war was not of Britain's making, but war there is, and Canada is in it, and it is only a matter of ordinary loyalty and safety that the youth attending the University of Toronto should not have as teachers men who not only refuse to become naturalized, thereby maintaining allegiance to our greatest enemy, but who had the boldness to protest against the presentation of the British cause in the schools of the land. There are a number of students from Peterborough attending the University of Toronto, and we are sure their parents would not care to see them instructed by men who are confessedly opposed to British interests and who favour the break-up of the British Empire. We know a professor can do a great deal of harm, by inuendo and by his position as a professor, to the opinions and loyalty of those under his tutelage. It is certainly not pleasing to the people of the province who are called upon to support Toronto University by such large grants, that this matter has been handled with so much unnecessary equivocation. When it was left to the Board of Governors of the University, a final solution was expected, but now it appears that the President, of all men, is opposed to acting as a loyal citizen! The case is one that does not permit a compromise, and President Falconer, if he dislikes to act rigorously, should be told roundly that the people look to him. The Toronto World says editorially of President Falconer's attitude:

> "President Falconer has been jockeyed into the position of assuming the responsibility of refusing to dismiss these alien enemies, but it is clear that a number of the governors are hiding behind his authority. It is to be regretted that Dr. Falconer did not act a more patriotic part. A contemporary states that he threatened to resign if the three alien enemies were not retained, but in view of his own refusal to discuss the situation this must surely be taken with a grain of salt. The public will still hope that the president of the university has still backbone. As it is, he is forced into a most unenviable position as the one unpatriotic university president in the Empire."

Either these men should be retained as active professors or allowed to go. Ontario does not want to pay a hostis of the British Empire.

DESERVING PRAISE.

THE RECITAL given in the Collegiate Assembly Hall last night by Miss Dorothy Allan, Dr. Park, and his son, Mr. Maurice Park, was of a kind deserving much praise. The programme was somewhat astonishing to be attempted by local talent, and many were very curious to know in what manner it would be rendered. That the artists did not disappoint their large audience is true, but they did more, they surprised them. The list of subjects was ample evidence of a great deal of study, and the rendition fully justified the time spent upon it. It is not our intention here to point out individual merits or weaknesses. We wish to commend those who provided the recital for attempting such a programme, and trust it will be an incentive to similar entertainments. We might suggest that in future concerts in the Collegiate it would be well to request all the ladies to remove their hats and to endeavour to ventilate the place a little better. A good point was that the recital started on time, and those who came late were admitted only between numbers. We think there is enough talent in Peterborough to provide much high-class entertainment, if it can be utilized. By all means, let it come out from under the bushel.

THE MONTREAL MAIL doesn't think General De Wet should be executed, because the situation was not serious enough. Strange position, indeed, for a journal of such strong patriotic opinions. The moral effect of the rebellion on the rest of the Empire might have been tremendous. It is not what the rebellion was, but what it might have been, that is important, and that must be guarded against in future. General De Wet should suffer the penalty for his crime.

WATER WASTE FROM RUNNING TAPS.

SEVERAL CITIES in Canada are today in a serious position because the water consumption is equal to the supply. The result is insufficient pressure in the water mains for fire purposes. With the coming of winter weather this situation will no doubt be accentuated, due to leaving taps open, thus allowing the water to run therefrom for many hours at a time to prevent the pipes freezing up.

Not the least of the many advantages which cities have derived from the installation of water meters is the reduction of this heavy waste during the winter months. With the introduction of water meters, consumers have realized the value of having water pipes protected from frost. This precaution usually entails very slight expense, but where there is no check on the water consumed a lack of public spirit keeps people from undertaking the frost protection.

Water and waste pipes should at once be carefully looked after and protected, and particularly so where they are exposed to cold drafts. They should be well wrapped and kept thoroughly dry on the outside. As an additional precaution, pipes may be enclosed in a box and well packed with sawdust.

The quantity of water wasted by a small stream left running under average water pressure is as follows:

1-32 inch leak wastes	8 gal per hour.
1-16 inch leak wastes	34 gal. per hour.
1-8 inch leak wastes	137 gal. per hour.
1-4 inch leak wastes	514 gal. per hour.

On the basis of the local water rates, it is easy to figure out the actual cost to the city of these running faucets, and, also, the almost criminal neglect when compared with the small cost of overcoming this waste. Meter installation is now recognized as one of the best means of preventing water waste. Where meters have been installed not only has it been followed by a marked reduction in the amount of water required for general consumption, but it has been possible to maintain a more satisfactory pressure for fire-fighting purposes.

BUY CHRISTMAS PRESENTS AS USUAL.

QUITE A NUMBER of factories in Canada are busy making toys for the Christmas trade. Last year two million dollars' worth of toys came to America from Germany, and this year that supply is cut off. Canada imported last year thousands of dollars' worth of toys, and this year Canadian factories and workmen are trying to supply the Canadian market. So you see if you are patriotic and have the best interests of Canada and the Empire at heart, you will buy Christmas presents as usual. The stores in Peterborough have a fine stock of all lines of goods, and the people should try to keep up the trade of this city and country by buying Christmas presents as usual.

CONSERVATIVE WINS.

IRWIN HILLIARD, the Conservative candidate in the old constituency of the late Sir James Whitney, has carried the riding by a good majority, and Hon. W. H. Hearst, the Premier, is assured now of an able supporter of his party and policy. While it was not expected that even a good candidate following in Sir James Whitney's old riding would roll up the big majority of the late Premier, since he was untried, yet his majority is ample, and we think Mr. Hilliard will maintain the high reputation of the famous riding of Dundas county. Mr. Hilliard is a lawyer of repute and should bring honour to the Ontario Legislature.

The Case of Egypt,

(Detroit Free Press.)

There is not the slightest doubt that the best thing that happened to Egypt after the Roman occupation was the landing of General Wolesley at Alexandria in 1882. When the British agent took hold, the land of Khem was bankrupt, discouraged and on the edge of disaster. Today it is prosperous, solvent and well governed. There is justice for high and low, and there is safety and encouragement for commercial enterprise. For a nation to throw all this away would seem to be the height of folly, particularly when there is hope that ultimately it may gain its real as well as its national independence through peaceful means.

A House Divided Against Itself.

(Lethbridge Herald.)

The Hamilton Spectator, Southam Conservative, wants the public to forget about Bourassa. It says: "Let the miserable Bourassa alone. Among red-blooded men none are so poor as to do him reverence." To which the Ottawa Citizen, also Southam Conservative, responds: "Nevertheless he is the same gentleman, expressing the same sentiments as in the elections of 1911." Hadn't the Southams better have a family reunion at Christmas and come to an agreement?

Superior British Quality.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Eight Victoria Crosses have been awarded for valor in the British army up to date. At this rate, one Victoria Cross balances about five thousand iron crosses. Goods made in Germany are frequently of a cheap grade.

The Second Scrap of Paper.

(Montreal Mail.)

The second "scrap of paper" to be torn up during this war was that which guaranteed party neutrality. And about the loudest rip came from the Toronto Globe.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor, Review;

Sir:—

Mayor Bullek has spoken to me, saying that he has heard on the streets the statement that certain parties interested in the Patriotic Fund were to receive of all collections and monies paid into, and for the objects of, the Fund, five per cent.

I do wish that people would not start or pass on by word of mouth such rumors. It is the easiest thing in the world to learn the facts. All any citizen has to do is to call at the committee rooms or telephone and we will give him the information. We wish to overtake and run down such statements before they do serious harm. That is exactly what the publicity committee is for. It is working most earnestly to push the movement and welcome suggestions. It will with pleasure hasten to club detrimental rumors.

The only assistance in the conduct of this campaign outside of local people is that given by Mr. W. C. Rean, an organizer, who is here and who is engaged by the Canadian Patriotic Fund. He is paid by the parent fund and there is no charge at all to the local association, as he is simply loaned to it for a few days. He is under engagement to go to other places as soon as he may be spared.

All of the clerical work, care of rooms, publicity service, stenographers, in fact everything connected with the administration of the campaign, is contributed free of cost. Several of the legal profession have sent, and others will send from their offices, stenographers, to assist, and these young ladies are simply invaluable. We have plenty of help, and more is offered, all free of cost.

Mr. Rean tells me, and surely he knows, that he has not assisted at one, nor does he know of one movement or campaign such as this that has been or is being conducted with so ample a force, and efficient free service and so small expense as this. There will be expense, but not for service, for such are material to the enterprise. We will raise $50,000 for the Fund, but not one cent for rakeoff.

Finally, brethren, don't be one of the few who knock, but be one of the hundreds who are helping.

Yours hopefully,

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

ABOUT PURCHASES.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir:—

I wish to thank you for your article in last evening's paper vindicating my position that I have a right to do my purchasing out of town if I can get the article a few cents cheaper.

"EATONIA."

(If "Eatonia" will read the article again he surely will see that that is precisely what the Review did not advocate.—Ed.)

PLANT PUZZLES

A plant that actually goes insect hunting is among the latest of the scientific discoveries. It is known as the sundew. Its leaves, covered with tentacles, close in upon a fly the moment it touches them and slowly strangle it.

This has long been familiar to the naturalists, but it now develops that the plant does not passively wait for its prey. If a fly alights within a half inch of one of the leaves it slowly approaches the insect until close enough to lay hold and destroy, thus demonstrating the possession of some sort of sense or instinct with which plants are not usually supposed to be endowed.

Something of the same sort is manifested in that plant parasite, the dodder. It germinates from seed, sending out a thin, threadlike growth, which winds in and out among the grass stocks until it finally approaches its natural victim. Then its growth is greatly accelerated. In a sense it fairly leaps upon its host and once there not only fastens to it, but multiplies with surprising rapidity.

If a stake be driven within a few inches of a growing sweet pea vine it will be observed that a tendril drops from a leaf of the plant in the direction of the stake. Forthwith the whole upper shoot of the vine bends in the same direction, and very soon the tendril is able to fasten itself. The same observation holds more or less true with all climbing plants.

Vegetation of various kinds sends roots through distances, sometimes to be measured in yards, that they may reach soil or water below. Science is asking if the sundew knows that the fly is near.

Has the vine a method of detecting the proximity of its support?

Does the plant so situated that its nourishment is lacking realise that far below it are earth and water?

An affirmative answer involves the admission of a sense or instinct in vegetation that corresponds to that in animal life, and yet those who have studied the matter most profoundly give that very answer.—Exchange.

Height of Waves

It is only in the imagination of the poets that waves rise "mountains high." The exact altitude and length of waves have been measured with scientific accuracy, and the record waves are carefully recorded. Waves in shallow water are, as a rule, higher than those in open or deep water. The height of a wave is commonly about one-fifteenth its length.

The longest wave on record was 2,590 feet, measuring from crest to crest, its period being about twenty-two seconds. Waves of extreme length are seldom very high. A wave 2,500 feet in length, rising in deep water, will have a height of about fifty feet.

When a wave enters shallow water its crest becomes considerably higher, and one of a height of forty feet will frequently rise to fifty feet. If it meets resistance, it may be thrown up twice this height.

In severe storms at sea waves rarely reach a height of fifty feet. The average in such time has a period of about ten seconds, which would indicate a length of about 500 feet. Waves with a period of ten seconds have a length of from 150 to 300 feet and a height of thirty-three feet and form a very high sea.—Exchange.

"Fear Not! Ye Women and Children"

Let every man of us cry this from the very housetops to the mothers, sisters, wives and children of the soldiers we are sending to the front. Well may we spring to the care of these dependents. Well may every instinct within us thrill to this call for contributions

GIVE! GIVE! GIVE!

$50,000

IN THREE DAYS

Wednesday, Thursday
Friday
December 9-10-11

Shall our women and innocent children, who give their protectors for the cause of Britain and humanity, find any lack of British chivalry and British humanity here at home? A thousand times, "NO!" Every soldier who goes to the front leaves his women and children as a sacred trust with his fellow citizens and no Canadian will disregard his personal obligation.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY AND FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9, 10 AND 11, ARE THE DAYS WHEN A PERSONAL CANVASS OF THE CITY WILL BE MADE BY 100 LEADING CITIZENS IN TEN TEAMS OF WORKERS UNDER EFFICIENT CAPTAINS. BE READY TO CHEER THEIR WORK AND SWELL THE FUND — YOUR FUND. THINK WHAT A NOBLE ACT WILL BE HANDED DOWN TO POSTERITY. GIVE! GIVE! GIVE!

IT IS NOT GIVEN TO US ALL TO GO TO WAR. IT IS NOT GIVEN TO US ALL TO WORK FOR THIS FUND. BUT IT IS THE PRIVILEGE OF EVERYONE TO MEET THE CALL UPON HIM FOR MONEY IN THE NAME OF THESE DEPENDENT WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

The organization for handling this fund has been carefully perfected. It will be expended under a most thorough system. Every case will be investigated and overlapping will be avoided.

The Idea of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is This:

The soldiers have gone to fight, not for their home town or for any particular locality, but for all Canada.

The whole of Canada should combine to take proper care of their families.

The fund is one Fund, and in each locality is administered by the local branch.

In Peterborough, for instance, families of the soldiers will be looked after by the local branch acting for the National Association.

All the families throughout Canada will receive aid on the same basis, and none will be neglected.

This is a sensible and patriotic plan. Peterborough will fall in line. Do all you can, but do it now.

The Local, or Contingent Relief Side of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund is for the purpose of aiding families who may be in need owing to the war, through lack of work.

There are many such, and will be more.

They must be judiciously aided and not want.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Wheat turned heavy in the last 15 minutes today and a moderate advance which had been scored was more than wiped out. Disclosure of the fact that the market had become bare of speculative orders to buy was responsible for the setback. Prices finished weak at a shade to ½c under Saturday night. Corn lost ⅛c to ⅝c net, and oats ⅛c to ⅜c. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 10c down.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 7.—Liverpool cables were 1d higher and Paris ¼d advance, which caused a strong opening on the Winnipeg market. Wheat opened ⅜c to ⅝c higher, oats ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher, and flax ⅛c to ⅜c lower. Trading was quiet, and in futures prices were steady around the opening figures. The strength was influenced by good demand at Liverpool and unfavorable news from the Argentine. Offsetting the strength were the heavy receipts in the south. Wheat was unchanged to ⅜c over Saturday at the close, oats unchanged to ⅛c lower, and flax 1c to 1⅛c lower. The cash demand for wheat was slow, only a few lots being picked up to complete cargoes. There was no change in the situation as regards oats, flax and barley, the demand for these being extremely slow.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat is steadily increasing, and cables were stronger at a further advance of 4½d to 6d per quarter, but owing to the great scarcity of ocean grain room from Canadian winter ports it was impossible for exporters to do any business. The local trade in oats is quiet, but there is a fair demand for Argentine and American corn, and in addition to this sales of 15,000 bushels of Ontario malting barley were made at 76c to 78c. There was some enquiry from over the cable for spring wheat flour, but millers stated that the prices bid were all out of line. Local trade is quiet and steady. Demand for mill feed continues good and the market is active with a strong undertone.

There was a better feeling in the butter market today and prices at the auction sale were ¼c per pound higher than a week ago, finest creamery selling at 30¼ cents.

Cheese is quiet and firm. Eggs fairly active.

Stockers and feeders of good quality were in demand. Good to choice steers, $6.25 to $6.50; medium steers, $5.75 to $6.25; stockers, $4 to $5.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Prices were firm but unchanged, and more would have sold readily. Prices ranged from $60 to $100. The bulk sold at $70 to $85.

Veal Calves.

Prices were unchanged. Choice calves $9 to $10; good, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common and inferior, $4 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, $5 to $5.75; heavy ewes and rams at $3.50 to $4; culls at $2.50 to $3.50; lambs sold all the way from $7 to $8.50; culls at $6.50 to $6.75.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, $7.25 and $7.50 weighed off cars. There were two or three lots brought 5c to 10c more money.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—At the C.P.R. Stock Yards, west end market, butchers' cattle were stronger and prices showed an advance of 15c to 25c per cwt., as compared with this day week, and canning stock is 25c to 50c higher. Trade on the whole was rather quiet. Sales of full carloads of fairly good steers were made at $7 to $7.25, and some fair stock changed hands at $6.40 to $6.75 per cwt. There was a good demand from packers for canning stock and an active trade was done in this line, with sales of bulls at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $3.90 to $4.50 per 100 pounds.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for small meats, but the feeling was very firm on account of the smaller offerings, for which there was a good demand, and sales of Ontario lambs were made at $7.00, and Quebec at $7.10, while others changed hands at $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt. Demand for calves was good, of which the offerings were light. A much stronger feeling has prevailed in the market for hogs since last Wednesday and prices have advanced 25c to 60c per cwt. owing to the falling off in receipts. Demand was somewhat limited, with sales of selected lots at $7.50 to $7.75, sows at $6.00 to $6.75, and stags at $3.50 to $3.90 per cwt. off cars.

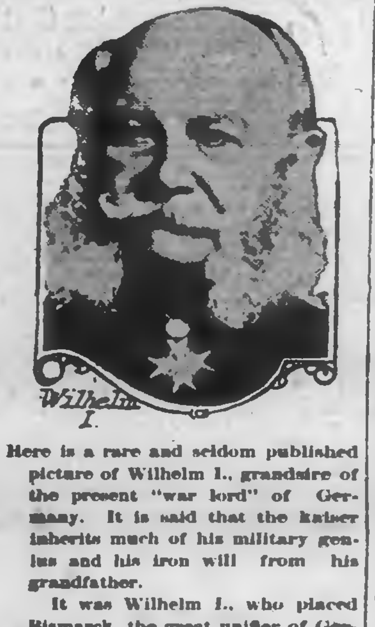
KAISER'S GRANDFATHER MAN OF IRON WILL.



Here is a rare and seldom published picture of Wilhelm I., grandsire of the present "war lord" of Germany. It is said that the kaiser inherits much of his military genius and his iron will from his grandfather.

It was Wilhelm I., who placed Bismarck, the great unifier of Germany, at the head of state affairs. He died in 1888.

WOULD JAIL DR. FALCONER

If Varsity President Followed Plan Says Police Official

TORONTO, Dec. 8. — If the proposal made by Dr. R. A. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto goes through, whereby the three German professors on the staff of the University, who have been given leave of absence, will be exchanged for three professors from universities in the United States, the police will step in and will prevent the professors, Mueller, Benzinger and Tapper, from leaving Canada, and will place Dr. Falconer under arrest on a charge of treason.

This statement was made last night by Inspector of Detectives George Kennedy, to whom is intrusted the task of seeing that no alien enemies are allowed to leave Canada. Inspector Kennedy maintains that if Dr. Falconer, by arranging for an exchange of the professors, helps them to leave Canada for the United States, he will be violating the order-in-council prohibiting anyone from assisting aliens to leave Canada, and thus will make himself liable to arrest on a charge of treason.

The inspector stated also that if the three German professors attempted to cross the border, they would be arrested the same as any other Austrian or German who tries to leave the country.

Cables say General De Wet arrived at Johannesburg "calmly smoking his pipe." All old smokers will understand.

CRACOW'S OUTER FORTS FALLING FROM THE RUSSIANS' SHELL FIRE

Effect of German Success at Lodz Will Probably be That Russian Generals Will Hurl Their Main Weight at Breslau by Way of Cracow ---Hungary Alarmed at Rapid Southern Advance.

LONDON, Dec. 8. — After a long battle fought with the greatest stubbornness, the Germans have succeeded in occupying Lodz, Poland, which is an unfortified city. According to the Berlin report, the Russians suffered severe losses and are in retreat.

On the other hand a despatch from Copenhagen says the northern section of the outer forts at Cracow has been destroyed by the Russian artillery, which has also begun the bombardment of the eastern and northeastern sections. The fire of the Russians continues without cessation day and night, says the message.

From Russian sources comes the intimation of a new plan of offensive. Cracow, it is said, is now under the fire of Russian artillery, and Russian strategy contemplates a shifting of the main attack from central Poland to the south, involving an attempt to push on from the region of Cracow and enter Germany across the Silesian border, with Breslau the objective. Such a move probably would involve a large reinforcement of the Russian army in Galicia.

The success of the Germans at Lodz, largely because of what preceded it, is considered by military experts a really remarkable achievement. Less than a fortnight ago the army to which this victory has fallen was surrounded by Russians, and cut its way out only at the last moment, losing great numbers of men and many guns. Yet it was able within a few days to reorganise, take the offensive, and defeat the Russians defending Lodz.

This was made possible by the network of strategic railways on the German side of the frontier, over which reinforcements can be sent where they are most needed. The Russians, on the other hand, vigorously attacked on both wings, were unable to send fresh men to stiffen their centre to meet the German wedge, and were compelled to fall back.

There will be undoubtedly much more fighting before the campaign in this district is concluded. Lodz was won only after hand-to-hand fighting in the suburbs of the city, and the whole Russian line, from north to south, is now straightened out and will contest every foot of ground with the invaders.

If the fall of the city is a fact, it indicates that communication with Warsaw again is seriously menaced, but a semi-official statement from Petrograd declares that the Russians are strong enough to hold the invaders in northern Poland, and will content themselves with doing this while devoting their main energies to the reduction of Cracow and the invasion of Hungary.

Hungary, according to reports from the Russian capital, is the weak point in the armor of the Teuton allies. These messages from Petrograd say that even as early as the fall of Lemberg Austria asked Russia for terms of peace. The negotiations to this end, if any really took place, apparently proved abortive. The story is again revived in Petrograd in the form of a report that the Hungarian Prime Minister, on a recent visit to Emperor William, demanded better military protection for Hungary, the lack of which would cause the loss of the Kingdom.

A despatch from Rome says:—

"Travelers who have arrived at Fiume declare that at Budapest and throughout Hungary there is great alarm on account of the new Russian invasion. A Russian army is marching across the southern passes of the Carpathians, with the evident intention of occupying the whole of the southern line beyond the Carpathians, to render impossiblo the retreat of the Austrian armies in Hungary.

"The feeling of alarm is due to the fact that there are no more available troops in Hungary. The Austro-Hungarian troops in the Carpathians are estimated to number 800,000 men, and the whole of this army is said to be in danger of being made prisoners."

Charged With Embezzlement.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 8.—William Walter Browning, cashier of a branch of the Bank of Montreal in Montreal, was arrested at a local hotel yesterday afternoon on a charge of embezzling $2,000 of the bank's funds a week ago.

Browning was registered under the name of J. W. Wayne. One thousand eight hundred and eighty-three dollars was found in his suitcase. According to the police, Browning said he could not explain why he took the money. Browning is 33 years old.

Holland Will Land Wheat.

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 8.—(Via London.)—A meeting held here yesterday of the Netherlands Cabinet, attended by Charge d'Affaires Langhorne and Capt. T. F. Lucey of the Belgian relief commission, the Government consented to loan and deliver 10,000 tons of wheat, valued at $1,000,000, to be used at once in Belgium, at such points where the danger of starvation is most acute.

Shell Hit Insane Asylum.

LONDON, Dec. 8. — A despatch from Petrograd says that during the bombardment at Lodz many shells struck an asylum for the insane near the town.

Scores of lunatics jumped from the windows when the building caught fire and many others were burned to death.

These days, the man who is careless about the amount of clothing he put on is apt to find out that Nature believes in capital punishment.

Gen Victor Dankl.

Gen. Victor Dankl, in command of a division of the Austrian army in the Galician campaign, is one of the several officers, almost unknown at the opening of the war, who have won sudden fame by heroic work in the critical opportunities offered by the great strife.

Gen. Dankl saved the Austrian army when its retreat before the Russians under Gen. Rennenkampf was on the point of becoming a fatal rout. His great feat at that time has won him the reputation of being one of the coolest and most expert strategists of the Austrian forces.

ITALY NOW THREATENED

Austria Has Stationed 200,000 Men Along the Border

ROME, Dec. 8.—A Milan despatch delayed in transmission says:—

"Advices received from the Austrian frontier and published yesterday in the Secolo are that the statement of Premier Salandra in the Italian Parliament Thursday had an immediate echo in Austrian military circles.

"Friday night, the correspondent says the railway lines poured troops all along the Italian border and also into Pola, the Austrian arsenal on the peninsula of Istria. It is estimated that 200,000 men were stationed along the Italian border and 100,000 at Pola.

"At the same time, the correspondent continues, anti-Italian manifestations took place at various points. At Pragerhoff, Hungarian soldiers spat in the faces of Italian workmen. Officers who witnessed these attacks did not interfere. At Steinbruck other soldiers ill-treated and disabled Italian workmen who were making their headquarters in the station.

Eight battalions of Italian troops have been ordered to Libya, to reinforce the troops there, and, according to the announcement, "to be ready for any aggression."

Ald. Duncan and Ald. Saunders were of the idea that it would affect the poor man, in as much as he would have to pay more taxes. Ald. McIntyre was willing to support a half-mill donation, but thought the one mill a trifle too much. Ald. Weir said that if he thought the ratepayers in general were in favor of giving one mill on the dollar he would be in favor of it. Cries from the deputation informed him that the ratepayers were willing, so the East City representative made known the fact that he would back the one-mill donation.

Not a Supporter.

Ald. Langford came out very plain and stated that he would not support the granting of $10,000, although he was a member of the campaign committee and intended putting forth every effort to assist in booming the fund. He claimed that in previous years the city councils had been too easily persuaded to give grants here and there, and that was the reason the tax rate of this city is so high. He further expressed himself that most of the people who are called on to pay this are not wealthy and are at the present time finding it hard to pay their share of the taxes.

Mayor Buller replied that the workingmen were not worrying. They are the people who always give whether it is church or charity. They are the men who are doing the fighting at the front and the men who want to see this patriotic fund boosted. He exclaimed that he was willing to take a chance and go to the workingmen tomorrow with that policy as his ticket. He was positive that the workingmen would have no objection but would be pleased to see some move that would be truly Canadian which would be the means of keeping the dependents of the soldiers, at least in provisions.

R. R. Hall intimated that the reason some of the aldermen were opposed to giving one mill was to secure a few votes during the coming election. Ald. Langford came back with the assertion that he wasn't taking his stand for the sake of votes nor he would not be stampeded or "bulldozed" into anything. He was willing to assist personally but was not in favor of handing out so much of the people's money at this late hour of their term.

Ald. Duncan asked if there was any possible way of raising the money but His Worship assured him to rest his mind for there would be some way found out of the difficulty. What the Mayor desired was to give $10,000 and he brought every power into force to induce his fellow representatives to adopt the same idea. Ex-Mayor Rush, who had remained in a secluded corner of the hall, was loudly cheered when he rose to say a few words. He thought that every councillor had expressed himself according to his conscience but in his opinion there would be no harm in giving one mill on the dollar to the fund.

Ald. Johnston then made a motion to the effect that $10,000 be the donation of the city of Peterboro to the Patriotic Fund and that this sum be raised by adding one mill to the tax rate of next year. This sum will not include the $500 previously granted. The motion was seconded by Ald. Dobbin An amendment was made by Ald. Green and Ald. Saunders, that the matter be left over till the first meeting of 1915 council. Ald. McIntyre and Duffus made an amendment to the amendment calling for a donation of half a mill. Both amendments were lost and the original motion carried by 7-4, the vote being:—

Yeas—Ald. Duncan, Stratton, Dobbin, Duffus, Johnston, Weir and Mayor Buller.

Nays—Ald. Green, Langford, McIntyre and Saunders.

Amid great enthusiasm Mayor Buller declared the motion carried.

ADVERTISING IS THE LANGUAGE OF BUSINESS

The Brightest Light by Which Commerce and Industry Find Their Way Throughout the Nation — An Address to the Belmont Club by J. A. McNabb

Last night at the rooms of the Belmont Club, Mr. J. A. McNabb, advertising manager for Richard Hall and Son, addressed the members on the subject of Advertising, the Language of Business. Mr. McNabb's able treatment of his subject earned an attentive hearing and the evening proved to be one of profit.

Some time ago, the Belmont Club, arranged for a series of educational features, and these meetings have been very popular.

In introducing his subject Mr. McNabb said:

Advertising the Language the f'hTH

Have you thought what advertising means to the life of your country the Dominion of Canada. Do you realize that very time you utter a word in the presence of other people you are advertising your personality. Do you understand that it is a guarantee of quality and the agent of economy? Do you realize that if you are to succeed in any business or any profession advertising will help you? Advertising is the language of business. It is the bright light by which commerce and industry find their way throughout the nation.

Not only business men, merchants, advertising men or editors are interested in advertising, the whole country, every citizen, every woman, every child derives benefit from the advertising art, which has been developed within the present generation. Every school boy knows how the human race has begun its mental development since language was discovered. Before men could speak they could not tell each other their ideas or help each other. Hubbard of today says, "Advertising is the education of the public, as to who you are, where you are, and what you have to offer in the way of skill, talent or commodity." The only man who should not advertise is the man who has nothing to offer the world in the way of commodity or service. What language is to the human race advertising is to business, industry, commerce, manufacturing and economy. Advertising is the language of trade, the language of energy, the language of prosperity, the language of today determined to do in his life what in former years could not be done, in fewer than half a dozen generations. Advertising is the word indicates, is giving information. Literally translated the word means, to turn to, from the Latin of Ad., to and verto, turn. The advertisement turns the public to the thing wanted. Advertising the voice of commerce, tells the work, that the thinkers, fighters and inventors of industry are doing.

It was excellent advertising of her courage and of woman's power, when Hannah Dustan of Haverhill, Mass., being captured by the Indians, who murderd her baby, and being led away to be tortured, returned on foot bringing with her the scalps of ten Indians that she had killed in their sleep. It was good advertising, although not meant as such, when Agassiz, the great naturalist, said, I have not time to make money.

It was good advertising when Marc Antony pointed out the holes that the daggers made in Caesar's clothing and even better advertising when he mentioned with pretended reluctance how much of his money and property Caeser had left to the howling mob

A Science and an Art.

The history of the world has been a history of advertising, conscience or unconscience. This generation of ours is the first that sees advertising as a science and an art.

And even this generation does not realize the importance of advertising, the dignity of the advertising profession, the extraordinary part that advertising is destined to play in the industry, of commerce, and especially in the economy of the country.

The advertisement is to the industry and business of the nation, what the bright electric light is to the big engine producing the power.

The little electric bulb tells what the engine is doing. The brilliantly worded advertisement tells what industry, commerce and manufacturers are doing.

In the olden days everything was slow—a man with great difficulty managed to place his little store on a street where many passed. The public only could know what he was doing if they passed his store. Now a man can put his factory in a distant town, nobody has seen it, nobody perhaps knows where it is. But that man puts his name, his purpose, his accomplishment, in the hands of tens of millions of human beings. He does not wait for the man to pass his door. He goes through the door of the house in which the man lives, and in that monthly, or that weekly, or in many dailies, presents to the man the story that he has to tell. Therein lies the power of advertising. You can work today and tomorrow you can tell the whole world what you have done.

You can have a new idea this week, and next year, that idea can be in the minds of fifty millions of human beings. You are bound by your location, limited by the strength of your voice. Your voice is the voice of the printing press. No man need waste a day if he has the right idea and the energy, and knows how to talk for publication.

It is important that the public know what advertising means, especially important is the fact that plenty of advertising almost invariably means an excellent and honest product. If you read that a man had invested a million dollars in a factory of brick, stone or iron, you would not need to be told that he would refrain from setting fire to that factory especially if it were not insured.

Millions into Words.

There are many business men that have put not one million but five and tens of millions into an advertising reputation. They have put their millions into words and have erected by them a reputation as solid as any brick or iron. That reputation is their fortune. That reputation is their life work. It is not insured, it cannot be insured. For the man who has put his millions into advertising, to lower the quality of his goods, to deceive the public, would be like setting fire to his millions without any insurance.

There are of course fraudulent advertisers, although they are constantly becoming fewer, and they are becoming fewer, thanks to the power of modern advertising. Advertising is no longed used to sell "wooden nutmegs" or to sell a fine steel engraving of Queen Victoria for fifty cents, which turns out to be a Canadian two-cent stamp, with Queen Victoria's face upon it. Advertising today builds up today the honest man and kills the dishonest man. There is more profit in building a great grocery business and selling the best of nutmegs at a fair small profit than there could possibly be in selling wooden nutmegs.

The Honest Voice.

Advertising has ceased to be misrepresentation and it has become the honest voice of commerce, the agent of economy, and the economy must be clear to all. It can be made clear in a very few words.

You have a merchant who does not advertise, he pays a clerk two dollars a day, and the clerk sells ten dollars worth of goods. Naturally that merchant must first pay the clerk two dollars ont of the ten dollars, that you pay for the goods. That means twenty per cent. profit to start with for the goods alone, and then the store which represents high rent, must take its part of your purchase mony for rent, for heat, for taxes, insurance. And the proprietor must take his part. Where the man who does not advertise pays two dollars to the clerk and two dollars for rent, and a dollar for insurance and de-

APPRECIATION OF DR. GORDON'S MEETINGS HERE

Far Reaching and Valuable Will be the Benefits Say City Fathers

"That the Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough desires to place on record its very deep and great appreciation of the services rendered to the business men and residents of the city of Peterborough by the addresses given by the Reverend J. L. Gordon during his recent course of addresses in the city under the auspices of the Christian Citizenship Movement, and that we believe that the benefits the residents of the city generally received from these addresses will be far-reaching and very valuable, and that a copy of this resolution be mailed to the Reverend J. L. Gordon by the City Clerk."

This motion of Ald. Johnston and Green was unanimously passed by the Council meeting last evening.

Six Months' License.

D. O'Connell, acing for M. Pappas,
D. O'Connell, acting for M. Pappas, fee for the operating of a pool room by Pappas for six months. If the pool room was kept open for the whole year, the license fee would be $520.

The matter was referred to the finance committee for a report.

The city solicitor wrote the Council in regard to a recent resolution of the finance committee, and stated that the $1200 paid to the city on account of debentures raised under bylaw 1314, bing the Rapid Tool Co.'s bonus bylaw, will require to be held for disposition under the Municipal Act. The matter was left over for the new council to deal with.

Two residents of Smith street had letters before the meeting pointing out that their properties were affected by raising the sidewalk. The letters were placed on the Board of Works' fyle.

Arrangements Completed.

E. G. Patterson wrote on behalf of the Canadian General Electric Co., and stated that arrangements had been completed in regard to the C. G. E. test track, and it would be unnecessary to submit a bylaw to the people. In connection with this, Mayor Buller took occasion to refer to the untiring efforts of Ald. Duffus, chairman of the manufacturers' committee, and congratulated him on the outcome.

Would Issue Writ.

A letter from Douglas & Gibson, solicitors, of Toronto, which stated that in the event of the city placing the sewage disposal plant near the property owned by H. P. Kennedy, across the river from the end of Lock street, they would issue a writ for damages.

Tax Collector's Report.

Tax Collector Green's statement of roll ending November, 1914, was referred to the finance committee.

A letter from the Canadian Suffrage association, re votes for married women, was received, although Ald. Green urged that it be referred to the incinerator.

Public Utilities.

A letter from Mayor Euler of Berlin asking for the co-operation of municipalities to enable the securing of better legislation in regard to the disposal of funds of public utilities.

Assistance Given.

Adjt. McElhiney asked the Council to help him with the lodging house, and a grant of $50 was made to help improve the place, and another $50 for operating expenses during December.

Award of $35 For Plaintiff

The jury in the Division Court case of Dr. McNulty vs. John O'Leary to recover the sum of $58 due on an account of $158 for surgical services performed by the plaintiff on the defendant's child returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff $35. It will be remembered that according to evidence submitted at the trial a month ago at which the jury disagreed, Dr. McNulty operated on O'Leary's child for appendicitis and presented his bill of $158. This the plaintiff thought exorbitant and paid $100. The doctor sued for the other $58. D. O'Connell acted for Dr. McNulty and V. J. McElderry for the defendant.

500 FROM CLUB FUNDS.

The Peterboro Club held its annual meeting on Saturday night, elected officers and dealt with general business. Amid great enthusiasm the sum of $400 was donated to the Peterboro Patriotic Fund and $100 to the Belgian Relief Fund. This is a movement that will likely spread among other clubs and associations in the city. It will be observed this donation does not represent the private subscription of the members

CONSERVATIVE FOR DUNDAS

Morrisburg Barrister is Elected in Bye-election

WINCHESTER SPRINGS, Ont., Dec. 8.—By the comparatively small majority of 76, Irwin Hilliard, barrister, of Morrisburg, the Conservative candidate, was elected to succeed the late Sir James Whitney as Dundas member of the Ontario Legislature. His opponent, John Campbell, of Ormond, made an unexpectedly close run. Conservatives attributed the big reduction in the party majority to lack of interest, as reflected in the light vote yesterday. On June 29 last Sir James Whitney's majority was about 750.

Mountain Township gave Hilliard 161, and Matilda Township 205, Glen Stewart gave him 46 and Haddo 46.

Campbell had a lead of 49 in Morrisburg, 19 in Iroquois, 42 in Chesterville and 29 in Winchester Village.

ADVERTISING IS THE LANGUAGE OF BUSINESS

livery and sells ten dollars worth of goods, he must take five dollars for expenses, and at least three dollars for himself, and you get two dollars worth of goods.

A man with the same clerk, and the same store advertising, can sell one hundred dollars worth of goods so that out of one hundred dollars he can pay the clerk, and the rent, and the taxes and the overhead, and take what he wants, and the whole thing amounts to less than one tenth of the amount taken in.

Advertising doubles the efficiency of the clerk, the value of the store, the power of the merchant's organization.

Nothing is more foolish than the fast-disappearing belief of the ignorant, that when they buy goods they pay for the advertising. They do nothing of the kind. The advertising pays for part of the goods and makes it possible to deliver the goods cheaper.

Advertising the language of business is simply to interest another person in that which interests you, and that gentleman brings me to the point of retail advertising, and retail advertising to my mind is by far the most important form of advertising in existence, because it reaches out for direct results, and with your permission I will discuss in a few minutes two forms of retail advertising which are, bargain advertising and the advertising of good goods at good prices. In the first place we have too much bargain advertising and not enough of the advertising of bargains. However I will try and define bargain advertising and how genuine bargains come about. It might prove of interest to know that upon the authority of a reliable trade paper about one fourteenth of all merchandise manufactured is sold to the trade without profit or at a loss, because it cannot be helped, sold to clear a factory to empty a warehouse of short lots or remnants, or sold with little regard for anything but that the holder needs some money quickly.

Bargain Advertising.

By these ways come bargains, and conforming to the reason that make selling at a loss imperative, goods so to be sold are offered first to those who are in the best position to buy quantities. In writing bargain copy, the first and foremost essential is honesty, and I would set in 100-point caps, so all may read. The reason bargain advertising today in some places does not always carry the weight it should is because of dishonesty. How often do we see headings. Regular $1.00 for 39c? In writing bargain copy, simply tell the people in a brief way why the offering is made. If a special purchase, tell them; if soiled, tell them; if damaged, tell them. Then you will be justified for making such claims. This bargain game is a big thing. It may be helpful to some. But let me tell you, a business built on bargains is not resting on a very sound foundation. I would like to go into this bargain matter on a broader scale, but my time is already up. So I will hurry on to the advertising of goods at good prices. In advertising good goods at good prices, we forget the price. Supposing at the commencement of the season we are advertising women's suits—we must talk style and quality, the way in which it is designed, where the style originated, the workmanship which makes it retain its shape, and the splendid wearing quality of the material. If we are talking home furnishings, we must tell how the things will improve the appearance of the room. Let me say that in this class of advertising there is scope for imagination. Mozart wrote the music of his imagination, and the live ad. man puts in a practical way in his ads. the thoughts of his imagination.

Retail Advertising.

Retail advertising must be seasonable. People are not buying garden tools in December or winter underwear in June. Don't use big words in advertising copy. I believe the simple language best. Lincoln has said that if we spoke so the masses could understand us we could be sure of the masses understanding us.

I believe the retail merchant today must direct his advertising to the women of the community; the man may be president of the house, but the woman is the purchasing agent. Convince the woman that your goods are right, and still sell them to the rest of the family. The woman studies where and what to buy; the man works to pay the bills.

The modern department store directs about 95 per cent. of its advertising to women. A prominent department store man estimates that 60 per cent. of the purchasing of strictly men's goods is suggested or influenced by women.

Take the great departmental stores of America, notably the John Wanamaker stores, Marshal Field & Co., Selfridge, the Eaton stores, Simpson's, and even our own local stores—are they not living monuments to the purchasing power of women?

Gentlemen, this topic of advertising, and especially retail advertising, is so broad, so comprehensive, so vital, so absorbing, that it is impossible to tell much of its principles in fifteen minutes. Why, everything that pertains to the store is advertising. Your business stationery, the paper in which you wrap your parcels, your adress, labels, etc. Why, every time your store is spoken of it's an advertisement. The advertiser—the man who prepares the advertising—is the clerk who talks to all of the customers, and the merchant should especially remember this. If any merchant had a clerk who talked to every customer before that customer came to the store, the merchant would consider no price too great to pay for efficient service of that kind. How many merchants and other business men fail to remember that the advertising man is the clerk that talks to all; more than that, he is the man who forms public opinion as to the policy of the merchant or the other business which he represents. He is the voice, the man who represents not merely the bargains, the cash inducements, but the conscience of the business. It would be possible to write pages concerning the difficulties of the art of preparing advertising—for today it is sufficient to say: the ideal merchant of the future will be the merchant who intelligently combines his advertising policy with his store policy; who believes not only in getting business through carrying out to the limit his printed claims, who realizes that the customer is the whole foundation of his business, and that upon the way the customer of today is treated depends the number and the confidence of the customers of tomorrow. Truth in advertising is supreme. Build up a business that is supported by public confidence, and good-will, by giving good values, and good service, and by profiting by public confidence and good-will, built up by good advertising of good merchandise.

Get started right and you will finish first. Don't waste your time explaining yourself to your critics. No eagle can be the king of birds who wastes his time explaining his actions to a barnyard hen.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The Y.M.C.A. Life Problem Club has had a weekly attendance of about 24 since its organization, one month ago. The president, Wm. Hamilton, presided at an interesting meeting held aturday at 4.15 at which fine reports from the Belleville conference were given by Max Patterson and Hunter Lewis, followed by short remarks by C. N. Meserve. The speakers for the next two Sundays will be Mr. F. E. Ellis, and Dr. Middleton.

Mr. Carson has returned from Moncton, N.B., and has assumed his work in the physical department.

Mr. H. B. Cowan's wrestling class which was to have been reorganized last evening has been postponed until next Monday evening.

A meting of the Board of Directors which was to have been held Tuesday evening has been postponed on account of the canvass for patriotic funds.

Boys' Department.

The boys' reading room was crowded to hear Mr. Pettit of the Collegiate Institute staff talk to the boys on "Clean Speech, Clean Sport, Clean Living. In opening his remarks Mr. Pettit told the boys what a great pleasure it was for him to meet with the boys away from the school, where they could, not as teacher and pupil, but where they could meet together in the Y.M.C.A. trying to help build up strong, healthy, manly men.

Mr. Pettit was well received by the boys and his remarks will have an everlasting effect on the lives of those who heard him.

Reports of the Boys' Conference at Belleville were also heard from Gerald McClelland, Reg. Brown, Arthur Lewis and Roy White.

Friday night, Dec. 11th, Mr. Brock will give an illustrated lecture in the boys' rooms. Mr. Brock is a great favorite with the boys and his lecture Friday night will be one that will prove very interesting and instructive.

COMMITTEES WILL CANVASS FARMERS OF SMITH TOWNSHIP

Smith township farmers are not oblivious to their duty in the matter of assisting in the relief of the deserving poor and those affected by the war. Three weeks ago the farmers in Smith organised for this purpose. An executive committee meeting took place in the county council chamber Saturday afternoon. A committee of school trustees, composed of two from each of the 12 school sections are to canvass the farmers in their section, leaving it optional with those subscribed whether they will contribute to the fund for Belgian relief or patriotic relief purposes. Every ratepayer is free to contribute to whatever cause he feels most deserving.

No definite sum as an objective was set but the committee are confident they will realize a good round sum. They also anticipate extensive contributions of potatoes and other farm produce.

ALLIES FORGE AHEAD

Flanders Line is Now Slowly Driving Enemy Eastward.

German Menace of the Coast Ports is Ended For the Present at Least and Observers Think Kaiser's Offensive in West Must Cease so Long as Eastern Crisis Lasts---Picked Men Still Along Aisne?

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Taking advantage of the preoccupation of the Germans in the east, the allied French, Belgian and British forces have begun an offensive movement in the west. They are now virtually in possession of the left bank of the Yser Canal and in northern France, particularly in the neighborhood of La Bassee, where the Germans hold a very strong position, the allies are beginning with a heavy cannonade to feel their way eastward.

The same process is being followed along the whole front. The French official communication speaks of "the superiority of our offensive" and the "marked advantage" of the French artillery over that of the Germans.

The following official communication was issued in Paris last evening:—

"In Belgium the Germans have bombarded Oost Dunkirke, situated four kilometres (about 2½ miles) to the west of Nieuport. Between Bethune and Lens we have taken possession of the Village of Vermelles and the position of the Rutoire, to the east of which we are along the railway line.

"Our troops have advanced perceptibly in the region of Rouvroye, Parvillers and Lequesnoy en Santerre (Department of Somme).

"There is nothing else to report."

The afternoon communication said:—

"In the region of the Yser we continue to attack the few entrenchments still held by the enemy on the left bank of the canal.

"In the region of Armentierres and of Arras, as well as in the Oise territory, in the Aisne region and in the Argonne, there is nothing to report, except to refer in general terms to the superiority of our offensive.

"In the Champagne, our heavy artillery, on several occasions, has shown marked superiority over that of the enemy.

"There is nothing new on the eastern front of our line, where the positions of preceding days have been maintained."

The advance, slight as it is in the northwest, has ended for the present at least, in the opinion of many, the German menace of the coast ports. It is believed that so long as the Germans are compelled to keep up the strength of their army in the east they will be unable to assume the offensive in the west. There is a report, however, that the Germans have kept the pick of their western army in the Aisne Valley whence, at an opportune moment they can hurl it against the French lines and make another effort to get through to Paris.

Heavy firing was heard along the Belgian coast yesterday, according to a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, indicating that the warships of the allies again are bombarding the German positions.

The Sluis correspondent of The Handelsblad says the Germans delivered violent attacks yesterday on the trenches recently captured by the allies, but were repulsed, and adds that the allies have made marked progress in the neighborhood of Langemarck, Zonnebeke and Bixschoote. The Germans have been obliged to substitute lighter guns for their heavy artillery, as the inundations have made the use of the latter impracticable.

A despatch from Amsterdam says: "The German attack along the region of the railway from Roulers to Ypres has failed.

"The telephone line between Bruges and Sluis was cut by a British spy, who was shot at Bruges Saturday.

"Advices from Berlin are to the effect that it is generally believed that the Germans are preparing to make a new and violent attempt to break through the allies' left wing in Flanders. Reinforcements are constantly moving forward toward Ostend."

Cannonading was plainly heard, beginning last Thursday, originating in the vicinity of Sonnebeke, five miles northeast of Ypres and nine miles southwest of Roulers, where the German infantry tried to retake the hills recently captured by the allies.

MY WOULD-BE ASSASSIN

By M. QUAD

When it was finally settled that I was to go into the mountains of Wyoming on a hunting trip with old Bill Potts a dozen men called to bid me a last goodby. They looked their pity and sorrow, and their hands lingered lovingly in mine. I was rather skeptical. I didn't see why I should be pulled down by a mountain lion, clawed into mincemeat by a grizzly bear or buried under a landslide, but they smiled feebly and shook their heads in a solemn way. Only one telegram received out of eight or ten threw any light on the matter, and the light came too late. It read:

"If you are going hunting with old Bill Potts you'd better make your will and leave things easy for the widowed and fatherless."

I liked old Bill. He was hale and hearty and good natured, and he could pack a mule, cook a good meal and shoot fairly straight. He was a smoker and a chewer, playing a good game of euchre, and I had every confidence that the pair of us would get along like brothers. We got away in good style, and it was two full days before anything happened to shake my confidence in him. Then as I sat cleaning my rifle he picked up the ax to cut some wood. He hadn't made six strokes before the ax flew off the handle and almost shaved my hair as it passed.

"Excuse me, colonel," said old Bill as he held up the handle. "The ax has been loose for the last six months and orter have bin fixed. I'll tend to it the first rainy day we have."

"But, man, that was a close call for me," I said as I felt my anger rising.

"Yes, colonel, but as long as no damage was done it's all right. I kinder thought it was going to cut yer head off, but it ris a leetle and missed ye."

I figured that it was pure accident and overlooked it. Next morning old Bill found the trail of a lion near our camp, and after breakfast we took it up and started out. I had a Winchester, and he had a double barreled shotgun loaded with buckshot. He took the lead, and we had trailed for half a mile when I stumbled over a stone and pitched forward. Potts was about twenty feet ahead of me, gun on his shoulder and passing over perfectly open ground. As I went down both barrels of his gun were discharged, and my hair curled as the handful of shot shrieked over me and cut away half the branches of a young pine.

"What is it? What were you shooting at?" I shouted as I scrambled up, half expecting the lion had got in our rear and was stalking us.

"Ye see, colonel," replied old Potts, with a sheepish look on his face, "I allus carry my gun on the full cock so's to save time, and I guess I must have bin fingerin' them hammers."

"You dolt! You idiot! You jackass!" I yelled at him as I looked for a club. "If I hadn't stumbled over that stone you'd have blown a hole through me as big as a barrel!"

"Yes, but ye stumbled, and, bein' as no harm was done, I hope ye won't get mad about it."

I told Potts that if I ever caught him carrying his gun in that shape again I'd pump lead into his legs and leave him to the wolves, and for the rest of the day the relations between us were strained. Under the influence of a good supper and a pipe we got closer together, however, and by and by he went into the tent for the cards. He was fussing around for several minutes and I had just opened my mouth to ask him the cause of his delay when a bullet lifted the hat off my head and sent it ten feet behind me. I made two jumps for a bowlder and yelled to Potts, thinking I had been fired on by a renegade Indian, but when the man came out with my self cocking revolver in his hand I knew what had happened.

"You blunder head! You fool of a jackass!" I shouted as I made up to him. But he backed off and protestingly explained:

"Don't get nervous, colonel. I had never seen one of these self cockers and was just tryin' it. I might have p'inted it the other way, but I didn't think."

"No, you didn't, and the ball went through my hat! Potts, you are a fool! You don't know enough to chew beans!"

"What a fuss to raise over a leetle accident, and nobody hurt at that!" said Potts. "Waal, the fact of it is I'm goin' to quit. The boys said ye was a crank and a kicker and that I'd soon cut my job, but ye talked smooth and give orders fur plenty of grub, and I was willin' to take chances. Howsumever"—

"Howsumever what? Howsumever—squint eyed, dunderheaded potbunter!"

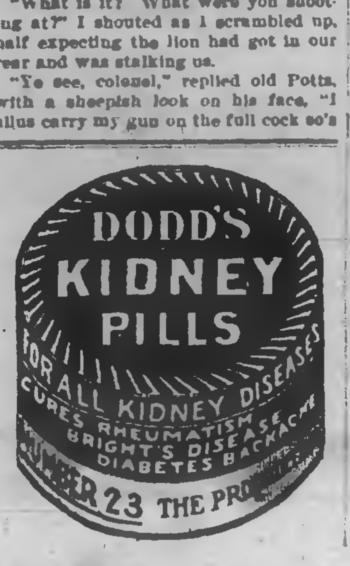
Next day we started the outfit for home. Potts might have reconsidered his resignation, but I wouldn't give him a chance. I couldn't stay up there alone, but it was death to stay with him. We made the journey of fifty miles without a word. When we reached home I paid him off and said:

"Potts, you—you—you are an unhung idiot!"

"What fur, colonel?" he innocently asked.

"Because you can't help it!"

"Waal, mebbe I am, but if ye could only have held on to that crankiness of yers we'd have got at least four b'ars and five or six lions, to say nuthin' of wolves and wildcats. Day to ye, colonel. Awful sorry ye can't help yer meanness!"



A Painful Sight.

"Saw a very painful sight this morning," remarked the athletic boarder.

"What was that?"

"An old man trying to teach his beautiful young wife to swim by reading a book of instructions to her from the shore."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Puzzled.

"I can't make out my boy's standing in college."

"What's the trouble?"

"He writes me that's he's on the left end, and I can't tell whether that's the top or bottom of his class."—Detroit Free Press.

Good Form

Discussions Are Taboo.

It is not wise to be so thin skinned as not to be able to listen to an argument in which your pet theories are attacked without getting angry. But there is a limit to all things, and the person who wantonly attacks your friends is guilty of a gross breach of good manners, to say the least. An expression of personal opinion may be forgiven, because every one has a right to it, but no one has a right to thrust his opinions upon others at every opportunity.

In all good society discussion of politics, religion and other such subjects is forbidden by general consent. It has almost come to the point that the present war is not to be talked about except among friends, as in a general gathering there are certain to be persons who would feel strongly upon the subject of his own particular country.

There are several things to be remembered, one of them that very little is known as to what is really happening in the war zones, and another that each country involved in the war has an opinion as to the cause of it that is entirely different from that of every other country. The only subject upon which all are united is that the situation is deplorable in whatever light it is viewed and that it cannot be made any better by unwise discussion.

The very fact that each person feels so strongly about it is evidence that it is not a safe subject for conversation and that good taste will put it among those not to be discussed except among friends who understand one another well enough to forgive any extravagant expressions of opinion.

The Correct Introduction.

In the case of introductions nothing can be more simple or more correct than the form of "Miss A., let me introduce Mr. B.," and still this is entirely the proper thing. The form, however, means that the lady must permit the man to be introduced to her, not she presented to him. This should appeal to the sense of propriety in any one, it would appear, if a moment's thought is given to the matter at all.

The younger should always be presented to the elder, except in the case of a young lady and an elderly man. Should the man, however, be prominent in any way it is entirely correct to present a young lady to him, saying, "Mr. Blank, I want you to know my friend Miss F."

It is the very simplest thing to remember that an unmarried woman is presented to the married one, a very young girl to any ladies that are older, a man to his hostess and also in such a case to his host, whether the latter be the elder or not, just because he is the one who is entertaining.

Wedding Invitations.

If you are invited to the church function only you need not reply to the invitation. Should you receive cards to a breakfast or luncheon or the invitation bear the letters R. S. V. P. a reply is necessary. Cards to a church wedding followed by a reception need no written answer if you purpose to attend. Your presence will serve as an acceptance. If you are unable to attend you should acknowledge the invitation by posting the day of the marriage two visiting cards addressed to the bride's parents.

If you are invited to witness merely the church ceremony and have only the most formal acquaintance with the bride or groom it is not necessary for you to send a gift. However, it would be perfectly proper for you to do so if you feel so inclined. The gift may be sent within two or three weeks of the day set for the marriage.

No less than 126 pairs of twins arrived in Montreal last year, which moves our old friend, the bachelor, to remind us that misfortunes never come singly.

MIXED METALS

Some of the Curious Results Shown in Various Alloys

In the beginning of man's acquaintance with metals only the softer ones, such as copper, gold, silver and tin, were mined and worked up into utensils, weapons, etc. It was early discovered that an alloy of copper and tin produced a reasonably hard metal called bronze, which was suitable for cutting instruments and, although not as hard as flint, was easier to work and did not break. Then began the bronze age of history.

An alloy is a compound of two or more metals. Alloys generally possess properties vastly different from the parent metals. For instance, gold is the most ductile of all metals. It may be drawn into the finest wire or beaten into a transparent film finer than the thinnest tissue, and yet mix the smallest quantity of antimony with gold and it is not ductile at all. Copper and tin mixed together produce an alloy with a higher specific gravity than either of its constituents, and the same weight will occupy less bulk. Copper and antimony produce a beautiful violet blue alloy.

By mixing together eight parts by weight of bismuth, five parts of lead and three parts of grain tin an alloy is produced which will melt at so low a temperature that a spoon made of it will melt when it is immersed in hot tea, and yet the melting point of each of its components is at least twice that of boiling water.

A small quantity of manganese makes iron almost indifferent to magnetism, while a bit of tungsten will increase its magnetic powers. Copper is a good conductor of electricity, but if a little arsenic be mixed with it it becomes almost a nonconductor. A little tungsten makes steel very much harder. Lead and antimony are used for making type metal because the alloy has the peculiar property of expanding as it cools.—New York World.

BAD YEAR FOR THE SHIPPING

St. Lawrence River Has Seen Long Series of Disasters.

With the end of the season for navigation on the St. Lawrence river shipping men in Montreal are realizing that the year has been a very disastrous one for Montreal vessels. Several have been lost at sea, while many more have suffered severe injuries.

The biggest disaster, of course, was the loss of the C. P. R. liner Empress of Ireland. The Storstadt suffered such injuries that she was forced to go to dry dock for a long time. She is running again, however, with her old captain, Captain Andersen, on the bridge.

Then a few days before the C. N. R. liner Royal Edward hit an iceberg a glancing blow off the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She made her port in Avonmouth safely, but when she was put into drydock for overhauling it was discovered that she was damaged so badly that it took two months to repair the hull. She made one trip and then was taken over for war purposes.

The tramp Floriston, with a cargo of wheat, hit an iceberg in the Straits of Belle Isle and was badly wrecked. She was refloated and brought back to Quebec, but on her outward voyage she ran ashore near Sydney and is a total wreck.

Recently a cable announced the loss of the Manchester Commerce, under Captain Payne, off the coast of Ireland.

In addition to these accidents, the collier Lingan sank the Montmagny fifty miles below Quebec; the Batiscan rammed a tug at Quebec with the loss of two lives; the Montrose went aground in French waters while carrying army supplies; the Anglo-Brazilian was aground in the port for three days through the parting of a tow rope as she was clearing for Australia and New Zealand, while the river steamer Berthier was burned to the water's edge at her berth at Victoria pier.

Beside these there have been many groundings of river and lake craft near Montreal and smaller accidents in the early part of the season due to contact with the ice floes of the outer gulf.

Two new liners have arrived this season, the Cunarder Alaunia and the C. P. R. ship Missanabie. A new freight service has been secured recently by the C. N. R. through the taking over of the three vessels of the Uranium Steamship Co. of New York—the Campanello, Principello and the Uranium. But the coming of the new fleet has been offset by the announcement that the Royal Edward and the Royal George will be seen in Montreal no more this season, as they are required by the Admiralty.

Back From the North.

William Boyd, who formed part of the expedition undertaken by the Dominion Government, to obtain definite data concerning the topography of the country northward from the Peace River district to the Arctic Ocean, has returned to Eastern Canada, after six months' absence from civilization. The expedition was calculated to last for over a year, but the party were fortunate enough to come across an Alaskan whaler, southbound, and by taking advantage of the chance to get southwards, they were able to escape the rigor of the severe Arctic winter.

Mr. Boyd has some interesting tales to tell regarding the trip.

Boyd, who graduated from the faculty of forestry of Toronto University, was chosen as a member of the party which left Edmonton in April. Arriving in the north before the short Arctic summer had begun, the little party made its way northwards noting the topographical features of a country which was hitherto known only vaguely. Following the steps of Steffanson, they proceeded to within a few miles of the Arctic coast. Much valuable information was gathered in the course of the trip which will be duly reported to the Government.

Nitroglycerin and Guncotton.

Guncotton—discovered by Pelougi in 1838—consists of cotton steeped in equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acid and dried. Nitroglycerin is a pale yellow oily liquid, about half as heavy again as water. Nitroglycerin was discovered by Sobrero, an assistant in Pelougi's laboratory, in 1847.

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. This is evidenced by the following letters which are genuine and truthful;

London, Ont.—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking your famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before my baby was born I was so ill I could not stand long or walk any distance. I had to lie down nearly all the time. After I took your medicine I felt like a new woman. I could work from morning till night and was happy and well. I certainly think it relieves pain at childbirth and recommend it to every woman who is pregnant. You may use this testimonial if you like. It may help some other woman."—Mrs. FRANK CORBIN, 132 Adelaide St., London, Ont.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. STEWART, 299 Humboldt St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

When Moles Fight.

You would hardly believe that moles, clumsy and almost blind, become perfect demons when they quarrel. No one knows what they quarrel about, but if they once start fighting one has to die. They will keep on in the presence of any number of spectators, hanging on to one another like bulldogs and burying their enormously strong jaws and teeth in one another's flesh.

Hedgehogs, another type of the quiet, inoffensive looking animal, not only fight, but always to the death, and when one is killed the other generally devours him.

Just Spending the Day.

A woman from out of town walked into one of the big hotels the other morning and wrote her name on the register.

"What, madam," said the room clerk, with one of those engaging smiles for which he is famous, "can I offer you in the way of a room?"

"Oh, I don't want a room," was the reply. "I am just spending the day here."

"Good thing some people spend more than that with us," remarked the clerk to himself as she turned smilingly away.—New York Times.

THE SPORTING WORLD

BUSINESS AS USUAL FOR CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

There will be a Senior Church Hockey League this year was the verdict reached at a meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors last night. Seven churches had their representatives present, as follows:

St. Paul's—D. Loucks.
St. Luke's—G. Hutcher.
St. John's—C. Devey.
George Street—J. E. Smith.
Knox Church—Mr. Smith.
Murray Street——. Webb.
Charlotte Street—W. Heaslip.

Mr. Smith, the 1913-14 president, addressed the meeting and told what had been done by the league last year. The league was composed of seven teams and the schedule was run off without a hitch, St. Paul's capturing the cup. He also reported that, financially, it was a success.

Each of the representatives was then heard from, and all expressed the opinion that the prospects for the 1914-15 season were even brighter than for 1913-14.

It was then decided to hold another meeting on Monday, December 14th, at 7.45, in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. The secretary pro tem, "Don" Loucks, was instructed to notify all of the churches of this meeting, so that any others desiring to enter teams may have their representatives present, as this will be the last chance to enter. A new executive will b appointed on Monday, and it is expected that everything will be ready for a big season.

FEDERALS WOULD INVADE THE STAMPING GROUNDS OF THE GIANTS

New York, Dec. 8. — If advance statements on what should be done is indicative of what to expect, drastic action will be taken by the National Committee, the National League and International League here this week with regard to methods adopted by Federal League promoters and the jumping of players to the new organization. Without exception every club owner on his arrival here has had something to say concerning the Federals, and the Federals, not to be outdone, have let it be known that a club may be placed in New York City next season.

August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, characterized the signing by the Brooklyn Federals of Marquard as "a great mistake," adding, however, that it was the New York club's loss and unless President Hempstead demanded action it was no commission affair. Herrmann also stated that his negotiations with Charles N. Weeghman relative to the purchase of the Chicago Cubs and incidentally peace between the old and new baseball organizations would be laid before the National Commission.

CHARLIE RAY MANAGER OF ST. JOHN'S TEAMS

A banquet was held yesterday evening in St. John's Guild Room by the Boys' Bible Class, after which an athletic meeting was held, when it was decided that two teams should be entered in the Church League. Sports have been dormant for some time among the young people in the church and it was felt that this was a good opportunity to revive the old spirit of previous years. A capable and efficient manager was chosen in the selection of Charlie Ray, well known to all Peterborough citizens from his connection with the local O.H.A. teams of recent years.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mr. Chris Graham.
Hon. Vice-Presidents—Mr. F. Linton, Mr. Meldrum, Mr. J. Howden, Mr. H. Rush.
President—Mr. Walter Flowers.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. A. Pidgeon.
Junior Captain—Mr. H. Frost.
Senior Captain — Mr. Arthur Heard.
Manager and coach—Mr. Charlie Ray.

A concert will be held at a future date to assist in defraying the expenses of the teams.

Young men in St. John's who wish to play are asked to communicate with any of the above officers.

Porfirio Diaz's Poetic Prophecy.

President Porfirio Diaz, who ruled over Mexico for more than a quarter of a century as an absolute dictator, believed that only such iron rule could bring peace and progress to the half civilized millions of that country. Several years ago, when his power was still unbroken, an American who was on intimate terms with him ventured to suggest that the Mexicans were now prepared for a more liberal form of government and hinted that his rule was too severe. The stern old man stiffened his gaunt figure and ran his fingers through his locks, now white with years.

"When these snows melt," he said prophetically, "the mud will be deep in Mexico."—Youth's Companion.

Y.M.C.A. DOINGS

Monday was another busy day at the Y.M.C.A., seventeen events being run off according to schedule during the course of the day. These events consisted of six gymnasium classes, two Bible classes, two hockey meetings, one committee meeting, three meetings of outside societies, the basket-ball game between the Business Boys and the Collegiates, the game in the bowling league between the Examiners and the Gladiators and a supper for about twenty-five young men.

The result of the Bowling league will be given elsewhere. The basket-ball game between the Business Boys and the Collegiates was won by the latter by a score of 21-11. J. Grear and F. Rutherford are the star players for the Collegiates and B. Lundy did the best work for the Business Boys.

We omitted to say in yesterday's notes that two games were played off in the Senior Basket-ball League Saturday evening. The first game was between Jr. Business men and the Pirates and was won by the former by the score of 26-11. The Bankers won on St. Paul's team by the very close score of 22-21. These games were very interesting and are usually well attended as no admission fee is charged.

The meetings and classes this evening with the exception of the Intermediate gymnasium classes have been cancelled on account of the special patriotic meeting in the Opera House.

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day: the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

TO SEND MORE MEN.

Portugal Preparing 4,000 Troops for Service In Angola.

LISBON, Dec. 8.—The Government is preparing to send 4,000 more troops to Angola, Portuguese West Africa. Two thousand men were sent in September, 500 marines in October and another 500 marines are being fitted out for departure this month.

It appears that Germany has armed great numbers of Portuguese African natives, which are commanded by German officers and provided with artillery. The prevailing view in Portugal appears to be that the most useful part Portugal can take in the great war is in the Portuguese African colonies and in aiding the British to carry the war into the German colonies which are contiguous to the Portuguese.

French Ambushed By Tribesmen.

MADRID, Dec. 8.—The correspondent at Tangier of The Imparcial sends news of a severe French reverse in Morocco. A French column of considerable strength, returning to Kenifra after a punitive expedition against Zaian tribesmen, was ambushed by a force of 5,000 Zaians and almost wiped out. The French losses are placed at 33 officers and 600 men killed, besides a number of wounded and prisoners. Two French batteries fell into the hands of the tribesmen.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

COCKERELL—THORNTON.

At a quiet wedding solemnized last evening, Mrs. Annie Thornton became the bride of Thomas Cockerell both being residents of Pterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Pogue at 25 Lisburn Street. They were attended by Mr. Fred Cole and Miss Annie Stantire.

Mr. and Mrs. Cockerell will live in Peterborough.

READER—KILLINGBECK.

On Saturday night the marriage was solemnised of Gordon Clifford Reader and Gertrude Maud Killingbeck, in St. James Methodist Church. Rev. J. N. Clarry officiated. The couple were unattended and will live in the city.

F. C. Cressman was elected to the executive of the Belmont Club at a meeting last night. F. Heaslip was elected secretary, succeeding F. Cole, who has enlisted for active service.

Tea and refreshments will be served at Mrs. H. O. Fisk's residence, 204 McDonnel Street, on Friday afternoon and evening, Dec. 11, in aid of the Canadian Military Hospital, Shorncliffe, Eng. Music. Silver collection.

The engagement is announced in Wininpeg, of Isabel Mary, daughter of Sir Hugh John and Lady Macdonald, and granddaughter of the late Right-Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, to Mr. George Kelvin Gailsford, son of Mr. George Gailsford, of Bellary, India.

The Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, Shorncliffe, Kent, England, has in connection with it several large residences which have been given as convalescent homes. Mr. Donald Armour, son of the late Judge Armour, of Cobourg, and now a prominent London surgeon, is in charge, with a staff of Canadian doctors and nurses. This hospital, the gift of Canadians in England, is already equipped and in use, and is at present full of wounded, but, will be used for our own men as soon as required. It is much in need of funds, and clothing for the wounded and convalescent. Mrs. Fisk, 204 McDonnel street, has kindly opened her home on Friday afternoon and evening, December eleventh, for the purpose of raising funds for the institution. Tea will be served in he afternoon, and in the evening, Miss Hurley will be in charge of a musical program, and refreshments will be served. Silver collection. We know that all are more or less interested in the hospitals for our wounded men but we would ask every person where at all possible, men as well as women, to make a point of being present at Mrs. Fisk's some time on Friday.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF KNOX CHURCH ENTERTAINED

The members of the Young People's Guild of Springville Presbyterian Church, were the guests of the Knox People's Guild at their regular weekly meeting last evening. About a hundred and fifty young people enjoyed a very fine program given by members of both guilds, Mr. Whitfield, president of the visiting guild ably acted as chairman.

Rev. Mr. Craw of Springville was present and gave an interesting talk on Christian Endeavor.

Rev. Mr. McKenzie of Lachute, Quebec, who conducted the services in Knox Church on Sunday last was also present and was called upon for a few words.

The young ladies of Knox Church provided a substantial supper, which was served after the program.

The visitors gave a hearty invitation to the Peterboro young people to return the visit in the near future.

ENTERTAINER WAS HEARD WITH PLEASURE BY LARGE AUDIENCE

How he earned his title of "Yorkshire Nightingale" was told last night by Mr. Enos Bacon, to a large audience in George Street Methodist Church. It appears that out of a large family who came of musical parents he was the only one gifted with musical ability. Mr. Bacon declared last night he was born singing. He explained that his voice was not a falsetto, but perfectly natural and was known as a double range voice.

He reviewed his early life and how he had met most of the greatest statesmen and literary men of his time in the old country. At seventeen he travelled 150 miles in order to meet the famous John Ruskin because of his admiration of the great author's books.

Mr. Bacon has been to the front during the present war. He lay for seven weeks in the trenches at one stretch. His brother was severely wounded and his parents being too feeble to travel to his side, it devolved upon him to go. He obtained a special pass authorizing him to enter the firing line of the allies where he was extremely popular on account of his vocal ability. He described the strategy shown by the allies and how he saw thousands of Germans fall victims of traps laid by the allies.

Mr. Bacon is a versatile man, holding the attention of his audience alternately with readings, songs and accounts of the war.

Government Paid Fair Price

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—That the Government dealt fairly with the owners of the lands of Halifax, which were required for the new I. C. R. terminals, is shown by the awards made by Justice Cassels in the Exchequer Court yesterday Various disconnected properties were expropriated, and in a number of cases the owners were dissatisfied with the price offered. These appealed, and the cases were tried at Halifax last month. The total offered by the Government was $253,195, and the owners demanded $883,250. Judge Cassels awards $261,649, which shows that the valuers appointed by the Government came very near to the mark, and that there was no attempt on the part of Hon. Frank Cochrane to please party friends.

VOCAL RECITAL PROVIDED REAL MUSICAL TREAT

Meritorious Program Given at Assembly Hall of the Collegiate

The concert given in the Collegiate Assembly Hall last evening by Miss Dorothy Allan, Mr. Maurice Park and Dr. Park surpassed all expectations. A program distinctly high-class and yet not beyond the complete understanding or appreciation of the average music lover was supplied. It included several numbers in Italian and French, ably and accurately handled by Miss Allan and Mr. Park. At first glance the program impressed one as being possibly too lofty for such an occasion, but this feeling was quickly dispelled as the program proceeded. Nothing was presented that was not cleverly and beautifully interpreted throughout.

Miss Allan as usual scored very decidedly, her vocalism showing great range, delightful quality and rare sweetness. She excelled in those numbers demanding delicate shades of expression and meaning, taking the most difficult tones without difficulty.

In Mr. Park Peterborough has a soloist with a voice possessing almost exclusive qualities. Soft, sweet and full of expression he has it under marvelous control. For a tenor voice it has great range, capable of the highest tones without losing in the slightest any of its wonderful bell-like richness.

Dr. Park proved as popular as ever in his contributions of violin selections, receiving liberal encores upon each appearance. As a closing number Miss Allan and Mr. Park rendered "The Day is Done," by Longfellow, music by Lohr.

Miss Allan was presented with several beautiful floral recognitions during the evening.

Mr. John Allan was accompanist.

The proceeds were $54.45. After some minor expenses have been paid, the balance will be handed to the treasurer of the Patriotic Fund.

$300 FOR THE HOME GUARD

Request Was for $1000 to Provide Rifles and Ammunition

The deputation from the Patriotic Fund Association withdrew from the council chamber last evening with the joys of victory visible on their faces. When the deputation from the Peterboro Home Guard and Rifle Association, which had been held back by the battlers for the $10,000 appropriation, filed into the room they were over anxious to get started and appeared filled with hope. Major R. E. Layfield addressed Mayor Buller and his clan and read a letter from Lt.-Col. Goodwill who was unavoidably absent. He asked for an appropriation of $1000 to enable their corps to secure rifles and ammunition. They did not expect it all at once but were willing to accept it in monthly payments of two or three hundred dollars.

Col. Miller, who is an energetic member of the Home Guard, also spoke a few words on the necessity of the men being able to handle the rifle. He referred to the Boer War where it took as many British soldiers as there were men, women and children in South Africa, to carry the flag to victory. The reason of this was because every inhabitant from the youngest child to the father could handle a gun. The British met men behind the gun and it was the Colonel's wish that if any enemy should come to Canada's shores that they find men behind the guns.

Mayor Buller said he was in favor of making the grant to the Home Guard. One alderman suggested that the matter be left over and dealt with later but His Worship wanted it decided right there. This course met with great favor from the deputations.

Little more discussion was given the matter and Ald. Green moved that $300 be granted to the Home Guard by this year's council and when they could appear before the 1915 council and apply for more. The motion was carried unanimously and the large gathering on the outside of the rail rent the building with "Three cheers for the Peterboro Council."

JUDGE SOUNDS CALL TO DUTY

An Appeal for Assistance to Help Patriotic Movements

The opening of the sitting of the County Court and General Sessions of the Peace which took place today at one o'clock was indeed one long to be remembered. Unlike the opening of most sessions, the address of His Honor Judge Huycke to the grand jury was of a nature that will long remain uppermost in the minds of his hearers. The charge to that body is generally along the lines of explaining their duties, but today it was that and more. It was marked by patriotic remarks and an appeal to assist the Patriotic Fund.

His Honor's opening sentences were taken up with referring to the absence of Sheriff Hall, who is confined to his home through illness, and also the absence of the late Crown Attorney, R. E. Wood, who has been removed by the hand of death since the last sitting. His place has been taken by another, Mr. George W. Hatten, and His Honor hoped that the new crown attorney would perform his duties in the same conscientious manner as his predecessor.

Reference was made to the two criminal cases to be heard at the sitting, and the grand jurors reminded that in those cases they represented the crown. The jury also represented the public, and in pursuing the latter duties it would be necessary for them to visit the various public institutions and see that the inmates were being properly cared for and that every precaution was taken for their safety in case of fire.

Judge Huycke then spoke of the great war at present being waged, remarking the sudden commencement and the fierceness of it. It is brought home to us, for when Britain is at war Canada is at war. Sons of this country are at the front fighting for the flag, and many others are drilling on the plains of England, preparing to enter the battle. His Honor briefly reviewed the causes of the war, commencing with the assassination of the Crown Prince of Austria and pointing out clearly how England plunged into it only when her honor was at stake. Germany would not preserve the neutrality of Belgium, and for that reason our Mother Country made the move.

The speaker mentioned the fact that Bernhardi, the celebrated German writer, has published another book, "Britons as Vassals of Germany." The only possible way of keeping such a statement from coming true was for the British arms to check their opponents. It is not the privilege of many Canadians to go to the front and fight for the cause, but they can assist, and will assist, by financially helping such causes as the Belgian Relief Fund, Red Cross Fund and Patriotic Relief Fund. His Honor spoke of the meeting in the Grand Opera House this evening and urged all his listeners to be present and to be willing to assist so that no child, no wife, or, in fact, no dependent of those who are fighting our battles, might be in want.

The grand jury was composed of F. S. Breckenridge, Asphodel; Pat. Fallon, Asphodel; Walter H Garnett, Otonabee; Joseph Greer, Otonabee; Dickson Hall, Peterborough; W. H. Hill, Peterborough; Chris. Howson, Otonabee; R. N. Jones, Peterborough; R J. Kidd, Peterborough; Morley Lyle, Peterborough; Fred L. Roy, Peterborough; J. W. Rork, Norwood; W. J. Routley, Peterborough.

"The Chocolate Soldier"

However fickle the theatre going people of America and Europe may be to nine-tenths of the ephemeral productions that pass across the stage, they are notably faithful to their favorites. The universal demand for another season of "The Chocolate Soldier," the exquisite Viennese opera by Oscar Straus, founded on that brilliant compound of romance, comedy and satire by George Bernard Shaw, "Arms and the Man," has compelled Mr. Whitney to assemble again the Whitney Opera Company and send "The Chocolate Soldier" out across the country on another season of setting millions laughing with its spirited comedy and intoxicating them with the varied beauties of its melodies.

The king of modern light operas will be presented in this city at the Grand Opera House Saturday, Dec. 12, matinee and night.

The Whitney Opera Company is eminently fitted to cope with the difficulties of both score and libretto. Mr Whitney's cardinal principle in selecting his companies is that every role, from the manager's point of view, is a leading role, and requires all the care that is generally given to filling that "star" part, in witness whereof, attached is a copy of the program in the manner of the artists appearing: Leila Hughes, Lottie Collins, Lucille Saunders, Charles Bowers, Francis J. Boyle, George Tallman, and Sylvian Langlois, and an orchestra of picked musicians under the able directorship of Sig. A. De Novellis.

OBITUARY

ARTHUR FULLER.

Raymond Arthur Fuller, who died so suddenly yesterday was one of Peterborough's best known young men. He was in his thirty-third year and had lived in this city all his life. It seems that he was taken ill Sunday night, having returned home early, complaining of not feeling well. He gradually grew worse with an attack of what resembled acute indigestion, and despite persistent medical aid, he died early Monday afternoon, retaining consciousness till the last.

Mr. Fuller was generally popular. He was a member of the I.O.O.F. and the Canadian Order of Foresters.

The deceased has three brothers and two sisters. The brothers are, Hugh and Perry of the city, and Mortimer of Sparta, Wisconsin, and the sisters, Mrs. J. A. Tully, Calgary; and Mrs. A. E. Metherel, 268 Reid Street, with whom he has resided for the past five years. Both his parents are dead.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 to Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. R. B. Crobb officiating.

RENT MOTOR ENGINE FOR EMERGENCIES

Committee Also Recommends That Utilities Provide Auxiliary Plant to Supply Water, When Waterworks is out of Commission

HURRY CALL TO ENGINEER

An emergency meeting of the F. W. and I. committee this morning, authorised the renting of a motor chemical engine from Toronto. The cost will be $10 per day, $3 per day for a man, his hotel expenses and transportation of the engine to and from Peterboro.

The engine has two 35 gallon tanks and will be a big help in case of fire.

Auxiliary Plant Needed.

The committee also recommended that the Utilities Commission take some definite action to provide an auxiliary plant, so that water can be supplied when the situation is such as at present.

Commissioners Act.

The matter came up at a special meeting of the Utilities Commission and the secretary was instructed to wire William Kennedy, Jun., of Montreal, asking him to come to this city at once to advise as to the installation of an auxiliary plant.

The lack of water and power was due to frazzle ice, brought about by the sudden drop in temperature. Had a coating of ice formed, the trouble would have been minimized. The trouble is likely to continue unless the wind changes. Men have been at work but those who should know, say it is an utter impossibility to cope with the situation, unless there is an auxiliary plant, whose motive power is other than electricity.

There Are Others.

Peterboro is not alone in her hour of need. This morning not a wheel between Lakefield and Trenton was turning and reports from other localities are the same.

Regarding the water supply for power purposes in Peterboro, The Review has received the following letter from Mr. R. C. Strickland :—

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—It is reported that the City of Peterborough is suffering from low water in the river, causing serious loss to the power plants and manufacturing industries. While I feel sorry for them, I am bound to say that it is greatly their own fault in not insisting on the Dominion Government or representatives appointing competent men to look after the proper conservation of the waters of the Trent Canal system. I have not time today to fully go into the subject, but will confine to one instance of hundreds of others where our water supply has been allowed to flow away in the spring freshet that, if held up, would be sufficient at this season or during the summer months to keep the river at its normal height. I refer to Brown's Falls, where the Burleigh Road crosses Eel's Creek. A dam could be built there for a few thousand dollars that would give 8 or 10 feet head on Big Cedar Lake; the distance from the dam to the further end of the lake would be about six miles; $2000 would be ample to cover all damages, as the lake is almost surrounded by government lands. From Brown's Falls to Stoney Lake is about three miles. So there would be little or no absorption of water in transmission. And if this reservoir was held up and only used in emergency, it would avoid the difficulty which is playing the devil with your industries, and produce thankfulness from many of your citizens, and give them light instead of darkness, much required at the present time.

There is no better time than the present to build the dam as there are hundreds of good men idle in that district owing to the stopping of lumber operations and if these men don't get work soon they will flow into your city before the winter is over. This dam could easily be built this winter and save this large body of water another year. For rest assured that as long as the water supply is allowed to run off during the spring freshet your citizens are going to have the same trouble every year. And if they don't believe this one instance of many that I have quoted let your citizens get the government to send a party of surveyors over the ground and make a report and if they find that I am wrong I will say no more of the other instance of neglect to which I have referred. You Mr. Editor may ask me how do I know anything about these waters? Well my answer would be that there is scarcely a feeder of the Trent System between Georgian Bay and Stoney Lake that I have not in my time made or helped to make navigable for the transmission of lumber and logs to Stoney Lake from the Muskoka waters east.

Yours truly,
R. C. STRICKLAND.

STIRRING SPEECHES TELL DUTY OF HOUR

The Duty of Canadians at Home

The Canadians at Salisbury Plain are being trained and there is no better material in the world than the soldiers, the Canadian people have sent to join Kitchener's army—our army. The Canadian troops can be depended upon to give a good account of themselves. In good time, they will go forward to do their share. Now what is our share?

The Canadian Patriotic Fund was established to care for—in case of need—the wives, families and dependent relatives of Canadian citizens in active service in the armies of Great Britain or her Allies. The government is furnishing munitions of war, equiping the troops and is paying them from the time they leave our shores. The government will send contingents as long as the men will volunteer—because the British Government does not have to resort to conscription.

Let us see to it that in no family of a Canadian citizen who has gone to fight, there shall be suffering in his absence. Every man who has gone to fight in the armies of Great Britain or her Allies is fighting for you and for me. We are comfortable at home.. For him, the cold, the wet, the trench, the hail of bullets, fatigue, sleepless nights, weary marches, suffering—for you and for me. We all can't go to war, but what can we do? If we can't enlist we can give. I say there is no more nobler cause than this Canadian Patriotic Fund and I congratulate you on the high mark you have set before you in this splendid city of Peterboro. Let no man who has gone, feel any anxiety that those near and dear, are suffering from hunger or lack of shelter.. Let us see that there will always be a roof over the little ones and bread on the table. From Hon. W. T. White's speech in the Grand Opera House last night.

Large Audience Heard Minister of Finance and Other Speakers at the Opera House

Last night the Grand Opera House was crowded to its fullest capacity. The first part of the program was a series of songs by the Burns sisters, who are guests at the Grand Hotel, and in vaudeville at the Grand Opera House. The singers were loudly and well deservedly applauded. When the Burns' sisters rendered "Its a Long Way to Tipperary" the house went almost crazy with enthusiasm.

The Hon. Minister of Finance, on rising, was fittingly introduced by Mayor Buller. He noted that the Ministers of the Crown at Ottawa, since the outbreak of the war have been overcrowded with work.

Speaking of Peterboro' the Minister of Finance said that the duties of a Minister were at all times onerous. Since the autbreak of the war they

A POINTED EDITORIAL.

IT REQUIRED exactly two minutes to sharpen the pencil with which we are writing these lines. Sometimes it takes less, sometimes more time to point a lead-pencil, according to the degree of fineness with which the point is made. Those who write sharp, pointed articles, we take it, require a very finely-pointed pencil. The main point here is that two minutes were used to point our pencil. Two minutes for one point mean six minutes for three points, which are worn away in one day's pencil-pushing, provided no breakages occur. Breakages depend on the quality of the pencil and the vigor of the pushing. Usually we break one point a day, so that the requirements of one day may be taken to amount to four points, requiring eight minutes of time. Averaging this, it may be assumed that six and a half minutes are required for each day. That means thirty-nine minutes a week of our valuable time is used up in sharpening pencils. In one year, therefore, 2,028 minutes, or 33.48 hours, or 4.187 days of eight hours each are consumed in the humble, inglorious occupation of putting points on lead-pencils. Over four solid days are thus devoted to sharpening lead-pencils incessantly.

A woman usually requires twice as long as a man to sharpen a pencil, because, owing to the fineness of her nature, she wants the pencil sharper and more carefully and artistically pointed. But, assuming that, in Canada, of eight million people, there is one million that use three pencils a day, and who take no more time than we did to sharpen ours, 4,185,000 days, or 11,465.9 years, are consumed every year in sharpening pencils. This fact simply shows the importance of two things, first, the lead-pencil, and, secondly, the necessity to save eleven thousand years of time by inventing a pencil that requires no sharpening. We might observe that a large proportion of everybody's time is consumed in non-essential things.

ONTARIO'S PREMIER AT THE SAULT.

SPEAKING of the fine meeting in Sault Ste. Marie that was addressed the other day by the Hon. W. H Hearst, Premier of Ontario, the Toronto Mail and Empire has the following to say, in part, editorially:

> "Mr. Hearst can well be content to have his measure taken by his public acts and uterances. His speech at Sault Ste. Marie last night was one to make all who heard it thankful that the province has such a man at its head in this most critical time. It was fitting to the occasion and struck the note of events with which the world at large is ringing. The war has laid heavy cares and responsibilities on the shoulders of statesmen everywhere. Even those administrators to whom the business of defence does not pertain have to grapple with problems the war has suddenly flung upon them. Nearly all regular business of state has been newly conditioned by the war, and many matters that seemed to be outside the sphere of regular government action have been thrust into it by the deranging influence of the war. In his speech Mr. Hearst dealt with the war phases of the public business in a manner becoming a prime minister speaking at a non-political gathering. He showed that his Government is dealing with the situation in a large way. It is looking not only to temporary, but to lasting benefits.
> Ontario agriculture will be immensely and permanently benefitted by the war if our farmers second the efforts of Mr. Hearst's Government in their behalf. He calls upon them to take up as a patriotic duty to Ontario and the Empire the task of greatly increasing their output of foodstuffs. They have a magnificent opportunity. The fields of three great food-producing countries are being largely left untilled, or are being ravaged by men in arms. There will therefore be a great shortage of grain and other foodstuffs next year. More than that, the demand will be greatly increased by governments who have their huge armies to keep provisioned. So much for the market awaiting the produce the farmers have to sell. As to labour, formerly scarce, there are now in the towns and cities many idle hands wherewith to reinforce the help on the farms. The Government is concerning itself both in the interest of these workers and in the interest of the farmers. As the farming industry expands and the farmers' buying power increases, the home market for goods manufactured in Ontario will become more capacious, and thus conditions will be better for all concerned. Mr. Hearst urges the people of Ontario to give the preference to articls of Ontario, Canadian and British production. Canada is importing merchandise of a total annual value $200,000,000 more than that of the merchandise she exports. She should redress this balance by increased production.
> Mr. Hearst's tribute to the work and worth of his late chief and his testimony to the high merit and unselfish loyalty of his colleagues were well deserved, and were feelingly rendered. Ontario has a government which needs no excessive laudation to commend it to the people. The people know they are well and honestly served, and they give the Government their full confidence. They like well Mr. Hearst's way of taking hold of the helm."

THE BOATS OF THE ANCIENTS

It is generally agreed that Noah's ark measured about 450 feet in length, seventy-five feet in breadth and forty-five in depth. It is interesting to note that the proportions of these dimensions are practically the same as those of the great modern ocean liners.

The Greeks and Romans constructed several large vessels measuring upward of 500 feet. These were built for the emperors or rulers and were little more than enormous scows, without any means of propulsion. Upon these were erected elaborate cabin accommodations, and even gardens were planted. A Roman bath was installed on one of these boats.

A vessel 420 feet in length was built by Ptolemy which was propelled by 500 rowers, arranged in five banks, using oars fifty-seven feet in length. The boat is recorded to have developed considerable speed.

The fame of the Thalamegus still lives. This boat, which measured 300 feet in length, forty feet in breadth and sixty in depth, was said to have been the most beautiful craft in antiquity and was used exclusively by the emperor.

A king of Syracuse is also credited with having built a very palatial boat whose cabins were hung with costly silks and decorated with rare statues. After the decline of the Roman empire no great ships were constructed for more than 1,000 years.

The biggest modern ship, the Vaterland, measures 950 feet, thus approximately fulfilling the tradition that ships would come to be 1,000 feet long. —Boston Herald.

TAKING MEDICINE.

There Are Many Ways of Doing It, but Only One Right Way.

Take a fluid remedy from a medicine glass or from a silver spoon. Chemical action of some liquids upon brass creates a liquid that would be fatal if taken into the stomach. A good rule is never to take medicine from anything made of the coarser metals.

While pouring the medicine from bottle to spoon or cup hold the bottle so that the label is uppermost. This will prevent the medicine pouring over the label and staining if not obliterating it. This precaution, especially in the case of liquids that might be harmful if taken by mistake or in the wrong quantity, is imperative.

Unless directions require you to take medicines full strength, it is better to dilute them half and half with water. Never take doses larger than those specified in the directions. Better that they be smaller.

Under no circumstances take medicine in the dark. The reason is obvious. Read the frequent news of deaths of persons who have taken poisons by mistake.

Be sure never to pour medicine back into the bottle. Never fail to shake the bottle before taking a dose of the contents. If there be any sign of sediment, shake the more.

Unless directed otherwise you would better take all capsules, pills or tablets with a half glass of water.

Never use a liniment near an open flame, for a liniment usually contains some combustible element. Always rub a liniment into the skin until it is nearly dry.

Be sure to brush the teeth after taking medicine, since many medicines contain acids or iron, both of which are injurious to the teeth.

Keep effervescent medicines in a cool place.—New York American.

SEASIDE CATCHES

Everything from Whales to String in Flotsam on the British Coast

It may come as a surprise to the reader to learn that whales and porpoises often visit British shores, and that several whale-hunts have taken place at prominent seaside resorts.

According to an old fisherman interviewed by the writer recently, whales are often found when the tide is out lying half-buried in the sand. It was not so very long ago that over sixty bottle-nosed whales were stranded in Mount's Bay, near Penzance. They came in with the tide, and were left helpless at low water. Crowds of holiday-makers made their way to the beach to inspect the whales, some of which measured quite 25 feet from nose to tail. Several mischievous lads slashed the leviathans with pocket knives, and eventually the wounded monsters were killed by gunshot. Later, when the tide returned, the living whales, nearly forty in number, floated off into the sea.

A large whale was once thrown upon the beach at Scarborough, and when it came to be measured it was found to be no less than 49 feet in length.

Perhaps the largest whale ever caught by chance was the one towed into Ostend Harbor many years ago. It measures over 100 feet in length, and weighed 249 tons. Four thousand gallons of oil were obtained from the blubber, and the skeleton was conveyed to London and exhibited to the public at so much per head.

The sea is constantly throwing up strange things upon the shore. Much excitement was caused at Mundesley-on-Sea, Norfolk, some time ago, when it became known that old gold coins were being washed up on the beach. Men and women flocked to the shore in the hope of securing treasure-trove. It is said that on various occasions over $250 in gold coins were picked up on the foreshore, scarcely a day passing but that guineas, half guineas, George shillings and sixpences were found on the sands. One man discovered a guinea and a half guinea well within an hour. Some of the older coins which were flung up by the sea dated to the reigns of Charles II., William and Mary, and George III., and it was surmised that they came from the numerous wrecks which took place on the coast years ago.

There is a class of men and women who earn a livelihood by walking along the coasts of Britain gathering together what articles of value they come across. The larger portion of their "finds" consists of rubbish such as bits of string, bottles, old boots, fragments of fishing-nets, old iron, wood, and so on, but now and again they are lucky enough to discover some valuable relic which has been thrown up by the sea. One man who picked up a living on the sands once found a Roman sword, which he sold to an antiquarian for $50, while on another occasion he picked up a little mosaic box with a map of ancient Britain cut into the lid and worth nearly $500.

Made Him Famous.

A. M. Palmer, the famous theatrical manager, once told a story which illustrated the reason for Mansfield's success on the stage. Mansfield before he was known to fame was cast for the part of Baron Chevrial, a part so small that other actors refused to play it. The night of the first performance Mansfield made the hit of the production owing to the realistic manner in which he simulated death from paralysis. It afterward transpired that he had employed a physician to coach him in portraying the effects of a paralytic stroke.

Kissing the Toe.

The custom of kissing the feet of persons whom it was desired to honor originated with the ancients. The people of oriental nations used to kiss the hands and feet or hems of the clothes of the persons they wished to show respect for. The ancient Egyptians got this custom from the Assyrians, and later the Greeks adopted the habit from the Egyptians. The Romans followed the Greeks.

A Handkerchief Trick.

To take two corners of a handkerchief, one in each hand, and with a single straight motion and without letting go either corner, to tie a knot in the handkerchief seems at first thought impossible. Nevertheless it is simple. Before you take hold of the handkerchief fold your arms, then grasp the two corners of the handkerchief. Holding an opposite corner in each hand, draw the arm apart. That single straight movement will tie the knot.

Two Towers.

Students of architecture may have often wondered why the two towers of Notre Dame at Paris were not of the same size. It appears that when the cathedral was built it was the cathedral of a suffragan bishop, who was not entitled to two towers of equal height, and for centuries the bishop of Paris was suffragan to the bishop of Sens.

Fertile Fields in North.

Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, has received a box of vegetables from a farm at Ground Hog, 53 miles west of Cochrane, and about 500 miles north of Toronto. The box contained as fine samples of onions, potatoes, parsnips, beets, turnips and cabbage as ever found their way to Ontario markets. The vegetables have been sent down to be displayed to the people of the older part of the province as an illustration of the productive qualities of the northern Ontario fields. The lands close to the established centres may be purchased for practically nothing, compared to the values in the older parts of the province.

PERT PERSONALS.

MANY of the most valuable things in the world are utterly useless as security for an advance at your uncle's.

Some men are perfect spendthrifts, and others are married.

Displaying a large quantity of tact is one way of beating the enemy to a standstill.

MADE FOR MINE

A friend in need is probably a friend who is bunting you up.

Graft by any other name would probably be found just as widely in the legislature.

There is a difference of opinion between a man and his landlady as to what constitutes a good appetite.

Many a man doesn't marry because it is so difficult for him to decide which is the cheaper.

A man finds it pretty hard to be up in courage when he is down on his luck.

The lazy man who is determined to do nothing is generally sure of a steady job.

PETERBOROUGH

"ENGLAND EXPECTS EVERY MAN WILL DO HIS DUTY"

Give! Give! Give!

A Call to Peterborough in the Name of Women and Children!

"Lord, God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, Lest we forget."

The tramp of the bread-winners is in the streets. They are going to the front. They are leaving families behind.

Every man with women of his own—every man with little children—knows what a tragedy to the home is the going of the bread-winner.

We call on the people to rally to the protection of these mothers, sisters, wives and children so suddenly deprived of their natural protectors.

$50,000
IN THREE DAYS

A GREAT CAMPAIGN is under way to raise $50,000 in Three Days for a War Relief Fund. This money is for the women and children of the soldiers who go to the front—money for fuel, for rent, for clothing, for food.

NOW IS THE TIME to raise the money—not weeks hence when hardship and suffering have already begun. Now is the time to wipe away every care of the soldier going to the front. Now is the time to wipe away every barrier to enlistment. Now is the time for Peterborough to show the world the Canadian's conception of his duty to dependent womanhood and childhood.

Surely no contribution permitted by your means can be considered too great for such a cause as this: and no contribution can be too small to be welcomed.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 9-10-11, ten teams of ten each, citizens of Peterborough, will give their entire time to the work. They will see personally, every one who should contribute. Be ready for them. Don't disappoint. It is your duty to yourself, your home, your country.

The standing of the men associated with this work is a guarantee of the able administration of the fund. It will be expended under the most careful supervision. The need and the worthiness of every case will be clearly established.

Britain calls for her best sons in this great emergency! Let no man who would fight for the glory of the British Empire be held back because he is needed at home.

Give! Give! Give!

Now is the time to remember the Women and Children.

"Lord, God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, Lest we forget."

The Idea of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Is This:

The soldiers have gone to fight, not for their home town or for any particular locality, but for all Canada.

The whole of Canada should combine to take proper care of their families.

The Fund is one Fund, and in each locality is administered by the local branch.

In Peterborough, for instance, the families of the soldiers will be looked after by the local branch acting for the National Association.

All the families throughout Canada will receive aid on the same basis, and none will be neglected.

This is a sensible and patriotic plan. Peterborough will fall in line. Do all you can, but do it now.

The Local, or Contingent Relief Side of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund

Is for the purpose of aiding families who may be in need owing to the war, through lack of work.

There are many such, and will be more.

They must be judiciously aided and not want.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 8.—The wheat market today was the quietest it has been for a long time. Liverpool cables were ½d lower, which caused an easier opening on all months, and with wire trouble owing to storms news was scarce, which added to the general stagnation. Wheat opened ⅛c to ⅜c lower, oats ⅛c to ⅜c lower and flax ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower. The enquiry for export is active enough, the government being in the market for 1,000,000 bushels, but few sales were reported. Another difficulty which confronts the export trade is securing ocean charters at reasonable rates. Wheat options closed ⅛c to ⅜c lower, oats ⅛c lower and flax ⅜c to 1c higher.

Cash demand is in excess of offerings for wheat, exporters taking care of all that comes on the market to complete space at the head of the lakes. It was ascertained that one firm sold around 150,000 bushels extra No. 1 feed and No. 3 C.W. oats for export.

Inspections Monday were 604 cars, as against 945 last year, and in sight were 240 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—There continues to be a good demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat and some fair lots of No. 1 hard were on hand to be shipped to London at 47s and 47s 3d, but owing to the high rate of freight demand from Portland to this port it was impossible for exporters to do any business.

There was no improvement in the domestic demand for oats, but there was a steady demand from country buyers for Argentine and American ports. Trade in mill feed and oats is active, with prices firm. Local trade in butter is still quiet, but there is a steady enquiry for cheese from over the cable. Demand for eggs is good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 8.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.19⅝. No. 1 northern, $1.15½ to $1.18½; No. 2 do., $1.12½ to $1.16½; Dec., $1.14⅛.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 55c to 58c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 45½c to 46c.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Dec. 8.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.18; No. 1 northern, $1.17⅛, No. 2 do., $1.14⅛. Dec., $1.17⅛.

This "Kaiser" Pro-British.

At a patriotic meeting in Delaware Township, a German-born farmer by the name of Kaiser said he was ready to give his last cent or shed the last drop of his blood for the British flag, although a number of his relatives had already fallen in the present war while fighting in the German ranks.

GERMAN OFFENSIVE SAID TO BE GROWING IN VIGOR

Berlin Claims That Germans Are Pursuing the Czar's Soldiers to South and Southeast of Lodz—Russian War Office Says Lodz Had to be Evacuated to Correct Line—Both Sides Entrenching.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The great battle for possession of Poland continues. The front extends along 300 miles and victory over a part of it, at least, appears to have fallen to the Germans, while the Russians are pressing upon Cracow in the south.

That Lodz is in possession of the Germans seems undoubted and a Russian official report just issued apparently is preparing the public mind for the news by referring to the difficulty of defending the city, which gives to the Russian front an abnormal contour and forecasts a reforming of the line. Details of these mighty battles have yet to be written. The general fact that there has been fearful slaughter and intense suffering from the cold comprise about the total of the information received.

The Germans claim they are pursuing the Russians to the south and southeast of Lodz. Several correspondents were with the Russian army when the battle broke, but nothing has been heard from them for several days. Evidently they are under the hand of strict censorship.

British military experts insist that three-quarters of the best material the German army has been held in the western theatre of the war throughout the campaign, and that the troops opposed to the Russians consist principally of second line organizations.

By forcing the fight in Poland the Germans hope to save East Prussia and to hinder the operations of the Russians against Cracow, says a despatch to The Journal from its correspondent in Petrograd. Following this general policy the Germans have sent forward a new army from the vicinity of Kalisz, which is driving the Russian left back toward Petrokov, and which, it is the plan of the Germans, will force the Russians to concentrate their forces between the Vistula and Warta rivers.

The Germans are desperately attempting to keep the theatre of the struggle in Poland, hoping to force the withdrawal of Russian troops from both the right in the Masurian Lake region and from the left wing in Galicia and especially before Cracow.

The Germans are said to be suffering terribly in the trenches in Poland, where cold rains have followed the frosts, softening the roads so as to make rapid movements of troops impracticable and the transportation of cannon almost impossible.

A Petrograd despatch to The Morning Post says: "While the situation around Lodz is not yet clear, it appears that both sides are establishing themselves in trenches, which is not difficult, as the frost has broken and the rainy weather set in.

"The great numbers of reinforcements which the Germans have brought up from the western front has resulted in continuous fighting on the eastern front. The battle line from east Prussia to Cracow is 300 miles long. Eleven German army corps are said to be around Lodz.

Everywhere the situation is satisfactory to the Russians. The business of the Russian troops in Poland is merely to hold their lines. Meanwhile, on the other sections of the front, mainly in east Prussia and Cracow, the Russians are pushing forward vigorously.

"In east Prussia, the most important feature is the siege of the fortress of Lotzen, which the Russians left untaken on their early dash in east Prussia, thereby enabling the Germans later to turn the tables on the invaders.

"South of Cracow the Russians are advancing steadily, while the movement into Hungary progresses at a satisfactory rate."

Taube Brought Down.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—A German taube aeroplane which flew over Bar le Duc Monday was brought down near Chaumont by a shell from a seventy-five millimetre gun. The three German aviators were incinerated.

PREACHING HOLY WAR

Amazing Sermon Being Delivered all Over Germany

PARIS, Dec. 9.—"Holy War" is being preached in every church in Germany. Mystic, exalting services are held, marked by devout thanksgiving for German feats of arms and supplications to the Almighty for the Kaiser's triumph. A neutral journalist, describing one of their services which he attended in the Berlin cathedral, says: "The interior was black with people, mainly wounded soldiers and women, and the aisles were lined with officers in glittering uniforms. After thousands of voices had intoned the Hosannah, the priest delivered the following sermon: 'Brethren, beyond our Empire the barbarian hordes have gathered their forces to storm the black eagles and destroy the great, strong, fruitful, German people, of whom they are jealous.

" 'This war has been forced on us. The exterminating sword has been thrust into our hands. If thou wouldst live—fight. Who fights not, lives not. Across the bloody battlefield thou shalt finally witness the dawn of a new and radiant Germany, grateful to her sons.

" 'Our brothers, fathers and husbands are over there, rifle in hand, ready to thrust the avenging sword of our beloved Kaiser into the enemy's flank. You German women must be courageous. It is yours to pray and to exalt the bravery of your men-folk.

" 'This is a holy war, wherein no little act of devotion is lost. Nothing is too much for our iron Kaiser. There must be no pardon, no pity for Germany's enemies. The supreme recompense which a German soldier places above everything else is when, stricken by the enemy's blows, he sees the Kaiser pass before him and hears him say, "I am pleased with thee; thou art my worthy son".' "

This same sermon, delivered in an impressive and dramatic manner, the correspondent continues, "is preached in every corner of Germany."

Close to the Berlin cathedral war trophies are massed in the square, including twelve Russian guns, whither the congregation makes a pilgrimage after the service.

had been arduous and exacting in the extreme. The hours of day and night had been filled with the consideration of matters of the gravest importance and responsibility. The large gathering at Peterborough was a proof of the intense patriotic interest which its citizens had in the appalling struggle in which the Empire is now engaged not only for its own preservation but literally and truly for the cause of human freedom throughout the world. It is the most inexpressibly wicked war of the ages and the question arose at the beginning and has been canvassed to the uttermost. Who is responsible for all this outpouring of blood? There is encouragement to humanity, in this because it shows that nations do recognize the existence of an international conscience. The causes leading to the war are now for the historian. The immediate duty is to fight not to theorize. Two things however are plain. Great Britain strove to avert the war. Germany had the power to avert the war but declined to exercise it. Had Germany raised her hand in protest to Austria there would have been no war. Germany wanted war. She was prepared. The German people had been taught to believe in their invincibility. Prussian militarism had obtained their toleration of autocratic government and the crushing burden of armaments. If any doubted as to the intentions of Germany, why all her detestable espionage system? Why the fleet of Zeppelins now announced as the agency of attack upon London? The clear fact is that Germany had long meditated war. The essential principle of German strategy is force and action. Their plan was to hold Russia by a containing force, to hurl their legions irresistibly through Belgium upon the unprepared forces of France. Should the contemptible (?) little British army appear they would drive it into the sea. With France prostrate they would turn their attention to Russia and similarly overwhelm her. Their calculations have signally failed. In outraged Belgium they encountered the most heroic resistance of modern times. Today they are on the defensive on the west. Our Canadian troops will probably be in the decisive engagements of the war. The forcing back of Germany's legions from West and East beyond her own frontiers is slow, bloody and costly. She was almost self-sustaining. The pride of her ruling classes with the military power in their own hands would not yield until driven to the last extremity. Revolution might hasten the event or the intrusion of other factors which cannot be foreseen. The British system encourages the development of individuality among citizens and of nationality among states. The German system would obliterate both individuality and nationality. There should be no peace unless signed at Berlin and upon terms that civilization for a few generations at least will go forward untroubled by despotic ambition and unhampered by the intolerable oppression of armaments.

The Minister said that the National Patriotic Fund was designed to take care of the wives, families and dependents of those Canadian citizens on active service. From all parts of Canada the response had been most prompt and gratifying. Every citizen should do what he could during war time. Those who cannot inlist can give. The establishment of the Patriotic Fund has made it easier for those who are fighting for us at the front. It allays their anxiety as to those left behind. Let us see that there is a roof over the head of their little ones and bread upon the table. No citizen of Canada can give in a nobler cause. What worthier gift than that which goes to comfort and assist the dependents of those who have freely offered to undergo hardships, privation, wounds and even death in the service of their country.

Mr. Ed. Harrihan gave a song of loyalty that was loudly applauded The big audience demanded an encore.

Rev. Father Minahan of Toronto, next spoke, after a vociferous welcome. He referred to Peterborough's enterprise and said Peterborough's prosperity was phenominal. He said, in his remarks, incidentally, that Belgium is crowned with an imperishable halo. He made a passionate appeal for funds for the Patriotic Fund.

Other speakers followed, whose speeches will be given in tomorrow's issue.

NEUTRALS ARE IN SESSION

American Republics Will Assert Their Rights in West

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. — Twenty nations of the western hemisphere yesterday expressed their disapproval of the effects of operations of the European belligerents in the waters of the two Americas and appointed a commission of diplomats to formulate practical steps contemplating a more vigorous assertion of the rights of neutrals.

Gathered in the magnificent pan-American union building, the diplomatic representatives of the American republics urged united action by the nations of this hemisphere to restore trade and remove some of the burdens placed on commerce by the European war. It was the first international conference of neutral nations which had assembled in any part of the globe respective of its possible accomplishments during the present conflict was regarded as the birth of a new movement in international law for the definition of the right of the neutral as opposed to the right of the belligerent.

Underlying the several speeches made by the diplomats was a note of warning that the presence of belligerent warships in the western hemisphere already had produced grave complications between American nations and European powers, demonstrating the vital need of pan-American solidarity.

Secretary Bryan made the opening speech, pointing out that the U. S. sympathized deeply with the plight of its neighboring republic and declaring the innocent nations should not be forced to suffer for the acts of the belligerents.

BRITISH AIRMEN KILLED.

Earl of Annesley and Lieut. Bevor Shot Over Ostend.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Earl Annesley and his companion, Lieut. Bevor, who disappeared early last month, after starting on an aeroplane flight to the continent, have both been killed by Germans. Countess Annesley was notified yesterday that the men were shot on Nov. 5, while flying over Ostend.

Francis Annesley, sixth Earl of Annesley, was born in 1884. The ancestral homes of the Annesleys are at Castle Wellan and Donald Lodge, in the County Down, Ireland. The earl had no children. Walter Beresford Annesley, a cousin, will succeed to the earldom.

"Can't afford it," is a stingy man's excuse, but it seldom leads to bankruptcy.

Removing Wireless

BOGOTA, Colombia, Dec. 9. — The Minister of Foreign Affairs yesterday ordered the removal of the high power wireless station at Cartagena.

Cartagena is a Colombian seaport in the Department of Bolivar, on a small, sandy peninsula connected with the continent by an artificial neck of land. The operation of a wireless station there has been the subject of energetic protests by the British Government, which contended that the plant was being operated by Germans for the transmission of news to German warships. The Under Secretary of the Colonial Department, Charles Roberts, stated that unless this was brought about the allies might be compelled to take further steps for the protection of their interests. The United States Government stated that it was willing that Brittain should deal directly with Colombia concerning alleged violations of neutrality, but so far as has been announced no further steps were taken by the British Government.

It is surprising what a lot of work a loafer will do in order to dodge work.

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

An Embarrassing Mistake

Consequent on a Football Game

By OSCAR COX

"Cuthbert!"

Cuthbert Brown lay abed, oblivious to the call and the shaking he received simultaneously. He had been playing right tackle with his team in a championship game of football the day before and was ready for a twenty-four hour sleep. He had taken six of the twenty-four when his sister entered his room and tried to awaken him.

"Cuthbert, get up! You're wanted to go on an errand."

"What's the matter?"

"Our next door neighbor is dying. They want you to go for a clergyman."

There was something sufficiently impressive in this to awaken Cuthbert. He lay for a moment gathering his faculties, then sprang out of bed, put on his clothes and while passing out asked:

"What clergyman shall I go for?"

"Any one. Make haste!"

Cuthbert Brown, now thoroughly in possession of his faculties, hurried along the street till he came to St. Mark's church, with the name of David Hathaway, pastor, on a board on the wall. He stopped at the rectory beside it, rang the doorbell and was immediately admitted by some one whose figure he could barely distinguish to be that of a woman, for the light was turned low. He was ushered into a parlor without an inquiry as to whom he wished to see or any other question for that matter and was left alone in a room still darker than the hall.

"That's queer," he remarked to himself. "I suppose she's the maid and knows that no one would call at a clergyman's house at this time of night unless he wanted to see the parson himself."

The maid went upstairs and in a few moments came down again and said that the doctor would be down soon.

Cuthbert settled himself in an easy chair and sat wondering what it all meant. Presently he fell asleep.

Then he dreamed that some one shook him; that he stood upon his feet. He heard words mumbled that sounded like parts of the marriage service; he felt a delicate hand in his; some one thrust a ring upon him and a finger was slipped into it; he dimly saw the figure of a woman leaving the room.

Was this a dream or a reality? He remembered nothing more of it or how he got out of the house, home and into his bed. He did not awaken till noon the next day, when the events of the night were much blurred in his mind. His sister awaking him, the walk to the rectory and his admission to the house he remembered with tolerable distinctness, but the rest of it was very misty.

He called his sister, took a roundabout course to find out from her what he had done and discovered that some one else had procured a minister for the dying man. The rector of St. Mark's church had not responded. There remained that singular dream of a marriage, or whatever it might be, of which his sister was not supposed to be cognizant, and Cuthbert said nothing to her about it. If he had been sure that it was a dream he might have told her of it, but he had a feeling that it was not a dream; that while sitting in the rectory something like it had happened, that somebody had been married, and he could not divest himself of a consciousness that he had been mixed up in it.

That day was Sunday, and Cuthbert, having nothing to do, thought continuously of his singular experience. A dozen times he resolved to put it out of his mind. It would not stay out. Then he thought that he would go to Dr. Hathaway and ask him for an explanation. But the matter seemed too ridiculous to warrant an inquiry. Ask a clergyman if he had taken part in a marriage when half asleep? Absurd!

There is nothing so worrying as that which needs an explanation. Cuthbert Brown fretted over the matter for three days; then one afternoon he called on Dr. Hathaway. He was received in the doctor's study, and, being unknown to the clergyman, the latter waited for him to speak.

"Doctor," he began, "I have come to ask"— He stopped short. He was going to ask if the doctor had married him, but, not caring to be taken for a lunatic, he desisted. He began again: "Last Saturday night about 12 o'clock I came here to ask you to go to the house of a dying man. I was left in your parlor by a maid and, being very tired, fell asleep."

From the start the doctor pricked up his ears. When Cuthbert got this far he interrupted him:

"So, you are the party!"

"Party! What party?"

"Why the party that came instead of the right party. What object had you in stepping in between a bride and a groom in that despicable way? You have rendered yourself liable to criminal prosecution."

"Will you kindly tell me what I have done?"

"Done! Why, you married a young lady who came here to marry some one else."

"Great Scott!"

"Didn't you know what you were doing?"

"No."

"Had you been drinking?"

"No. I had been tired out by a big game of football. I was awakened in the middle of the night and came to you on an errand. I was left in your parlor by your maid and fell asleep. I dreamed something about a wedding ceremony."

"Wedding ceremony! Man, you were married!"

"I married!"

"Certainly. I received a telephone call on Saturday, asking if I would marry a couple late that night. I agreed. You came in and were supposed to be the groom. The bride came later and was so afraid that some one would see her being clandestinely married that she insisted on the light remaining as it was. I found you asleep, awakened you and married you. I thought at the time that there was something the matter with you, but the bride was very nervous, very much in a hurry, and insisted on having the matter over as soon as possible. I protested, but"—

"Then I am a married man!"

"You certainly went through a marriage ceremony. Wait."

The doctor went to a telephone booth, called up Miss Amelia Brooks and said:

"The man who married you by mistake is here."

"Thank heaven! How did you find him?"

"I didn't; he found me. He walked in here a few minutes ago."

"Was he intoxicated?"

"He says not."

"That's a comfort anyway. If it gets out it won't be quite so bad."

"Hadn't I better send him around to you? You'll need to confer with him, of course."

"I think I'll come to you. Where are you?"

"In my study in the church."

"Well, I'll come at once."

Cuthbert was informed that he was to meet his bride, and the doctor asked him his name that he might introduce him on her arrival. He and the clergyman talked upon the mishap till the lady came. Then the latter said:

"Mrs. Brown—I mean Miss Brooks—this is Mr. Cuthbert Brown, the gentleman who we supposed intentionally imposed on us the other night or was intoxicated. He has explained the mistake to me, so that I believe he is not to blame in the matter."

"That's all very well, but what are we to do?"

"Where was the man you intended to marry?" asked Cuthbert.

"He was delayed."

"Did you marry him when he came?"

"Marry him! How could I do that when I had"—

"I see. I'm very sorry. I couldn't help it. You see, our team relied upon me to carry them through. I'd been practicing for several days, been up nights and during the game made what was considered the biggest run of the season."

"Did you score a touchdown?"

"Yes."

"How about the kickoff?"

"I made that too."

"Good!"

"Are you fond of football?"

"I adore athletics of all kinds."

"Is your—the man you were to marry an athlete?"

"No; he's intellectual. That's the reason he didn't get here in time. He was working on a problem."

"I see."

Meanwhile the clergyman in order to leave the two alone together had gone out into the church. After having been absent long enough, as he thought, for them to find a way out of the difficulty he returned to the door of his study and listened. What was his astonishment to hear Mr. Brown giving the lady a graphic account of the game, including his part in it, between two rival teams, which had incidentally caused her to marry the wrong man. The rector waited awhile for a change of topic, then re-entered his study.

"Well," he said, "have you found a way out of the difficulty?"

"So far as I am concerned," replied Cuthbert for both, "I have no desire to find a way out of it, but I am willing to do all in my power to free the lady."

"I'm afraid," said Miss Brooks, "that I shall have to make a confession to papa. He will see his lawyer about it. It's awfully embarrassing. You see, papa wouldn't let me marry George. He calls him a bookworm. Papa wanted me to marry some man who would lead what he calls a strenuous life."

"Ahem!" said the clergyman. "I wish the matter might be settled without publicity. I fear I shall be greatly blamed."

"You may tell your father," said Cuthbert, "that if he wants a strenuous son-in-law"—

"That, of course," interrupted the clergyman, "would be the simplest solution if by any possibility it could be brought about."

"Oh, dear!" said the lady. "What an embarrassing situation! Well, I'll go home and tell papa. I'm sure that even if this marriage is annulled I'll not be permitted to marry George."

Addresses were exchanged, and a few days later Cuthbert Brown received a call from Edward Brooks, his wife's father. A long interview ensued between them, followed by other long interviews. Then one evening Cuthbert called upon his bride, and his call was followed by other calls. In time an engagement was announced, and one day at high noon, with plenty of light instead of midnight with a very small quantity of light, Dr Hathaway in the presence of a fashionable assembly repeated the wedding between Cuthbert Brown and Amelia Brooks.

ALMOST INCREDIBLE SUPPLIES ARE NEEDED FOR THE ARMIES

British Soldiers Are the Best Fed at the Front and Have a Wide Variety of Viands — French and Germans Trust to Foragers to Get Much of the Supply — Five Hundred Cars a Day

The soldiers who are fighting in the many armies of Europe eat 11,250 tons of food each day. These figures are based on the allowances made by each country for each man in war time and averaged by an authority on commissariat.

It is figured that the average for each man is 2 1-4 pounds of food a day. It has been stated that there are from 8,000,000 to 16,000,000 men now on the battle lines. Just what the real figures are it is impossible to determine, but 10,000,000 is probably nearly correct.

A box car on a Canadian railroad will carry about twenty tons. This means that to transport the food of one day for 10,000,000 men 560 of these cars would be needed. If these 560 cars were divided into trains of forty cars each it would means fourteen trains drawn by the largest engines in the country.

Each nation has its own system of feeding its men, and now it is realized everywhere that to enable the men to fight at their best they must be fed properly. Great Britain sends food trains to follow each division, and these trains, equipped with the different foods, deal out to each regiment provisions, which are served to the men or are cooked and served from the kitchens. The French also furnish their men with food, especially when they are fighting on the defensive, as they have been so far in the present war, but when they are in an enemy's country they follow largely the system of the Germans, that the country should support the army as far as possible. The Germans in the present war have been able to follow this plan, so that it is probable that they have not had to draw very largely on their reserve stores.

Catering for the army has become a science. Each country has its experts who have figured out just what is needed for the men at home and when in the field carrying arms. Each has figured just what is necessary for all climates, and men who are sent to fight in cool climates have different food from those sent to war in the tropics. They have learned, too, what foods will be best to nourish and sustain men in their tremendous work and have selected foods easy of transportation and which have as little waste as possible in preparation.

It is absolutely necessary that the men should have good wholesome food, and it is also an important item that this food should be put into as little space as possible in order to facilitate transportation.

Each army has its own rations. One ration is for the army when on a peace footing at home and the other for the men when they are in the field fighting. Germany and France, too, have another ration for the men when they are taking part in the manoeuvres, and with these two countries these rations are very similar to the war ration.

In all countries bread forms the most important part of the ration. The British allow their men 24 ounces, the French 32 ounces, and the German 26 1-2 ounces to each man. This bread is baked in the army ovens. The German ovens are drawn by motors and they arrive with the troops as soon as the battle is over. For each division there are twelve ovens and these can turn out 30,000 loaves of bread a day. The dough is mixed in the usual way. Sometimes this bread is turned out in biscuit form. Each man receives two rations, which he carries in his haversack. Each one of these ovens can turn out 2,500 bread rations a day.

The British also have these field ovens, but they also have portable kitchens which are drawn by horses or by motors and follow the army. About four men are necessary to manage one of these kitchens and these men cook the meals for the soldiers, which is served out to them night and morning as long as it is possible for them to do so.

These kitchens make stews for the men, cook bacon, make tea or coffee, and with the British army jams and sweets form a large part of their food. It has been said that the British soldier in the field lives well and often has what might be termed luxuries. He gets his meat, 12 ounces being allowed each man. Then he has 16 ounces of potatoes, 8 ounces of fresh vegetables when they can be procured, 3 1-2 ounces of milk, an ounce and a half of sugar, and a quarter of an ounce each of tea, coffee and salt.

The French ration is somewhat different. It consists of 32 ounces of bread, 9 3-4 ounces of meat, 3 1-2 ounces of fresh vegetables and 1 ounce of sugar. The French soldier also gets, whenever possible, about half a pint of red wine and coffee.

The daily field ration of the German army is 26 ounces of fresh bread or 17 ounces of biscuit, 13 ounces of raw meat, fresh or salted, or 7 ounces of smoked beef, pork, mutton, bacon or meat sausage, 4 ounces of rice or 8 ounces of pulse or flour or 52 ounces of potatoes, coffee or tea, sugar and salt.

These various ingredients are not doled out to the men to cook for themselves, but the food train uses them to make stews and to be cooked in different ways, and then when they are cooked the men are served. Each soldier has what is known as a haversack ration and an emergency ration.

Rich Men Represent Canada.

As with Great Britain, so with Canada, the call to arms found the keenest response from the ranks of the millionaires and the "well-to-do." In Britain the people of title have already fought to a conclusion the claims of their families to a lofty patriotism, and the casualty lists prove the intrepidity of British officers as a class.

Illustrative of the spirit which impelled Canada's rich or "well off" citizens to place their personal services at the disposal of the Empire is an authenticated story which comes from Eastern Ontario. A young lieutenant of 30 years of age, a millionaire in his own right, was among the first to enlist. His family opposed the idea vigorously, but to no avail. "If I, a trained man, refuse to go to war, what sort of example would I offer the rest of Canadians?" he demanded, but the protests persisted. On the day when the troops embarked for Valcartier his brother came to the railway station and offered to equip an entire regiment at his own expense if the young lieutenant would stay behind. "That sounds good," replied the officer, "but it has nothing to do with duty." And he will be found on the firing line when the troops go into action.

PAINT THE SCREW HOLES.

Then You Can Use Them Over and Over Again Without Trouble.

Many persons experience considerable difficulty in getting screws to hold in screen doors and other movable conveniences which are put up and taken down frequently and which are held in place by screws. The holes occupied by the screws become worn, and the screws are often quite loose, causing doors to sag and be otherwise out of proper order.

Bits of paper, strings and small pieces of wood are used to partially fill up the holes so as to cause the screws to be tight, but these work out and cause great annoyance, and a better method is greatly desired.

A coat of paint on the inside of the screw holes is the most satisfactory remedy for such an annoyance.

When screws are removed paint the holes with a small pencil brush or a bit of cloth twisted and dipped in the paint. When the paint fills the creases made by the threads on the screw and thoroughly dries the screw will fit tightly the next time it is thrust into the cavity. The painting should be done each time the screws are removed, and it will protect the wood as well as make the holes ready for the readjustment of the door or other object which has to be changed quite often.—Philadelphia North American.

RULE OF SEAS IS COMPLETE

Allied Fleets Have Absolute Control of Trade Routes

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The mastery of the seas has been realized by the allied fleets, declares the French Minister of Marine, in an interview given to the "Petit Parisien."

"The commercial fleets of the enemy countries, Germany and Austria," he says, "representing twenty-five per cent. of the world's maritime traffic has been annihilated.

"These results have been obtained without fighting. We could have destroyed the defenceless seacoast towns of Triest and Ragusa, but we are not Germans.

"The French fleet has accomplished its task and four months after the outbreak of the war, it is absolutely intact, awaiting future battles fearless of any foe."

FIRE DESTROYED GERMAN RAFTS

Belgian Artillery Frustrated Attack by Enemy

LONDON, Dec. 9. — Telegraphing from Dunkirk The Daily Chronicle's correspondent says:—

"The Germans early Monday morning made another attack on the Belgian lines at Ramscapelle, near Pervyse. They came in numerous rafts, which were armed with machine guns and towed by three powerful motor boats.

"As soon as the Belgian outposts opened fire the motor boats flashed blinding searchlights on them and opened a murderous machine gun fire. The Germans reached the shore and were preparing to land when the Belgians brought up a searchlight, enabling the Belgian and French artillery, stationed some distance in the rear, to shell the rafts accurately.

"The weight of the allies' heavier artillery soon began to tell and the Germans were driven back. Several of their rafts capsized. Belgian troops advanced shoulder deep in the water, fighting the panic-stricken Germans, many of whom surrendered. The others retired."

It is better to try to do better than to strive always to do better than some one else.

MAGIC IN GOLF

"I once saw Walter J. Travis, the veteran, sink the most wonderful putt it has ever been my lot to witness," says Jerome D. Travers in the American Magazine.

"The occasion was a Metropolitan championship at Garden City, with Travis and Wilder of Boston in a hard match. Travis was four down and four to play, hanging on by a thin thread of hope. But Travis settled down and won the fifteenth and sixteenth holes, leaving himself only two down, with two holes left. He had to win both, of course, to even get a half. But his rally seemed to be fading out at the seventeenth hole, and those who had wagered four to one against Wilder—one man I know had bet $200 to $50 on Travis—were looking on with sick expressions. For all Wilder needed was a half here to win the match. And after playing three shots he was only four feet from the cup. And Travis on his third shot was barely on the green, thirty feet away.

"The battle seemed to be over beyond any hope, for Travis was not only thirty feet away, but he had one of the trickiest and hardest greens on the course to putt over. And even if he made the putt the odds were that Wilder would also make his from that distance. Travis had no chance to try for a straight putt. There were two decided breaks in the slope of the green, one to the left and one to the right. And between these two mounded slopes there was a narrow gap between knolls. It was impossible to follow the line of this gap, because the cup was set back of a knoll to the left, blocking entrance in that direction.

"He had only one way to go, and that was to take the mounded slope to the right. The Old Man walked up to the cup and studied the line carefully from that angle. Then he walked slowly back, studying the lay of the ground along the line he must take. He had to figure all this tricky slope to the inch and to the inch for thirty feet. For any slight break off the right line would probably put him three or four feet away at the finish.

"After a careful survey he walked back to his putt and with a free tap sent the ball spinning along. It took the slope to the right, wound its way along this raised mound and, winding, turning, twisting, up slope and down slope, it broke in at exactly the right spot, about twenty-eight feet away, and it then plumped squarely into the center of the cup, taking its last run from a decided downhill spin where the green sloped off abruptly toward the hole. I've never seen another like it."

WAS SCARED BY A FISH; VISION IN RED EAGLE LAKE

It Couldn't Have Been a Dream, The Angler Admits That, Nor a Bear, Nor a Shark, Though it did Look Like a Dog, but Anyhow and Luckily it Got Away.

In camp on Red Eagle lake in the Glacier National park, devoured by mosquitoes as big as cultures, as fierce as tigers and as numerous as drops of water in the Pacific ocean!

This is a bad beginning for a fish story. The language seems to suggest that the narrator has already become unreliable. As a matter of fact, phrases which are strictly accurate may be palpably misleading.

The language of hyperbole is needed to present an adequate picture. Perhaps the mosquitoes are not quite so big or fierce or numerous as stated, but they seem to be.

But to the fish story. And the language of vivid metaphor shall be laid aside. What follows is fact—unadorned, unexaggerated fact. I could not have dreamed it. I cannot even now that I have begun to put pen to paper hope to tell it in such a way as to bring the scene with realizing earnestness before the eye of my brother anglers.

It was evening. I was on the lake alone in my little canvas boat. The fishing had been good. I was returning to camp satisfied. The sack of fish, my fishing kit, discarded tackle, the net, etc., lying at the bottom of the boat, it seemed safer to leave the rod to poke out over the stern, the flies trailing the water—out of mischief, as I thought, where they could not get tangled with any of the truck.

So I rowed along gently, happy in the slaughter I had accomplished and wishing my friends had been with me to do their share. And the rod shot over the stern of the boat before my very eyes!

I had the presence of mind not to make a forward dart and grab for it as it disappeared. Such a violent movement would undoubtedly have collapsed my collapsible boat. I sat in speechless amazement, too startled for thought.

And then close by a mighty splashing and plunging. I turned and saw on the top of the water something swimming, a red brown head and shoulders. I was frightened. It was so huge.

I thought of a bear, of a shark, and stories of sea monsters flashed through my mind. The thing was swimming slowly. What I could see of it looked for all the world like the head of a magnificent St. Bernard dog I used to own.

Then I came to myself. I realized that this was a fish of a species not known to me and of an incredible, unheard of size. He had taken my fly, had hooked himself on to the rod which he had dragged overboard and was swimming slowly because he was drawing it along the bottom of the lake.

I chased him. He dived, came up again with a splashing like that of an elephant in a pond and smashed down again. Almost I could keep up with him, so slowly did he swim and so much time did he waste in his frantic efforts to get free.

If I had been able to row properly, facing in a direction opposite to the one in which I was moving, I believe I could have overtaken him. But I needed to keep my eye on him, and so had to backwater with the oars, losing power at every stroke. I was thinking slowly. I was still too stunned to think normally. I was puzzled by the fact that such a monster did not break my frail tackle in a moment. There was no resistance so long as the forty yards of line continued to unwind or the rod to move easily through the water.

As often as he swung over and dropped down on the six foot leader it simply yielded beneath him. Five times he rose, and the fifth time I was quite near him. He seemed to be anything from four feet to six feet long. I have at home a muskellunge which I caught five years ago in the St. Lawrence river. He weighed thirty-two pounds and measures forty-seven inches. This fellow was much bigger and more terrifying. And I have no other means of guessing at his size and weight.

Then with the sixth leap and dive something gave, and the monster was seen no more. I rowed slowly back to camp actually unnerved by the adventure. Literally—and he who will may laugh at me—I felt afraid to be alone in the failing evening light, alone on a piece of water inhabited by such creatures as the one who had pursued me and whom I had pursued.

I was glad to hear the friendly hail of my guide from the landing place of logs which we had constructed, to see the glare of the campfire and to sniff the smell of supper. Then I reckoned up my loss—a rod, $35; a reel, $17.50, and a four dollar line—nearly $60 worth of property at the bottom of Red Eagle lake!—Rev C. F. Aked, D. D., LL. D., in New York American.

Mr. Tilton Visits the Cottage Where He Spent His Honeymoon.

THE stranger wandered down the village street until he came to a cottage. There he halted and gazed at the vine covered porch, at the little bay window with the red globed lamp inside, at the gabled roof and the overhanging eaves. "How different it looks from what I expected," he said to himself.

Walking further down the street and leaning over the fence, where hollyhocks grew, he viewed the side of the house long and pensively, after which he drew a folding camera from his pocket and took a snapshot of the place.

Across the street an old lady was trimming the dead leaves off her geraniums. He went over to her and asked:

"Isn't this Mrs. Williams?"

"Yes, sir."

"You don't remember me, I suppose. I used to be a neighbor of yours many years ago. Tilton is my name."

"Why, I do remember you now. Mr. Tilton. How you have changed!"

"Yes, I have," he answered, "but not any more than this neighborhood. I came back today to see the little cottage where my wife and I first went to housekeeping. There it stands as it stood in the old days. There is the porch where we used to sit evenings and watch you and Mr. Williams tending your lawn. There is the parlor where we received our first callers and the window where my wife used to watch for my homecoming. It is all there, and yet somehow it doesn't look the way I have pictured it all these years. Even houses change, Mrs. Williams."

The old lady smiled.

"Your house changed considerably one night about a year after you moved away," she said. "It burned down."—Newark News.

Last Resort.

"I don't understand precisely the functions of the supreme court."

"It's like this. You have a dispute with your wife and she decides against you. That's the lower court."

"I see."

"You take the matter to your mother. That's the court of appeals."

"I see.

"Then your wife takes it to her mother. That's the supreme court."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Quite So.

"Oh, Kathryn," cried Emma, "have you heard the news about Little Homer?"

"No," was the reply, "what is it?"

"Why, she has eloped with her father's coachman," said Emma. "Isn't it shocking?"

"Oh, well," said Kathryn, "what can you expect of a family that doesn't keep a chauffeur?"—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

The Next Slip.

"I am tremendously interested in this votes for women proposition," said Mr Meekton.

"Of course, you expect that women will vote."

"I haven't a doubt of it. What I am interested in is seeing how Henrietta will manage to take the vote away from the women of whom she particularly disapproves."—Washington Star.

Difficult Discipline.

"I'm afraid that my discipline is not what it should be," said the conscientious man. "I reproved my son severely and at length for neglecting his duties to go fishing."

"Wasn't he duly impressed?"

"No. He looked me in the eye and exclaimed, 'Jealous!'"—Newark Times

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The morning musical society will meet tomorrow morning at 10.30 in the Greene studio.

Miss Ada Richardson, soprano soloist of Charlotte St. Methodist Church, left today for Toronto, where she will spend a few days. While in the city, Miss Richardson will be one of the principals taking part in a recital, to be given on Saturday evening next, by her vocal teacher, David Dick Slater.

Amongst the audience at the Opera House last night were noticed: His Honor Judge Huycke and Mrs. Huycke, Mr. Matthews, Mrs. Clegg, Mrs. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Coulthard, Mr. and Mrs. Aylmer, Dr. and Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. McClellan, Mrs. Morris, Mrs. McDermid, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. Stevenson, Miss Hatton, Mrs. Sherwood, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Trebilcock, and many others.

There is no doubt that a large number will attend the reception at the residence of Mrs. Homer Fisk, 204 McDonnel street, which she is so kindly throwing open to the public on Friday afternoon and evening of this week. The fact that the program is being arranged by Miss Hurley will be sufficient guarantee of its excellence. The object for which funds are to be raised at this entertainment is one very close to the hearts of all Canadians, as the money is to be sent direct to the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital and all others which may grow out of it are to be devoted to the care of our Canadian wounded, and will therefore appeal most strongly to us all.

Hon. W. T. White and Mrs. White, who were stopping at the Empress Hotel as the guests of Mr. Burnham, M. P., attended the King's Daughters tea in the grill room and met many of the local ladies. The Mayor and Miss Buller dined with Hon. W. T. White and Mrs. White and Mr. Burnham after which the party drove to the Armouries, where Mr. White inspected the Home Guard. The visitors with their host and the Mayor then drove to the corner of Hunter and George streets, where the Minister viewed the march-past and received the salute. Mrs. White's party at the Patriotic meeting in the theatre consisted of Mrs. McNulty, Mrs. Gillespie, Mrs. Johnston and Miss Buller. The distinguished visitors departed on the 12.15 p.m. train.

Bearing in mind the striking success achieved by the Daughters of the Empire in the Oriental Tea Rooms a few weeks ago, the King's Daughters on Tuesday afternoon took charge of the tea rooms at the Empress Hotel. The rooms presented a most attractive appearance, and judging by the numbers who patronized them, in the course of the afternoon, a very handsome sum must have been realized. Amongst those who took advantage of this delightful method of helping a good cause were the Hon. W. T. and Mrs. White, who were entertained by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., Canon and Mrs. Davidson, Dr. Halliday, Mr. F. D. Kerr, Mrs. Archer, Mrs. Barnes, Mrs. Clegg, Mrs. Cruickshanks, Mrs. White, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Corcoran, Miss Melville, Mrs. Harstone, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Suckling, Miss Helen Davidson, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. W. H. Moore, Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, Mrs. McDermid, Mrs. Roy, Mrs. Denne, the Misses Denne, Miss Dobie, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. Burdon, Mrs. Spence, Mrs. Young, Mrs. McGhie and many others. Mrs. Travers also entertained the members of the staff of the Bank of Montreal and a number of the younger set. Those in charge of the tea tables were Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Coulthard, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Turner, Miss Halliday, Miss Hall, Miss English, Miss Roger, Miss Pearce.

The meeting held last night in the Opera House under the auspices of the committee in charge of the local Patriotic Fund is one that should long be remembered in Peterborough, not only on account of the merit and power of the speeches delivered, but for the enthusiasm and sympathy of the audience, where, after all is said and done, the real power lies. If we may judge from the audience present last night, the fund in Peterborough may not merely reach the $50,000 mark, but may extend much further. Peterborough as a city may be a little slow to grasp the needs of the situation, but now that she is thoroughly aroused she is sure to prove herself second to none in Canada. The presence of the Home Guard undoubtedly did a great deal to touch the hearts and stir the imaginations of all in the building and proved that we have nothing to fear at home. The men who will be working at raising these funds the next three days should find their work a labor of love after the heart-stirring appeals heard last night and the wonderful impetus which will be supplied by the generous grant from the City Council, which makes us feel that we have a right to be proud of Peterborough.

THERMOMETER IS GOING UP

Committees are Greatly Encouraged in Efforts for Fund

SOME CONTRIBUTIONS

Busy, did you ask. Verily friend. Takes one hundred active hopeful men, all in a big hurry, to get cards assorted, names tabulated to the taste of each. There is ever some one man who may better and more successfully approach by one than another. Pick out the man who wnoks he can handle the subject and to the job. All makes for success.

Some smart Aleck who wished to offer excuse for not contributing demanded to know what had become of the balance of the South African Fund, raised eight or nine years ago. Said, in a reckless way, that it had been corralled by the government and used for election purposes. Did not say which government, for he never knew.

For the information of the friends and to the extinguishment of all knockers know ye, that the balance of the fund, amounting to about $70,000 was turned over to the Canadian Patriotic Fund on its organization. It had been, that is the South African Fund, held all these years in trust. Put to a good purpose, don't you think. Surely. Another one nailed. The barn door will be covered presently.

The Peterborough Cereal Company make the fine subscription of one hundred bags of Reindeer flour, and stipulate, which is quite right that it be distributed by the committee for the benefit of families of soldiers who have gone to the war from Peterborough and vicinity.

Still a few more are coming in. Mr. T. F. Matthews makes a personal subscription of $500. The firm of Matthews-Blackwell Co. have done liberally in addition. The Matthews' employes have given the day's wage and the handsome result is nearly $300.

Adj. McElhiney addressed a meeting of the C.G.E. employes during noon hour on Wednesday. He is putting the case as only the Adjutant can put it and the results will be seen in the spasmodic and permanent rise in the line of the big thermometer.

Some large sums are held over. These the committee are after. They will hang on and if absolutely get a bailiff's warrant to bring the hesitants to line.

Brampton town has done itself proud. Not a doubt of it. It is pledged to contribute $4,000 a year so long as the war lasts. The first day of the collections brought in nearly $3,500, and all given in moderate amount.

The announcement in the committee rooms that the Canadian General Electric Company had made the fine subscription of $1000 was a cheering one. This amount is for the benefit of the local relief. It will be put away where it can be handy to do the most good. The statement following that Mr. E. A. Peck had given $500 as his subscription was received with cheers until the tables rattled. It was something fine. Mr. Peck gives from a sense of duty that is in line with his conception of duty as a citizen. Few better men than Peck.

Other subscriptions rolled in. A good one from Mr. W. G. Ferguson was good to look upon. The local agency of the Bank of Montreal sent $100. The head office has already given $100,000 to the Dominion Fund.

It may be added that the Canadian General Electric Company has also given $30,000 to the Dominion Fund. It has also equipped a corps of engineers and sent them to the field and will pay all salaries while these men are on duty. Good for the company. Just what one would look for it to do.

Canvassers were given the suggestion to let no man presumably guilty escape. That is, guilty of having money, even in a small amount. All should help.

Read Brothers, of the Cleaning & Pressing establishment on Rubidge street, write to say that the firm will donate to the fund ten per cent. of the gross receipts each month. Any one of the officials of the local organization is invited to call once each month and run over the books and share up. Good for you, gentlemen, but we will take your patriotic word for it.

Bonner Worth Company send in the regular contribution of something like fifteen dollars. The fund will climb if we can only get enough of just such subscriptions and from such real loyal hearts.

The Licensed Victuallers send in a wad that totals a trifle over $700. Good for the craft. They can be relied upon to do a liberal share and hold up their end.

The Cressman Company announce that one day's pay of all hands will go to the fund. Fine. Other stores will do the same. With enough stores and enough days' pay the fund would be assured.

Watch the big thermometer at the door of the committee room. It will show the fund as it climbs.

PRAISE FOR HOME GUARD

From Minister of Finance and Col. Ponton

Swinging by to the cheerful strains of "Tipperary," with a military smartness that left little to be criticised, Peterborough's Home Guard more that surprised Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, as he stood by his carriage at attention, receiving salutes and responding as the companies marched by.

"I came here expecting nothing like I found; indeed I would have been surprised had I witnessed half the number of men in your home guard."

The Minister thus expressed his feelings to the officers of the local staff during his formal inspection of the guard that was made in the Armouries previous to the parade.

Hon. Mr. White, accompanied by Mrs. White, Mr. J. H. Burnham, and His Worship Mayor Buller, entered the Armouries shortly after seven o'clock. Introductions were made, and accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel Goodwill, Colonel Miller and Major Layfield, the distinguished visitor passed in front of each company as they stood drawn up in excellent military formation. Coming back he expressed to Colonel Goodwill his extreme surprise and admiration.

To The Review last night, Col. Ponton also spoke very highly of the showing made by the guard.

STIRRING SPEECHES

Rev. Father Minehan.

Rev. Father Minehan, when called to address the meeting received an ovation, and when the applause had subsided said: "I feel very much the exceedingly great honour in being invited here to-night to assist in this cause. To address an audience is more of an honour, and to receive an invitation from a Corporation was an overwhelming honour. (Laughter). The Minister of Finance spoke to you in a manner than I am sure has pleased us all." Father Minehan paid a glowing tribute to the Hon. Mr. White, saying he was a clever man and that it would have paid the City of Toronto to have paid him five times his salary and retained his services. Now good financial men, he continued, are not all orators. Mr. White was an exception, and the Rev. speaker dwelt for a few moments on some of the main points of the Minister's address.

A New Brotherhood.

He believed that out of this was would come a new brotherhood that shall arise and fulfill Tennyson's famous lines "in Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World." The time is coming when East and West shall unite in one great brotherhood. This time, if it comes, and I hope it will come, will be because of Belgium and Great Britain. The Minister of Finance showed his breadth of mind by paying a tribute to Germany, but the German we are fighting is not that of Kant or Goethe, but of Essen and Berlin. When you compare the chivalry of heathen Japan with the deviltry of so-called Christian Germany, you ask what will the world think? They must think that Germany is not a representative of Christianity. The speaker instanced the occasion when the Japanese gave notice of an intended bombardment so that non-combatants could remove to a place of safety. When the nations saw, with what chivalry Britain came to the help of the Belgians to preserve her neutrality, they will judge Christianity by that, not by the Germany of the Kaiser.

If you want to see how important it is that Great Britain shall have a preponderating influence in settling the question of liberty, let us see what her position is.

From every portion of her world extended Empire there came, the most generous offers of men and money in aid of Great Britain. Even, the Kaffirs working in the mines gathered their shillings and sent them to Great Britain. Why? Because the best brand of liberty the world has ever seen is under the Union Jack. (Applause). Britain is not fighting for Czardom, but that the ideals of democratic government by the whole people for the whole people may, triumph. All the nations recognize that. They recognize the cause of liberty is bound up in the cause of the Allies.

It is all important than another attempt at Czardom be prevented, and Britain must have a preponderating voice, and to have that she must have at her back an army.

Father Minehan enlivened his address by several stories that he told in his own inimitable style, and which roused the audience to interest and enthusiasm in his speech. He instanced the case of a dead son who was being brought back to the mother who was being well looked after by those at home. Her remaining son would have been justified in not fighting had she been left unsheltered and uncared for. A country that does not look after its dependents is not worth fighting for, and neither is a city. He closed by saying he felt sure that in the next few days steps would be needed to be taken, not to stir their enthusiasm, but to moderate their zeal. (Applause).

CITIZENS ARE ALARMED.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir, — Our citizens have become alarmed at the condition in which we find ourselves morning after morning, owing to the anchor ice in the river.

I am told that such condition of affairs is liable to recur year after year during different periods of the winter on account of the comparatively small quantity of water in the basin of the river.

"I wish to ask, "Does anchor ice accumulate in Lakefield or Young's Point, where there are large bodies of lake water behind the wheels?" Some tell me that there is no anchor ice there. If so, does it not behoove the Utilities Commission to acquire one or other of these water privileges and thus avoid danger through fire, and the inconvenience we apparently will continue to suffer in the future?

Yours, etc.,
CITIZEN.

Lady Decies Wounded.

LONDON, Dec. 9. — A despatch from Dunkirk to The Westminster Gazette, describing the terror of the populace at the appearance of a Taube over Dunkirk, reveals the wounding of Lady Decies.

"On the occasion of the last visit of a Taube one of the bombs killed a woman and wounded a young girl so her arm had to be amputated.

"Lady Decies, who has been doing hard Red Cross work here for the past couple of mouths, happened to be passing close to the spot where the bomb fell. She was struck on the shoulder by a splinter of iron, and as long as she lives will carry the mark as a memento."

GAINS MADE NO REVERSES

THE FRENCH STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 10. — (Official Statement.) -- "December 9th passed quietly in Belgium as well as in the vicinity of Arras, where the enemy made no attempt at a resumption of offensive operations. Further to the south, in the region of Lequesnoy and Andechy, we made advances varying from 200 to 600 yards, and maintained them.

"In the Aisne region, in Champagne, and about Rheims, the French heavy artillery again displayed superiority over German guns.

"In the region of Perthes, in the Argonne, on the heights of the Meuse, and in the forest of La Pretre, we have either repulsed attacks or captured trenches. In a word, the Allies made gains in several places and suffered no reverses."

GERMAN CRUISERS FLEEING TOWARD SANTA CRUZ.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 10. — Wireless reports received here indicate that the German cruisers Dresden and Nurnberg, survivors in the engagement with the English squadron on Tuesday, in which the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig were sunk, closely pursued by British warships, are fleeing in the direction of the port of Santa Cruz on the Argentine coast, north of the Atlantic entrance to the Straits of Magellan and west of the Falkland Islands.

It is reported here also that the German auxiliary cruiser Prince Eitel is cruising in the South Atlantic, and that she has on board fifteen hundred German soldiers.

NO ADVICES FROM JAPANESE WARSHIPS

TOKIO, Dec. 10. — The British Government has communicated to Japan an official account of the sinking on December 8th, off the Falkland Islands, of the German cruisers with the loss of about eighteen hundred men.

Reports make no mention by name of the British warships which took part.

Japanese naval authorities say that no advices concerning this combat have been received from Japanese warships on patrol in southern waters, consequently it is presumed they did not take part in the action.

The British squadron in the South Atlantic, according to information given out here, was reinforced by several vessels armed with guns of heavy calibre.

CZECH REGIMENTS REVOLTED.

GENEVA, Dec. 10. — The correspondent at Prague of the Geneva Journal says a deep impression has been created in Vienna by the revolt of four Czech regiments serving against Servia, which occurred on the battlefield.

NOT THE PEOPLES, BUT THE WAR PARTIES

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 10. — Dr. Carl Liebknecht, socialist member of the German Parliament, in an article published in Berlin explaining his position, says: "This war was not desired by any of the people affected, nor was it kindled to promote the welfare of Germans or any other people. It was created by the common action of the German and Austrian war parties in the obscurity of semi-absolutism and secret diplomacy in order to anticipate their adversaries.

"At the same time, the war is a Napoleonic attempt to unnerve and crush the growing labor movement."

FUND GROWS TOWARD MARK

It's a Long Way But the Going's Good, With the Goal in Sight

Thursday morning and the committee room filled with active, earnest pushing business men bent on one object, to climb the second grade to the top of the Patriotic Fund mountain. The lines at the top will be mined and stormed on Friday afternoon, if not earlier. Just now reinforcements are being brought up, cheered and helped by the big success of Wednesday. The total of new givings when grouped together showed that between $32,000 and $33,000 had been turned in in subscriptions with a considerable amount of it in currency. Alderman Duffus, who undertook to red paint the mercury line in the big thermometer found that the brush did not stop exactly at the figures as above. So while the line says that the altitude of $34,000 had been reached it was not strictly correct at the time. But by the hour that this is read it will have been long passed.

The reading of the list of the larger sums brought out hearty cheers. In another column the returns by teams are given. They are most creditable. Today will see the total added to and the sum in all away over the $40,000 mark.

Such a campaign as this has its side lights. All sorts of situations turn up to be handled. Some surprises, both ways. Those that swell the fund and those that are a disappointment. A couple of canvassers made their way to a place of business. They speculated as to the amount that the owner would give. Agreed that if he were stung for $25 it would be about right, for, mind you, these canvassers are of judicial mind. It was found that a subscription of $10 had been taken a few minutes previous by others calling. Asked, they said that if the amount as a total was made $25 it would be fine. The business man walked to his desk and returned with a check for $65, with the remark that he guessed he'd make it $75. The merchant guessed right.

"Tis a long, long way to fifty-thousand,
'Tis a long way to go,
That is why we're putting on this rousement,
Faith, we want you all to know.
Good bye, petty giving,
Good bye shirking share.
'Tis a good long way to fifty-thousand,
But we will get there.

We will accept contributions in kind. That means that if you would love to give, have it not to give but might give something that could be turned into money, please send it in. We will dispose of it. The value realized will be turned in as a subscription.

A HAPPY-GO-LUCKY POLICY

THE COMPLETE disorganization of industry in Peterborough yesterday, caused by the failure of the power plants to deliver electric power, calls for action on the part of the authorities. To say that the lack of power was caused by a condition that was unavoidable is to dodge responsibility for one-horse methods of doing business. We know that an unusual combination of weather conditions caused the trouble, but there were plenty of precedents that should have been heeded by having some means of meeting just such a circumstance as did arise.

The Hydro-Electric encountered this very difficulty years ago in developing power at Niagara Falls. It has been overcome and provided against. Every Fall and Spring, weather conditions may produce much trouble by needle or anchor ice. These facts were well known, or should have been well known, to those supervising the production of power for Peterborough, yet, in spite of this, no adequate provision has been made. From the Commissioners down, there appears to have been inaugurated a policy of drifting, if not of inefficiency, that was satisfactory only so long as no untoward circumstances disturbed the easy tenor of their ways. Men are elected or appointed to positions, not to watch things go as a boy does a toy engine, but to be able to operate whatever is under their care in both favourable and unfavourable times.

Yesterday, only one of the Water, Light and Power Commissioners was on the job.

Now it is recommended that an auxiliary plant be built for use in emergencies. Why was it not built long ago? Do they know the means adopted at Niagara for overcoming needle or anchor ice? It is essential that this city should not rush into a means of meeting these conditions, but should know all the methods adopted by other places for similar conditions, do what appears best, and do it immediately.

GERMAN SHIPS SUNK OTHERS PURSUED

Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipsig Destroyed in Battle.

British Fleet Under Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee Meets and Defeats German Fleet off Falkland Islands---Dresden and Nurnberg Get Away, But Are Hotly Pursued---British Casualties Few.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—A British squadron under command of Vice-Admiral Sir Freedrick Sturdee, chief of the war staff, engaged a German squadron, under Admiral Count von Spee, off the Falkland Islands, in the South Atlantic, Tuesday, and won a victory which is being acclaimed throughout England.

The armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the protected cruiser Leipsig, three of the German warships which had been menacing British shipping, and part of the squadron which sank the British cruisers Good Hope and Monmouth in the Pacific on Nov. 1, were destroyed, while the cruisers Dresden and Nurnberg, the two other vessels which composed the German squadron, made off during the fight, and, according to latest accounts, are being pursued. Two colliers were captured.

The announcement of this engagement and victory, which was the most important naval engagement of the war, with the exception of that off Heligoland last August, was made last evening in a statement by the Admiralty of less than one hundred words.

The following announcement was issued by the official information bureau:—

"At 7.30 a.m. on Dec. 8, the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Nurnberg, Leipsig and Dresden were sighted near the Falkland Islands by a British squadron under Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee.

"An action followed, in the course of which the Scharnhorst, flying the flag of Admiral Count von Spee, the Gneisenau and the Leipsig were sunk. The Dresden and Nurnberg made off during the action and are being pursued.

"Two colliers also were captured.

"The vice-admiral reports that the British casualties are very few in number.

"Some survivors have been rescued from the Gneisenau and the Leipsig."

The statement makes reference to some survivors rescued from the Gneisenau and the Leipsig, but no mention is made of the crew of the Scharnhorst, which was the flagship of the German admiral, being saved, and it is thus presumed that Count von Spee, his officers, and men, went down fighting.

The British casualties were light, but beyond the fact that the British squadron was commanded by Vice-Admiral Sturdee, no information is vouchsafed regarding the ships engaged, and the newspapers are enjoined not to speculate, as "other combinations may be effected."

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed in London over the victory, and the general impression is that it will be completed, as the Admiralty would not be likely to send ships that could not overtake the Dresden and Nurnberg, which are 24-knot and 23-knot vessels, respectively, and probably even slower after their long service. They are at a disadvantage also because of their small coal capacity.

The British squadron which engaged the Germans left England without the knowledge of the general public, and until his name was mentioned it was believed that Vice-Admiral Sturdee was serving in home waters.

The fact that he was taken from the post of chief of the war staff is indicative of the determination of the British Government to clear the Pacific and South Atlantic of all German warships. It is believed, therefore, that the British commander is at the head of a formidable squadron.

In addition to the Dresden and Nurnberg, only one German warship —the Karlsruhe— is now unaccounted for in those waters, although there may be one or two armed merchantmen which the allies have not rounded up.

COMMISSION CRITICIZED

For not Having Provided for Uninterrupted Service of Water

Severe criticism has been directed by ratepayers against those who it is claimed, were responsible for the situation, in which the city found itself, for several days, when factories were forced into idleness and the city was without water. It was generally felt that those in charge had not been on the job and had been caught napping, thus placing the city in a perilous position.

The Review has made inquiries in many quarters and the general expression of opinion is, that the men in charge of the waterworks, were face to face with a situation that could not be easily overcome.

Some, however, say an auxiliary plant should be provided while others take the view that the board of commissioners were negligent in not taking the step long ago.

One statement made is to the effect that there is not sufficient water and that the low water is the cause of all the trouble.

Back to Normal.

Today the water and power service is doing business in the same old way. W. H. Moore, K.C., a member of the commission told The

JURY RETURNS VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY

After being out over an hour and ten minutes the jury in the case of Joseph Scott charged with having illicit relations with Mary Francis, a girl of thirteen years of age, at the General Session of the Peace yesterday before Judge Huycke, returned and announced their verdict as "not guilty." In a few words His Honor discharged the prisoner.

The case had occasioned more interest than any trial in local courts since Henderson faced a jury of twelve on the charge of murder. At ten o'clock in the morning the court was called to order and from then till half past ten at night, with the exception of two short periods for dinner and supper, every available seat in the galleries was taken and crowds lined the exits. During the afternoon two or three hundred persons were turned away.

MAY BE CLUE TO DOROTHY ARNOLD

Name on Bible Now in the Possession of Police

San Antonio, Texas, Dec. 10.—The name "Dorothy Arnold" written on the fly-leaf of a Bible in possession of a young woman arrested here last night caused the police to investigate whether the Bible had any connection with Dorothy Arnold, the long missing New York girl. A slip of paper had been pasted over the name.

New York, Dec. 10. — John S. Keith, counsel to Francis B. Arnold, father of the missing Dorothy Arnold, said that he placed no value whatever in the San Antonio clue.

"The girl who was arrested certainly is not Miss Arnold," he said. It is barely possible that the handwriting in the Bible is that of Miss Arnold. If so, I can identify it in a minute Even if it were, it would not tend to prove very much."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1914

THE VINDICATION OF BRITISH NAVAL POLICY.

THE TRIUMPH of the British squadron in the South Atlantic over the German ships that defeated Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock off the coast of Chili, is a glorious vindication of Britain's policy of maintaining command of the sea. Some have said, and with some reason when the Monmouth was sunk, What is the British navy doing? Is Britain able to command the sea? Even after Cradock's defeat, which was at the same time a proof of British courage and sacrifice, the long lines of German merchant vessels in the harbour of New York, and in other American ports, were undisturbed by any preparations for going to sea. The great victory in the South Atlantic leaves only one German warship, the Karlsruhe, unaccounted for, and it is hoped that before many days there will not be a German warship on the high seas. The trade routes will be then entirely free, in spite of all the power and wealth of two great European nations, which, aided by Turkey, have struggled hard and with much success, to destroy the British trade. Admiral Cradock has been avenged, a very heavy blow has been struck at Germany, and another proof given of British sea power, its worth and force in the affairs of the Empire and the world. Long may it flourish as the most powerful friend in the world of fair play to all.

THE END OF THE WORLD AND THE WAR.

A FEW DAYS AGO an Anglican minister in Hamilton gave an eloquent and interesting address there, in which he endeavoured to prove that this war is the last great war prophesied in the Bible as immediately preceding the end of the world. The speaker went deeply into details and quoted as evidence passages from both the old and new Testaments. The address certainly was interesting and showed care in its preparation. The end of the world was, in his opinion, not far off.

Without going into the meanings of several passages that the speaker read into them, we think it would be better to concentrate energy on practical subjects, instead of scaring people who have neither the time nor capacity to analyze arguments. If it is true that no man, not even the angels in Heaven, know when the world will cease to exist, why waste time by investigating a subject impossible of solution? A number of well-intentioned people have been thinking that this war is a prophecy of the end of the world, without relying on proper evidence or reason. It is foolish to build on any rash supposition. No good will come of it.

In the year 999 a fanatical priest preached the end of the world due in the year 1000. Thousands of people believed him, with the result that they refused to sow crops for the following year. What was the use of it, when the world would end the next year? The people gathered in the churches and cathedrals; the year 1000 came and passed; famine and plague followed, and the deluded people became once more practical people, attempting to solve the problems of life.

We do not think that this is the last great war nor that the end of the world is near, because we have no evidence to bear out that opinion. Far better it is to devote attention to providing a substantial Patriotic Fund, to ameliorating the conditions of trade and labour, to elevating human beings rather than pointing people to New Jerusalems paved a foot thick with solid gold that they may never see. People should go about their tasks and try to do them just as efficiently as if the world were going to be here for a million years, just as if the progress of those future eons of time depended on their work, just as if some great Master were watching their every action.

INDIA'S EXPORTS FALLING.

ON INDIA, whom the markets were lately discussing as the absorbent of all the world's surplus of gold, one London writer now remarks that "the ability of India to import large amounts of gold, as in recent years, has greatly diminished. For some time past that country has bought large quantities of goods from abroad, and the excess of its exports over its imports has now fallen to figures which do not permit of the import of much gold."

HOW NAPOLEON CROSSED RED SEA.

WHEN NAPOLEON invaded Egypt by way of Suez, he attempted to cross the Red Sea at the spot assigned by tradition to the crossing of the Children of Israel. He and his horsemen, however, seem, unintentionally, to have imitated Pharoah rather than Moses, for they came very near to being drowned. According to French accounts, Napoleon saved his army by his presence of mind, ordering his cavalry to scatter in every direction to multiply the chances of coming on shallow water, and thus finding a line by which he and his people were extricated. The people of Suez, says Kingslake, declare that Napoleon lost his horse, got thoroughly submerged, and was only fished ashore by the assistance of the natives.

ANOTHER CANADIAN ON THE HONOUR ROLL.

NEWS of the death of Ronald E. M. Richards, a second year Arts student of Trinity College, Toronto, who had enlisted in the London Scottish Territorials shortly after the outbreak of the war, was received a day or so ago, his death occurring while in action as the result of a bursting shell. This is for Trinity College its baptism of blood in the present war, although several of its undergraduates and a number of its graduates are now at the front.

Ronald Richards was killed on or about the 13th of November, his death occurring instantly, and he was buried in a wood near the spot where he fell. He had taken part in the brilliant charge made by the first battalion of the London Scottish on the 1st of November during a terrific two-days' engagement near Ypres. It will be remembered that some critics said that the British Territorial Forces were not to be relied on, being untried and poorly trained. This charge is untrue, in view of the splendid way they are fighting. General Allenby said of the battle in which this Canadian student fell:

> "The behaviour of the officers and men of the London Scottish was worthy of the best traditions of the British regular troops. Truly, their steadiness and courage saved a situation that was as difficult and critical to deal with as will ever occur."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

NO DOUBT there are many people friendly to the campaign for the Patriotic Fund who do not understand the main details. As we have received several letters of inquiry, which space will not permit publication, we refer them to the Committee Rooms, where their questions will be fully and cheerfully answered. Or they may 'phone 50,000 and receive the information over the wire. As some questions would confuse a good many people and might inadvertently militate against the success of the campaign, we think it is better to inquire where an immediate answer can be given, rather than through the medium of the press.

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN thinks the affair of the German professors at Toronto University is regrettable and un-British. Certainly it is regrettable, but we do not think it un-British. If these German professors had kept a padlock on their tongues several weeks ago and not forced themselves into the public view in opposition to the prevailing public sentiment, it is very probable that the public would never have given them a thought. The little acorn grew to an oak, and hence the consequences.

THE UNITED STATES isn't going to raise a big standing army. That country evidently does not feel menaced by the growing strength of the Canadian forces. That bodes well for Canada.

WHAT THE PUBLIC would like to see is not that the Allies offensive still progresses, but that they have given the Germans a good swat.

FIFTY THOUSAND, PLEASE. That's what they say to the telephone girls these days, and, what is more, the girls give it.

SO ROUMANIA has made up her mind to be on the side of the Allies. Just another proof that we're right.

MAYOR BULLER rose to the occasion.

Mothering the Belgians.

(Collier's.)

At polite gatherings in Chicago the chief topic of conversation is the Belgian babies. Woman asks of woman: "Shall you take a Belgian baby?" The answer, with a quite beautiful frequency, is: "I think I shall. I have a friend who is taking two. I believe I would be better able to stand the war if I did that much to help the people who suffer most from it. Anyway, a little Belgian ought to make a fine son. Don't you think so?" Undoubtedly, in the last remark lies the secret of much of the enthusiasm for the adopting of "war orphans" of Belgium which is now spreading over the Middle West. It is not alone that a motherly woman feels a profound compassion for these bereaved children of a devoted people, but also that she thrills at the thought of rearing a young hero. Her own son, reared as the privileged citizen of an overconvenienced city, and "given advantages" till he is actually stultified by them, may be but a tepid, though dear, possession. But the little Belgians, tragic and piteous from their desolated land, marked with red memories of war, ought to make fine men and women. Some are too young to understand the drama of which they have been so touching a part, it is true; but it is to be remembered that great events and passions leave their imprint even upon the very youthful. Yes, the truth is, women like to be mothers to the Gracchi, and if they cannot be so by the course of nature, they are not averse to stealing a march on Destiny.

The Case of the Dominion Trust Company.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Despatches from Vancouver state that it begins to look as if the winding up proceedings in connection with the Dominion Trust Company would be a lengthy affair, and that in the end the depositors would get very small returns. Apparently there has been a lot of loose management in connection with the Dominion Trust Company. One of the worst features from the standpoint of depositors is the apparent fact that neither its Federal or Provincial charter gave the company power to accept deposits. There are between six and seven thousand individual depositors, of whom 2,700 reside in Vancouver. The total deposits amount to about $1,000,000. The whole business is a most regrettable affair.

Piling Up His Feet.

(London Evening Standard.)

Jenkins had ceased to complain, but one evening his troubles as a strap-hanger in the train got so bad that he felt bound to expostulate.

"Excuse me, sir," he said to the man sitting by him, "but would you mind moving your portmanteau from the gang-way? I really can hardly find room to stand."

"Move my portmanteau?" gasped the stranger. "Those, sir, are my feet."

"Is that so?" said Jenkins. "Then perhaps you would pile them one above the other."

Warning to Germany.

(Vancouver Province.)

The German Foreign Office has issued official notice that the Germans have no intention of invading Ireland. They will get a hearty reception if they do. The Irish would show them that although they do not know what "raus mit dem" means, they are experts in the game of chucking out. The Germans, in fact, would learn who put the "riot" into Pat-riotism.

The high school "at home" held in the town hall on Monday night was in every way a decided success. The LaDell Concert Company who supplied the entertainment created a most favorable impression on the large audience. Each number was heartily encored and the artists responded readily with their best efforts.

After the program the young people enjoyed a few promenades to the accompaniment of piano music furnished by several of the young ladies of the high school.

The bachelors of Norwood have engaged its hall for their usual Christmas dance, on the evening of Dec. 30th.

Mr. A. Freeman is here from the west and intends spending a few weeks at his mother's, Mrs. J. S. Fry.

Miss Elcombe of Peterboro spent the week end in town the guest of Miss Alethea Duffield.

Mr. Harold Stevens of Campbellford, was in town on Saturday.

There passed away at his home in Norwood one of the most highly respected citizens of our village in the person of Mr. Wm. Webster who has been suffering for the past four or five months from cancer of the liver. Mr. Webster was a lifelong resident of this locality having been born in the township of Otonabee nearly seventy-five years ago. Up until a few years ago when he and his wife and daughter came to live in Norwood he had always engaged in farming at which occupation he succeeded in making a competency. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and daughter Miss Fannie Webster at home and Mr. W. J. Webster of Banff, Alta., Messrs. Frank and Herbert Webster both of Asphodel. The late Mr. Webster was a good citizen. He made many friends and few enemies. In religion he was a staunch Presbyterian being for many years on the trustee board of the church here. As a mark of esteem the official board of the Norwood Presbyterian Church sent a beautiful floral wreath. The remains were interred in the family plot in the Norwood The service at the home at 2 o'clock cemetery on Thursday afternoon last. was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Wm. Peer. The members of the Norwood Board of Education marched in a body at the head of the cortege. Mr. Webster was the oldest member on the board having been continuously appointed to that position by the council of Asphodel for a great number of years. The funeral was very largely attended.

PATRIOTIC WAR RELIEF FUND

Help to Roll Up The Magnificent Total Of $50,000.00

We can and will do it, if you will help.

It is the Greatest Opportunity of Your Life.

A SPECIAL APPEAL TO FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS

YOU ARE MANY and you have many creeds, but there is at least one creed which you possess in common---the creed of standing for the right thing in the community.

We call upon the Fraternal Orders of Peterborough, one and all, for their earnest support of the War Relief Fund---for definite action as organizations.

In all the splendid record of your past, handed down through the ages as a precious heritage, is there one brighter gem of sacrifice and service than the gem you now have the privilege of encrusting upon that record!

To-day's opportunity to stand shoulder to shoulder with all society in safeguarding our soldiers' dependent women and children, will be looked back upon by your orders through all time as a priceless privilege.

GIVE! GIVE! GIVE! $50,000 OR MORE

We urge generous and immediate action by every organization of men and women who have funds available or who will solicit contributions to this cause.

AND TO EVERY INDIVIDUAL IN PETERBORO'

No matter what you feel able to give---be it a dollar or a dime---send it or bring it to the fund. We will need for this war relief work every penny we can get. The power of the moderate and small contributions is enormous in the aggregate, and every one swells the total.

Officers, Peterborough Patriotic Committee

Organization Committee—D. O'Connell, John Crane, F. D. Kerr, J. A. Aylmer, A. W. Cressman.

General Committee—Chairman, Mayor W. Buller; Vice-Chairman D. O'Connell; Chairman of Finance Committee, T. F. Matthews; Chairman List Committee, J. A. Aylmer; Chairman Publicity Committee, F. H. Dobbin; Joint Secretaries, S. R. Armstrong and F. D. Kerr; Treasurer, F. Adams.

Team Captains—E. A. Peck, G. A. Gillespie, J. J. Turner, Jr.; W. H. Dunsford, Jos. Picard, Jr.; Walker Stocker, J. J. Duffus, Adjt. McElhenney, H. S. Walker, W. J. Oke, Geo. H. Giroux.

THE LOCAL OR CONTINGENT RELIEF SIDE OF THE PETERBORO' PATRIOTIC FUND is for the purpose of Aiding Families who may be in need owing to the war, through lack of work. There are many such and will be more. They must be judiciously aided, and not want.

The Idea of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is This:

THE soldiers have gone to fight not for their home town or any particular locality but for all Canada.

The whole of Canada should combine to take care of their families.

The Fund is One Fund and each locality is administered by the Local Branch.

In Peterborough for instance, families of the soldiers will be looked after by the local branch acting for the National Association.

All the families throughout Canada will receive aid on the same basis and none will be neglected.

This is a sensible and patriotic plan. Peterborough will fall in line. Do all you can but do it now.

GERMAN SHIPS SUNK

Only Six Left.

The loss of the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau reduces the number of armored cruisers in the German navy to six, there having been only nine vessels of this class in commission at the outbreak of the war, including the Yorck, which was sunk by a mine in the North Sea. The Scharnhorst and Gneisnau were launched in 1906 and completed in 1908. They displaced 11,400 tons and were 470 feet in length. They were built, respectively, at Hamburg and Bremen. Each cost about six million dollars. The Scharnhorst had a speed of 22½ knots and the Gneisenau 23.8 knots. Each carried a complement of 764 officers and men.

The armament of each vessel consisted of eight 8.2-inch and six 5.9-inch guns, with eighteen 21-pounders and four torpedo tubes. Four of the big guns were mounted in twin turrets, the remaining four in broadside casemates. Six could thus be fired on either broadside. The 5.9-inch guns were in an armored battery. The vital parts of the ship and the main gun position were protected by six-inch armor. The coal supply was 2,000 tons. These two cruisers were in the China squadron, and were stationed at Kiau-chau at the beginning of the war. They escaped from that port just as the Japanese were organizing the blockade.

The names borne by these ships are those of Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, two Prussian generals of the Napoleonic wars.

The Leipzig was a protected cruiser of 3,200 tons with a speed of over 22 knots. She was armed with ten 4.1-inch guns and two torpedo tubes. She was built in 1904-06. She was capable of steaming 5,000 knots at low speed without recoaling. Her complement was 303 officers and men.

The Nurnberg and Dresden, which sought safety in flight, are light cruisers of the same general type as the Leipzig, though they are faster than the latter, having a speed of nearly 25 knots. Two other light cruisers the Karlsruhe and the Bremen, are supposed also to be in South Atlantic waters, though they are not mentioned as having been present at the engagement. The battle cruiser Von der Tann has been reported as having joined Admiral von Spee's squadron, but this has not been confirmed from any authentic source. The Von Der Tann is a powerful vessel of similar type to the Turkish cruiser Goeben.

Admiral Sturdee's Career.

Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Charles Doneton Sturdee, who was in command of the British fleet which sank the three German cruisers, was born in 1859 and entered the navy in 1871. He attained the rank of captain in 1899 and that of rear-admiral in 1908. He served in the Egyptian War in 1882, receiving the Egyptian medal, Alexandria clasp, and the Khedive's bronze medal. From 1893 to 1897 he was assistant to the director of naval ordnance; then in 1900-02 he was assistant director of naval intelligence. He was appointed chief of the staff of the Mediterranean fleet in 1905 and held this post until 1907. In that year he held the same post in the Channel fleet, and was also A.D.C. to the King. In 1909 he was made rear-admiral of the first battle squadron, and commanded the second cruiser squadron from 1912 until the present year, when he was appointed vice-admiral and Chief of Staff of the Admiralty.

He commanded the British force in Samoa in 1899, and was decorated for that service. His titles include K.C.B., created 1913, and C.M.G., 1900. He also holds the decoration C.V.O.

ALLIES ARE CONSOLIDATING POSITIONS THEY HAVE WON

Future Attacks on the Part of Germany Are Expected to be Made Against the French Centre—British Ships Shell Belgian Coast—Germans Claim Advantage in Fighting in Argonne.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The withdrawal of German troops from the west to strengthen their armies in the east has enabled the allies to resume the initiative along the front reaching from the Swiss border to the North Sea, and while they have not made any marked advance, they have been able, according to official announcement, to organize and consolidate the positions won in the last few days. This naturally has not been done without opposition from the Germans, who claim to have inflicted heavy losses on the French, particularly in the Argonne and north of Nancy.

Flanders is at present considered fairly safe from German attacks, which when they do materialize, it is believed here, will be directed more at the French centre.

British ships have again been bombarding German positions on the Belgian coast during the last two days. The Belgian Government steamer Ville Danvers landed yesterday about 120 refugees from the region west of Dunkirk, which is now being bombarded by the German artillery from the direction of Nieuport.

The following French official communication was issued last night:—

"There are no other incidents of importance to report than an advance by our troops before Parvilliers (Department of the Somme), and a German attack upon Tracy le Val (Department of the Oise), which was repulsed."

The official report of the afternoon says:—

"During the day of Dec. 8 there was artillery firing from the seacoast to the Lys.

"In the region of Arras and further to the south there was nothing to report. All the positions won by us during the past two days have been organized and consolidated.

"In the region of the Aisne artillery exchanges resulted advantageously for us. In the Argonne the activity of our artillery and fighting by our infantry resulted in appreciable gains for us. Several German trenches were occupied; we made progress along the entire front, with the exception of one single point. Here the enemy blew up one of our trenches with a mine.

"On the heights of the Meuse our artillery showed itself distinctly the master of the artillery of the enemy. In this region, as well as in the Argonne, we have made progress along the entire front and occupied several of the German trenches. The same thing happened in the Forest of Le Pretre.

"In the Vosges we repulsed several attacks to the northwest of Sinones. In the remainder of the segment of the Vosges the enemy made no endeavor during the day of Dec. 8 to deliver any serious attacks on the positions occupied by us last week."

EDISON ESTABLISHMENT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Huge Plant at West Orange Suffers Heavy Loss of $7,000,000.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 10.—Fire destroyed virtually the entire main plant of the Edison Company here last night, causing damage estimated at nearly $7,000,000, with insurance that it is expected will reduce the loss to approximately $5,000,000.

An entire square block of modern reinforced concrete buildings which were supposed to be fireproof, was burned out by the flames. The only building saved in the block was the laboratory building, containing valuable scientific machinery under the superintendence of the inventor, Thomas A. Edison.

It is estimated that about three thousand men and women will be temporarily thrown out of work. About 7,000 persons were employed at the plant.

"Although I am more than 67 years of age, I'll start all over again tomorrow," said Mr. Edison.

In all eleven buildings in the main plant went down with the fire.

CONSTANT STRATEGIC PROGRESS

Situation as Summed up by Col. E. D. Swinton at the Front

LONDON, Dec. 10.—"Of major tactical operations by the British forces there recently has been an entire absence, nor for some weeks has any strategical advantage been won in a geographical sense, since there has been no advance and no gain in ground."

Col. E. D. Swinton, the British eyewitness on the battlefront in France and Belgium, under date of December, thus sums up the situation.

He adds, however, that, while there has been no advance by the allies, there has been a constant "strategic progress in that time working on their side."

The remainder of the account relates to the lighter incidents at the front, emphasizing particularly the good feeling which exists between the British and the French soldiers, and French populace.

German Ammunition Runs Low.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—According to Le Temps, a German document has been found in a village in the Department of the Aisne, recommending that economy be observed in the use of projectiles for the artillery. The reason for this recomemndation, it is said, is that the German ammunition factories, even when working at full force, are unable to supply indefinite amounts of ammunition for the army.

Poincare Returns To Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—President Raymond Poincare will transfer his residence to Paris to-day and a Cabinet meeting will be held Friday. The Journal Official will also begin its publication here to-morrow morning.

An extraordinary session of the French Parliament has been called for Dec. 22, and the election of a new Government is anticipated soon.

DISCARD SOME WESLEY HYMNS

New Methodist Book will Show Radical Alterations.

Toronto, Dec. 10.—Final action on the new Methodist hymnal is being taken by the hymn and tune book committee which opened a three days' meeting at the Sherbourne St. church. Rev. S. P. Rose, D.D., of Montreal, is chairman. Representatives were present from the various conferences throughout the Dominion.

The committee has been at work for several years and at one time it was thought that the work of the Methodist committee and that of the Presbyterians could be utilized for a hymnal which would answer for the united church. The delay in the organic union of the negotiating churches has resulted in the decision of the Methodists and Presbyterians to publish new hymnals for their respective denominations during the coming year.

A big feature of the new Methodist hymnal will be the elimination of almost three hundred obsolete hymns which gave too much prominence to dogmatic theology. A big cut is made in the selections from Rev. Charles Wesley's hymns which were originally published through devotion to the name of Wesley.

In discarding a number of the Charles Wesley hymns the committee took the ground that they were not up to the requisite standard as verse.

The revised hymnal will contain a number of new hymns, the words of which are being withheld from publication until they have been copyrighted by the committee.

The general committee now in session will give final instructions to the executive, which will, under special authority given them by the recent general conference, have the new hymnal printed and published as early in the new year as possible.

TO POSTPONE FESTIVITIES

But Peace Centenary Will be Celebrated in Schools

OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught was present yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the executive of the Canadian Peace Centenary Association, which was also attended by eight members of the commission appointed by the State of New York for the arranging of a suitable celebration between the Province of Ontario and the State of New York of the 100 years of peace.

A luncheon was given in honor of the visiting delegates. Sir Robert L. Borden, in a felicitous speech, referred to the relations which have existed so long between the United States and the Dominion of Canada.

Resolutions were adopted regarding the proposed celebrations, and in view of the war in Europe considerable modifications were decided upon. It was agreed that the holding of public festivities, rejoicings, etc., be postponed until the cessation of hostilities in Europe, but that so far as plans having reference to churches, schools, colleges and universities in the United States and Canada the celebrations should be carried out.

Signal Sergeant E. Downey Writes From Salisbury to His Parents

Signal Sergeant Earl J. Downey with the Peterboro volunteers at Salisbury Plain sends the following letter to his parents:—

Dear Mother,—

Well I guess you are thinking that I have forgotten you altogether. I thought I would wait until we were settled down before I wrote. I hope all at home are well, as this letter leaves me in this best of health. We are having some very cold days this last week or two, and we get all the rain we want. There has been no snow here yet, but the frost looks so much like snow that it makes you think it snowed the night before. Outside of the weather everything is fine. We have a fine place here to drill. You can see for miles around. It is all clear and there are no trees of any account, only small bunches here and there. We are living in tents, but we expect to go into huts. I hope they put us in them soon, as it is pretty cold here in the mornings. I got the papers you sent alright, also your letters. How is my father? I hope he is well. I got a letter from him the other night with a medal in it. Well, this is Sunday, with everybody in the tents. It is very cold today and I guess it will be the same for some time to come. We expect to be here all winter but you never can tell how long we will be here, because you never know what is coming next. We had a fine voyage. The weather was fine for the whole way over. We landed at Devonport. I was up to London. I tell you it is some city. Well I guess I will close with love to all, hoping this will find you in the best of health. Will write soon again.

From your loving son

CHEERED BY GOOD NEWS

Great Britain Has Two Occasions for Satisfaction Today

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The victory off the Falkland Islands, where the British squadron sank the German cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipsig and the success of the Indian troops on the Gulf of Persia, where they compelled the surrender of a Turkish army, have for the moment overshadowed, so far as England is concerned, at any rate, the larger events which have taken place on the continent of Europe.

The sinking of the German cruisers materially lessens the menace to British shipping, while the success of the Indian forces has given Great Britain control of the Persian Gulf, the delta of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers and threatens that part of Turkey on which German railway builders have had their eyes far many years.

With this good news for the allies, comes what is considered here as a favorable French communication of the operations in Flanders and France.

The withdrawal of German troops from the west has enabled the allies to resume the initiative along the front reaching from the Swiss border to the North Sea.

One hundred and twenty applications have ben received by Captain P. G. C. Campbell for admission to the officers' training corps now being organized at Queen's University.

SERBS ARE VICTORIOUS

Nish Reports Complete Triumph Along Whole Front

ROME, Dec. 10.—The Servian Legation makes public a report from Servian headquarters to the effect that the Servian army has won a complete victory along the whole front, resulting in the recapture of the towns of Valjevo and Ushitza, in Servia, and the rout of two Austrian corps.

The Austrians, says the report, abandoned everything, even their treasure chest. The Servians took 20,000 prisoners, fifty cannon and large quantities of rifles, machine guns and munitions of every description.

A despatch to the Havas Agency from Nish, Servia, says:

"The crushing offensive movement of the Servian army has been successful along the entire front. The Austrians are retiring in the greatest disorder, losing a large number of prisoners and cannon and war material.

"At one point alone the Servians took 2,000 prisoners, and the band and the flag of the 22nd Regiment."

Whole Servian Nation Armed.

ROME, Dec. 10.—A despatch from Nish states that the Austrian invasion of Servia has resulted in the whole nation coming forward to defend the country. Men and women, the aged and children, are all armed and ready in case of necessity to march against the enemy. In the towns and villages every house has been transformed into a fort, and there is no lack of arms and ammunition, thanks to the supplies from France and Russia.

CHARGE OF RECEIVING

Character Evidence is Given on Behalf of Grisdale

The case of James Grisdale receiving stolen goods in the form of 12 packages of tobacco, 13 cigars, 1 razor and 1 pair scissors from Stanley Hartley was opened this morning at ten o'clock before his honor Judge Huycke and a jury composed of the following: John Stark, Herb McConkey, W. H. Down, E. C. Cassan, A. Harris, Jas. Lillico, S. McIntyre, S. O'Reilley, Henry Gainey, E. Crough and P. Lewis. Crown Attorney Hatton is acting for the crown and G. N. Gordon for Grisdale.

Garnet Henderson who owns the barber shop at 142 Brock St., was called and identified the goods as stolen from his place of business on November 24th. As far as he knew Grisdale's reputation for honesty was good.

Stanley Hartley who yesterday received a two-year sentence at police court for stealing the articles was called and testified that he was on friendly terms with Grisdale often visiting him at his place of employment. The witness gave the details of the robbing of the barber shop and swore he went over to Grisdale's residence the next morning and left the goods there. About two weeks before that Grisdale had given him a key and when making the presentation he made use of the expression that it might come in handy.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon the boy admitted being in police court several times for theft. He also stated that he stole from the Salvation Army Temple. The witness also made known the fact that he would not hesitate to lie in an effort to carry out any plan.

Detective Newhall gave evidence as to Grisdale first denying having received the stolen goods and then he admitted that they were at his home. He went and brought them to the police station the next morning. To Mr. Gordon the witness said he knew Grisdale for years and was greatly surprised when he heard that stolen goods were in his possession.

Detective Meagher corroborated the evidence of Detective Newhall and also testified as to prisoner's previous good character.

Evidence for the Defence.

This concluded the evidence for the crown and the first witness called for the defence of ths prisoner was Mayor Buller. His Worship swore he knew Grisdale for many years and always knew him to be an honest citizen. Rev. Dean McColl also gave testimony of Grisdale's good reputation and said that knowing him as he did he couldn't believe that he would be guilty of the offence with which he is charged. Fire Chief Heward and Mr. H. Fife also gave evidence as to Grisdale's good reputation.

Saw Boy at the House.

Miss Laura Murphy, of 180 Dufferin Ct., called, said she knew Stanley Hartley. She saw him at Grisdale's house about two weeks previous to the day he was arrested. Mr. Grisdale's little girl brought in a key and told her father that she had found the one he had lost. She handed it to him but he said he didn't want it and threw it on the table. Stanley Hartley picked it up and said it would do for him to get in the house with when he was out late at night.

Mrs. Grisdale, wife of the prisoner, stated that she had been married seventeen years. She had seven children, she knew Stanley Hartley and ~~had often given him something to~~ eat. She was at home the day, Miss Murphy, the previous witness, referred to. She told a similar story regarding the key.

When Hartley came in with the alleged stolen goods he said he got them from a drunken man. She ordered him out and when he referred to go Mr. Grisdale was called and said he would keep the goods and if any robbers were reported in the press he would tell the chief of police.

At the conclusion of this evidence the court adjourned till 2.30 this afternoon.

PRESENTMENT OF GRAND JURY TO COUNTY JUDGE

The following presentation was made this morning at the sitting of the county court, by the grand jury to His Honor Judge Huycke:

To His Honor Judge Huycke.

May it please your Honor:

We, the grand jury for the county of Peterborough, beg leave to present as follows:

We, with your Honor, are pleased to note the general activities prevailent throughout the county in regard to the world-wide war being waged by Germany and her allies against universal freedom and religious and national liberty. In this connection we must congratulate the county upon having as its presiding judge a loyal gentleman in your own personality, ever to the front in defending the interests of the Empire against Teutonic aggression. In this connection your grand jury cannot let pass the opportunity of expressing its sentiments with regard to the supreme struggle now going on, and which is involving, with but few exceptions all the nations of the world. Your Honor referred, and with justice, to the tremendous importance of ~~present military and naval operations~~ on which hinges the fate of the British Empire. On its outcome rests the very existence of the British Empire and also that of our beloved Canada, together with all other colonies enjoying the protection of the Union Jack. We always have had, and at present are enjoying, the protection of Britain's naval and military strength, and as a devoted daughter of a protecting mother we hold that bond of kinship very dear indeed. In this moment of Empire trial, we have the appreciated opportunity to prove our loyalty and give substantial assistance. This we are doing, and will continue to do. Our sons and brothers are already on the field of battle or moving to the front

On Salisbury Plain we have Canada's thousands, all anxious to relieve, succor, and maintain with the Motherland, the traditions of British citizenship. We know what faces us should the allies fail, and our part shall be to send men, munitions, and sustenance to the uttermost extent of our ability. We call your Honor's attention to the movement now being waged in this city to raise a very large fund to be devoted to patriotic purposes, in assistance of wives and relatives of soldiers who have gone to the front to fight our battles. The effort being made is an honest one and promises to be successful. We trust that when your Honor again takes up his duties in this city, peace will have been restored and such a triumphant peace as will assure to the whole world that for years to come war shall cease among civilized peoples.

Your jury highly appreciates the generous support the county of Peterborough is giving in this appalling war, and admire the splendid manner in which its people have risen to the occasion in men, financial aid and other resources.

We are happy to note that but two criminal cases are on the docket which speaks well for the conservation of law and order within the county under your Honor's jurisdiction, and the active enforcement of the peace by the county officials in general.

We find the jail is ideal in its appointments, but we regret that there are confined therein more inmates than ever. However, we realize that general conditions over which the county has no control must of necessity affect the jail's census.

As customary, year by year, your jury visited the various institutions within the county's jurisdiction, the House of Providence, the Protestant Home, the Children's Shelter, the Nicholls Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital. In all we found the most approved principles of conduction prevailing. In every one of the institutions named the highest degree of efficiency obtains. It does seem to us that in these county institutions, the officials responsible are leaving no opportunity for criticism or suggested improvements except that we recommend that the frame building in the court house yard be taken down and replaced by a brick structure.

With your Honor, we regret the loss, by death, of the late county crown attorney, R. E. Wood, whose many official duties and citizenship won for him the respect and esteem of the community as a whole. And we would ask that the court extend to his bereaved family its earnest condolence. In this connection we are pleased to endorse the appointment of Mr. George W. Hatton, a gentleman in whom we are convinced the high responsibilities of the office are well placed

Our sympathies go out to Sheriff Hall in his enforced absence through illness, and we sincerely hope that he will be able to resume his duties he is so well qualified to discharge.

In conclusion, permit us to extend our acknowledgment of the many courtesies experienced at the hands of the officials of the several county institutions we inspected in the course of our duties as grand jurors, and to express our satisfaction at the healthy and progressive tone of the county and city on general principles, together with our heartiest appreciation of your Honor's admirable administration of the responsible office with which you are so worthily invested.

espectfully submitted,
MORLEY W. LYLE.
Foreman.

In our comments on the progress of the campaign a day or two ago it was stated that the local branch of the Bank of Montreal had made a subscription of $100,000 to the fund. This was an error, possibly an impulsive one, on the part of the publicity committee. It was assumed that the request of the local manager to be allowed to give such a sum would be assented to, and this assent was withheld by the head office, on the ground that the head office had taken care of such matters for the branches in its block subscription of $100,000. Other banks are in the same position. This will account for local subscriptions from banks not being made.

The Jewish colony, to put it that way for the sake of brief description, came together today and having been waited on by Mr. Abramson and W. Stocker subscriped $135.75 on the spot. There are several yet to hear from which will bring the amount well up to $200.

The picture of Captain Gray, of Cornwall, to whose company from Peterborough the Second Contingent is attached, was of special interest to all present. The picture showed the captain with his wife and two little ones.

In the window of Mr. Madill's drug store is displayed the Christmas Greeting to the Peterborough contingent, to our boys on Salisbury Plain. The greeting is a good one, expressing the hopes and wishes of the friends and relatives in Peterborough and the assurance that our boys will most worthily uphold the honor of Canada. Over six hundred signatures are attached to the greeting. As the boys look over these they will find the names of the men and women, that they have met on the streets and in the homes at home. It will be a cheery thing to see that they are in our thoughts at Christ-

The fine display of the war slides thrown on the canvas from the rooms over the committee rooms last night was looked at by a large number of people. The views of war ships, loaned by Mr. Keyes were a revelation to many who had no idea of the construction and arrangement of these fighting monsters. A batch of slides depicting scenes in the war field in Belgium were of large interest. These with a lot of slides of local men interested in the movement filled in the display.

This morning a team saw six heads of departments with regard to contributions from the employes of the Auburn Mills. The response was immediate and most satisfactory. The employes of the weaving department collected and handed to the committee $66. Arrangements have been made to take the collection in other departments. This will add to the offering from the employes. Well done.

A check from the employes of the Ackerman factory is good to look upon. An even $200, from ninety-two people. Fine. It makes an average contribution of $2. All these amounts are sending up the mercury in the big thermometer.

INTERRUPTED IN HIS SLEEP

Two drunks formed the Police Court docket today. John Donahue fell asleep in a doorway while throwing off a jag. A constable espied him and conveyed him to the shelter of the cells.

He wanted very much to be let off this morning and claimed he had been waiting at a tailor shop to purchase a second-hand coat. He was fined $2 and costs.

John McCarthy looked slightly more respectable after a week's remand to sober up. He still had his ticket for Montreal and departed free, escorted by the police to the railway station.

FOUND LAD WITH FRACTURED LEG

After leaving the county jail this morning, Mayor Buller and the Fire Chief discovered a lad named Hannah who had taken a weak spell and, falling into the ditch, had fractured his leg. He was taken to his home on Hunter street.

Is Called to Form New Government

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

St. John, Dec. 10.—A Moncton despatch says the resignation of Hon. J. K. Fleming, premier of New Brunswick has been received and Governor Wood has called on Hon. George J. Clarke, attorney-general, to form a new government and he has accepted.

The despatch adds that the new cabinet will be announced probably next week.

ENGINE TESTED

A motor chemical engine from Toronto, speeding around the city, attracted no small amount of attention this afternoon. Trial runs were made by Chief Howard, who found it extremely satisfactory.

An Acquittal and a Conviction

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

When my uncle Charles Dingley was found dead one morning in his bed I as his nearest male relative was at once summoned. I went to his room, which had been left untouched in every particular, and by the bed on which the body lay I found a bottle about two inches high and one inch square, around the four sides of which was pasted a label with the usual "Poison" warning printed on it.

There was nothing in my uncle's affairs to indicate that he had had any intention of committing suicide. He had not been very well for a few days, but there was nothing serious the matter with him. He might have been murdered and the bottle placed at his side to give the impression that he had taken poison. There were no marks on the body to indicate that he had been murdered.

The establishment of the facts in the case did not appeal to me. My uncle was dead, and whether he had been murdered or murdered himself made little difference to me. To put detectives on the case would cost money, but who would be the gainer? The authorities came to the house, made a perfunctory examination of the body and its surroundings and reported that the deceased had come to his death by means of poison administered by himself.

I went through the house myself looking for a clew. I had found a tumbler on the table with the poison and in the kitchen pantry found a dozen others of the same shape and make.

That fact indicated that the tumbler had come from the pantry. Dishes containing different kinds of food—mostly left over—were in the closet, one of them being a saucer of preserved peaches. It had apparently been knocked over, and a little of the juice had been spilled on the floor. It occurred to me that whoever had taken down the tumbler from the shelf had done so in the dark and had put his hand against the dish of peach preserves.

If he had done this some of the juice, if it had got on his fingers, might have adhered to them. I found faint, cloudy smears on the tumbler and, putting the tip of my tongue on them, thought I could detect saccharine matter. Examining the label on the poison bottle carefully, I found stains that I inferred might be the same as the cloud on the glass.

I locked up the tumbler and the bottle of poison, but had no desire to go any further with my examinations. I saw nothing to be gained by unearthing the mystery.

Fate decided, however, that it should be unraveled, or, rather, it should come out that there was no mystery at all. I was engaged to a girl who had discarded a former lover. Herman Goodsell hated me and brought about a suspicion that I had murdered my uncle. But this did not occur until my uncle had been buried. The will when opened disclosed the fact that my uncle had left a lot of money and every cent of it to me. Then our enemy began to get in his fine work, whispering here and there, till the police felt obliged to take cognizance of the reports and arrested me for murder.

The first thing I did was to engage an attorney and through him obtain the exhumation of the body for the purpose of having the finger prints taken. This was done. Then I had the tumbler that had stood by my uncle's bed examined with a microscope. A faint yellow substance was found on it, which contained a finger print. By treating the label of the poison bottle chemically a very clear finger print was obtained.

I had no idea how the accusation against me had started until my fiancee told me that she had probed the matter and traced a beginning to her former lover. This put me on my mettle to thwart him, and I named him as one of my witnesses to be subpoenaed for my trial. I gave my lawyer a list of questions to ask him, most of which had been furnished me by my sweetheart. When the case was called he was one of the first witnesses to take the stand, and my attorney soon showed malevolence on his part in this: That he had gone about spreading the reports that I had murdered my uncle. This had nothing to do with the case, but was intended for revenge.

When my real defense came up my attorney made short work of the matter. He had the tumbler and the label of the poison bottle in court, copies of the finger prints on them and a finger print of my uncle's thumb and two forefinger tips. They tallied exactly.

Goodsell was in court when I received my vindication. Under my instruction he received a tongue lashing that he was not likely to forget. My advocate showed how little evidence there had been against me, how it had been worked up by Goodsell and his reasons for having started the suspicions against me which had led to a needless and expensive trial. Goodsell cringed under it. Indeed, my acquittal was his conviction. When my counsel had ceased speaking my accuser left the courtroom and has never shown his face in the place since.

My uncle's bequest was a surprise to me, for I supposed he had little or nothing of value to leave and what he had would go to another branch of the family.

G. N. Gordon acted for Scott and G. W. Hatton for the crown. The evidence in the morning was that of Mrs. Francis, Mary Francis and Mrs. Read. It was all similar to that given in police court, Mary Francis telling the details of the alleged crime in a straightforward manner and Mrs. Read, who claimed to have met Scott and Mary Francis on the road together the afternoon of the alleged assault, broke down while being cross-examined by Mr. Gordon. Mrs. McElhiney, Police Matron, was called to her assistance.

Dr. Mann, who examined the Francis girl, was called and gave evidence to the effect that her condition as he found it could have been made by having had illicit relations with a boy of thirteen years of mature development.

At the afternoon sitting all the witnesses were for the defence. Mrs. Hayward, a neighbor, testified that Scott remained on the lawn in front of his home all afternoon of Sunday, July 19th. She remembered the day well because it was the Sunday following the 12th of July and Scott was expecting a visit from friends from Lindsay. He was up to Lindsay on the Twelfth and invited them down on the following Sunday. Two of her boarders, Sydney Yarrington and John Fell gave evidence to the same effect.

Clifford Wilson swore that he talked to Scott from eleven in the morning till after supper that night. He had dinner and supper at Scott's home. Mrs. Scott testified that her husband was at home all afternoon and Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Scott's mother corroborated her evidence.

Joseph Scott, the prisoner, was called and he denied everything in the charge. He never had any carnal relations with the Francis girl and never saw Mrs. Read. He spent the Sunday in question on the lawn in front of his home. He stated that his present wife is his third wife.

Rev. James Price, Reeve Howden of North Monaghan, and William Grady all testified as to Scott's reputation. All stated that in their opinion he would not be guilty of an offence similar to the one he was charged with having committed.

Address of Defence.

Mr. Gordon in his address to the jury pointed out how the evidence showed that Mrs. Francis had let her daughter go to the circus and work there. The girl went in the mornings alone and was also alone in the evenings. When the child's condition was found out Mrs. Francis had stated that Scott had the money and he would have to pay for all the medical attendant's fees and also the clothing for the unborn baby. She knew Scott had money and knew full well that if any of the men connected with the circus had committed the offence they were out of her reach.

Mr. Gordon used very strong language in reference to the class of men who follow a circus remarking that they are the "worst class of morally bad men gathered together outside a penitentiary." He asked the jurors to consider the evidence of Dr. Mann in which it was made known that the child's condition could be made so after her having connection with a boy of thirteen years of mature development.

Counsel's final remarks dealt with the evidence of Rev. Mr. Price, Reeve Howden and William Grady. All knew Scott well and stated that he was a good man. To commit an offence such as he was charged with he would need to be a man bad all the way through. Such an offence on a young girl is committed by those who are thoroughly wicked. It is not done on the spur of the moment. Considering those points he asked the jury to acquit the prisoner.

Immediately after Mr. Gordon's remarks the court adjourned till eight o'clock.

Address of Crown.

Crown Attorney Hatton, in stating his side of the case to the jury, remarked how the child when pressed by her mother's cross-examination told that it was the prisoner who wronged her. As to her mother stating that it was Scott who would pay for the doctor and clothes for the unborn baby, it was only natural she would say something to that effect. She did not go to Scott and ask him for money, however. On the contrary, she went to the Chief of Police and laid her complaint.

Mr. Hatton referred to the straightforward manner in which the girl told the story of the crime in all detail. He brought out that evidence uncontradicted had gone to show that the girl was assaulted by some one. When asked who had committed the offence she told that Scott had done it and told all the circumstances. She told of meeting Mrs. Read when she was returning from the scene of the alleged crime, and Mrs. Read came to court and stated emphatically that Scott was the man. In reference to the evidence brought out by the defence regarding Scott's character, Mr. Hatton pointed out that the witness admitted that they didn't know of anything against him. That was as far as it went.

The Judge's Remarks.

Judge Huycke first spoke a few words of congratulation to Mr. Hatton, remarking the ability with which ton, remarking on the ability with which he had carried on his first case and the thorough manner in which he had performed his duties. His Honor also referred to the able manner in which Mr. Gordon, counsel for the prisoner, performed his task.

In reference to the case, Judge Huycke spoke of the greatness of the crime, and reminded the jurors that it is not an action brought on by the girl against Scott, but rather the crown against Scott: The law makers of Canada attempt to put up a wall of protection for the children. If the girl was ten years older she would have been capable of looking after herself.

His Honor informed them that if they believed the girl's evidence they must find the prisoner guilty; if they believed the evidence of the defence, they must find the prisonr not guilty. If they found that the prisoner had carnal relations with the girl on some other day than the 19th of July, they must return a verdict of not guilty.

Judge Huycke referred to the way in which the girl told her story when called to the witness stand, and also the testimony given by Mrs. Read, in which she stated that she met the little girl on the Sunday in question, and that the girl was with a man. Mrs. Read further stated that Scott was the man.

Judge Huycke made mention of the strong alibi presented by the defence. If this defence was to be accepted, the prisoner would have to be found not guilty. His Honor's final remarks were summing up the duties of the jury. They represented the Crown, and it was for them to decide whether the prisoner was guilty or not guilty.

The jury then withdrew.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE.
Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson XI.—Fourth Quarter For Dec. 13, 1914.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxviii, 16-20, Luke xxiv., 44-49 — Memory Verses, 19, 20—Golden Text, Matt. xxviii, 20.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The correct sequence of events between His resurrection and final visible ascension from Olivet is not more easy than the sequence of some of the events in His sojourn in His mortal body, but the heart lessons are not difficult. The summary in Acts i, 3, is clear and full, "He shewed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days and speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God." He always shewed Himself (John xxi, 1, 14), and this is our need—to see no man any more save Jesus only (Mark ix, 8). He showed Himself alive, and we must live as if we really believed that our great High Priest is alive forevermore and has all power in heaven and on earth.

He always spake of the Kingdom, both in His earthly life and until His ascension, and there is nothing so important as the coming of His Kingdom, which if we seek first He has assured us of all other things that we need. (Matt. vi, 33). This appearance of our lesson in Matthew may have been to the eleven only, or it may have been the same as when He was seen by over 500 at once (I Cor. xv, 16). From the fact that some doubted it would seem to have included the latter, for surely the eleven had ceased doubting ere this. There was another most interesting appearance in Galilee to seven of the disciples after their night of fruitless toil on the lake, when He provided breakfast for them, apart from their labors, and also filled their net with 153 great fishes. It was then that He asked Peter the thrice repeated question, "Lovest thou me?" specially commissioned him and foretold his martyrdom (John xxi, 1-24).

Before His crucifixion His instructions to the disciples were to go neither to gentiles nor Samaritans, but rather to Israel, but now that Israel had decidedly rejected Him and in cutting Him off had also cut themselves off from all privileges as a nation till He shall come again the instructions are different. The messengers are to go to all nations and gather to Him disciples. They are to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; they are to preach repentance and remission of sins in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, but they were to wait at Jerusalem (these first messengers) until they should receive the necessary power to do this in the form of a special enduement of power by the Holy Spirit, for He would be sent to bear witness to a crucified, risen, rejected, ascended Christ, to gather unto Him a people for His name, who by a special training in this age would be fitted to reign with Him in the next age, when He shall come again to set up His kingdom of righteousness and peace (verse 19; Mark xvi, 15; Luke xxiv, 46-49; Acts xv, 13-18; Isa. xxxii, 1, 17).

There is nothing whatever in their commission about subduing the world or winning the world to Christ or reforming or uplifting the race, but simply to do as Paul tells us he did—determine not to know anything but Jesus Christ and Him crucified; to preach the gospel that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures that He was buried and that He rose again the third day according to the Scriptures; to so preach as by all means to save some; to be ready to preach the gospel anywhere as debtor to all and never ashamed of it; to preach the kingdom of God and teach those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, knowing that some will believe and some believe not; to turn people from idols to God, to serve the living and true God and to wait for His son from Heaven; to speak always not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts (I Cor. ii, 2; ix, 22; xv, 3, 4; Rom. i, 14-16; Acts xxviii, 23, 24, 31; I Thess. i, 9, 10; ii, 4; II Tim. ii, 15). Our responsibility is to be faithful witnesses, believing all things written in the law of Moses and in the prophets and the Psalms concerning Him, quite sure that His Word will not return to Him void, but always accomplish all His pleasure (verse 44; Isa. lv, 11).

Whether we see much or little or not any present results of our sowing, we can leave that all to Him with whom we are fellow workers unto His kingdom, knowing that He shall not fail nor be discouraged (Isa. xlii, 4; I Cor. xv, 58). The devil sowed his tares and went his way quite sure that they would grow, and we must indeed be people of little faith if we cannot have as much confidence concerning the incorruptible seed of the Word of God as the devil had concerning his tares. When we have delivered the Word of God lovingly in the power of the Holy Spirit we can safely say, Thank God, that will work.

If some one should ask, What will it work? we can with confidence reply that it will work all His good pleasure. A restless ambition to see great results does not indicate a mind in harmony with God or a Spirit filled messenger. The blessed assurance, "Lo, I am with you all the days until the end of the age" (Matt. xxviii, 20, R. V. margin), should be to us an unspeakable comfort and inspiration.

The removal of Rev. G. J. McKay, of Avonton, to Mimico Presbyterian Church, has been approved by the Stratford presbytery.

GOING HALVES

The Cranky Man Made Sure the Division was Equal.

"I once had a neighbor," said the retired merchant, "the oddest specimen of humanity I ever met. I had been warned that this man—Blank I will call him—was unreasonable and cantankerous. I certainly found him eccentric, but I am easy to get along with, and we lived side by side nearly seven years without any serious trouble. We each had a few fruit trees and a small vegetable garden.

"In the fall after I first moved there Blank proposed that we buy a ladder together. It would help in fruit picking and be convenient for various other purposes. He could get a good second-hand thirty foot ladder for $5, and I agreed to pay half of it. The ladder proved to be a useful article, and we kept it on top of the picket fence that separated our gardens, where either owner could get it without trouble.

"In the spring of my seventh year in the neighborhood Blank moved and tried to sell me his share in the ladder. He wanted $2.50, which I thought excessive. For six years the ladder had been out of doors, and it was showing signs of wear and tear. I offered to pay him $1.50 or to take that sum for my own interest; but no, he would have no use for a ladder in the flat to which he was moving, and I must buy it at his price. I said it wasn't worth it. He grew sulky, and so the matter rested.

"The Blanks were to leave the 1st of May. Two days before that date I had to go away on business, my wife went to visit her sister and we shut up the house for a week. When we returned the Blanks were gone and I found in our letter box a curt note from him:

" 'As you would not come to terms about the ladder, I have settled the matter by dividing it equally. Have taken my half and left yours on the fence.'

"Well, a thirty foot ladder is a little cumbersome, and, although a fifteen foot ladder is rather short, still I thought on the whole I should be satisfied with that solution of the difficulty. From the back doorway I looked over at my half of the ladder as it lay on top of the fence and was surprised to see how long it seemed to be; certainly it was more than fifteen feet. I went out for a closer inspection and made a strange discovery. Blank had fulfilled the neighbor's predictions and had 'broken out in an unexpected spot.' With nice accuracy and an almost inconceivable display of malice, he had sawed every round apart through the middle. He had divided that ladder lengthwise from top to bottom!"

A petition for an ice-breaker to lay at the mouth of the Thames during the winter, ready to deal with the ice in the spring, has been sent to the Dominion Government by Chatham city council.

THE SPORTING WORLD

THE "IRISH" WILL BE IN THE GAME AGAIN

St. Michael's Will Have Two Teams, Old Guard for Seniors and College for Juniors

Toronto, Dec. 10.—The most welcome announcement that has reached the ears of Toronto hockey fans for many a day was made last night by the management of the St. Michael's College Club. The "Irish" will be in the game again this season. Not only will the Blue and Black have a senior team, but they will also be represented in the junior series. The "Midgets" will be recruited at St. Michael's College, at which the "big" team got its start.

There has been much speculation in hockey circles for the past couple of months as to whether St. Michael's would have a team this season. The announcement that they will be right on the job again is hailed with very general satisfaction. The hockey season would not be right without the Irish out there fighting for a place at the top. Some of the veterans evinced a desire to discard the winter pastime togs. They have been in the game for many seasons and have won the senior and junior championships of the O. H. A. and the Allan Cup, the most coveted of Canadian hockey trophies. There is no question of the wisdom of placing a junior seven in the big association. It will act as a "feeder" to the senior team.

At last night's meeting of the club all of last season's players turned up and unanimously agreed to wear the pale blue jersey for one more season. Addison, Laflamme, Dissette, Murphy, Rankin, Mathews, McCamus, Richardson and others of the old guard were present, as well as a number of new players whose names will not be made public for the moment. The management has had applications from several players who want to try for places on the team. The latter will be quite strong enough to hold its own with any of the local senior sevens.

Nothing has been done as to the appointment of a manager. It is said that Frank Dissette cannot afford the time to devote to the team. It is not certain as yet that he Irish will be managed by an individual rather than by a committee. Experience has proved that the committee idea is not always successful. St. Michael's will commence practice at once.

COMMENT

As You Like it

Many O.H.A. towns have sent men to the front with the Canadian contingents to fight the great cause of the Empire, but no single place in Canada has contributed more hockey players than Cobourg. Dick Turpin and others went with the first contingent, and on the second contingent, which left last Friday, out of 47 men, ten, including Manager John Burnet, were playing members of the Cobourg Hockey Club. They included Don Crozier, Joe Hand, Fred Hinman, Asa Lapp, Peter McCallum, Frank Mulhall, Vincent Peachey, Russell Penwarden, and Stewart Waldon.

The Ottawa Senators have offered to trade Artie Lage to Hamilton for Red Fisher. The deal is pending completion.

Ottawa has a deal pending with St. Thomas for Merlin Kopp. The deal consists of Dusty Bullock and some cash. Kopp would add a lot of speed to the Senators on the base lines.

The system of scoring assists in giving the players credit for the part they do in helping their team-mates to register goals, which was introduced in the Pacific Coast Hockey association last season, will be continued in the approaching series. The player who assists in a score by passing the puck at the psychological moment will receive credit for it, and, while at the end of the season he may not have many goals to his credit, the records will show just how valuable he has been by the number of assists he has been responsible for in the season's campaign. The new rule worked out well last season, and it was adopted by many of the eastern teams. Tommy Dunderdale led the league with Taylor in goal-securing last season, but he was beaten by Taylor of Vancouver, and Kerr of Victoria, in the total points for goals and assists. Taylor had 39 points to his credit. Kerr 31, and Dunderdale 28. Their records were:

	Games	Goals	Assists	Pts.
Dunderdale.	16	24	4	28
Taylor ...	16	24	15	39
Kerr	16	20	11	31

"MIKE" DONLIN.

McGILL PLAYERS FOR THE FRONT.

Montreal, Dec. 10. — The McGill Rugby Club was given a jolt yesterday when it was announced that several of the players who had been counted on for next season will go to the front early in the spring in connection with the base hospital which McGill University will man. Amongst those who have signified their intention of going is Lorne Montgomery who has played quarterback, and has generaled the senior team for the past two seasons. Dud Rose, Otto Demuth, Norman Williamson, and Greenwood are going, and as several who will graduate in the spring will also join, it is probable the team will be broken up next year.

JERRY COUGHLIN TO PLAY FOR NEW YORK

Former Peterboro Boy and Cree of Last Year's Syracuse Team Signed by Irish-Americans

New York, Dec. 10.—Jimmy Cree and Jerry Coughlin are two of the players on whom the Irish-Americans are depending to put them in the lead in the race for the championship. Cree is an Indian and has a great reputation as a hockey player. He was ineligible to play last year. He is considered one of the best rovers in the country, and has been showing up particularly well in practice at the St. Nicholas rink.

Coughlin played centre on the Peterboro team two seasons ago, and with Cree on the forward line will make a combination hard to beat. This pair, the Irish-Americans think, will be able to offset the best work of the fast St. Nicholas team.

Johnny McGrath, the fast right wing, is captain of the Irish-Americans. Other veterans out for the team are Kelly, Du Fresne and Ernie Caron. Bud Clafy, who played in one game last season, is also out for the team. Among the new men are Dr. Murphy, who played on Queen's University team two years ago; Frank Shea of Hamilton; George Abraham, a former Montreal A. A. player; Tom McCarthy, who played with the Emeralds, of Ottawa; Higgins of last year's Syracuse team, and several other candidates who formerly played on Canadian college teams.

"DON'T CRAB" IS THE ADVICE OF MIKE DONLIN

His Validictory on His Retirement From the Base Lines

The unconditional release of Mike Donlin from the Giants marks the retirement—that is to say, retirement as a big league player—of one of the most picturesque, most written about and most likable athletes that ever cut his mark on the big circuit.

Contrary to the general understanding of those uninitiated in baseball, an unconditional release is intended as a compliment. It means that the player is given permission to dicker and barter for his services with any team he pleases, whether it be in the big leagues or the minors. Usually a player is held under the reserve clause, so that if another club desires his services money will have to be paid for the release of his contract.

Mike knew some time ago that he was to be released. In fact, he very candidly said in the spring that he knew that McGraw was carrying him out of friendship, though he would try and do enough to earn his salary.

There was never a better natural hitter than Donlin, and his slipping as a player began when he quit baseball in 1908 to work a season on the stage. He was out for two years, and when he did come back as a member of the Boston club he realized quickly that a large part of his baseball punch was gone. McGraw took him as a member of the Giants on their tour to Cuba, and he proved such a valuable man in exhibition affairs that he was taken on the trip around the world.

Though much has been written and talked of the old days when Donlin broke over the traces and did things of which he is not proud, he was born with the instincts of a gentleman. Once he had grown old enough to see the error of his early instincts and became immensely popular with the players as well as the public.

"To tell you the truth," he says, "I never got a real chance to prove that I was not a roughneck until I became a Giant in 1906. Before that I had been in Cincinnati, and, believe me, they handed me knocks out there as a daily diet.

"If asked to give advice to a young player," he added, "I would tell him above all things not to be a crab, and, moreover, not to get the impression that everybody was trying to beat him out of something. I believe in ball players saving their money, though I have not practised it, but I think they can go far with that. A fellow can lose a lot of knowledge about people by being so close he won't go out and mix with them. A man who is inexcusably stingy will never have friends, and, believe me, friends are more valuable than money, when you need them."

Among newspaper men Donlin is known as one of the most appreciative ball players in the game.

THE REAL TEST

There is no surer test of the real success of the management of a Life Company than the feeling of its clients, the policy-holders, towards it.

How the Canada Life Stands the Test

The Company is constantly receiving letters expressing gratification for increasing policy dividends, appreciation of generous treatment by the management, or grateful thanks for prompt payment of claims.

In Illustration

A CHICAGO BANK PRESIDENT lately wrote: "This dividend is particularly gratifying . . . and reflects great credit on the management of your good Company."

SIR WILLIAM WHYTE'S EXECUTOR wrote: "I have to thank you very cordially for the promptitude with which you settled our claim."

A PHILADELPHIA POLICYHOLDER says: "Your methods seem to make a friend of a policyholder, and I assure you that after dealing with your company fifteen years or more, I feel enthusiastic of your worth and kind treatment."

These letters are not exceptional; they are typical of those being received nearly every day.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—I am most pleased to learn that the business girls, girls in stores and factories, are contributing so liberally to the Peterborough Patriotic Fund for the dependents of our noble boys who have gone to the front. I think that the ladies who have allowances and independent means that are not now reached should be given the opportunity of contributing their share. I realize that this is the time when we must all deny ourselves some of the comforts we have enjoyed, and feel quite sure that if this suggestion is brought before these ladies, a liberal response will be returned.

Yours truly.
F. H. DOBBIN,
Chairman Publicity Committee.

OBITUARY

JOHN YONGE.

Mr. John Yonge of Hamilton, Ont., for many years a resident of Apsley, died in Hamilton, Tuesday, at the ripe age of 80 years. His body came to this city on the noon C.P.R. train yesterday. He was born in Ireland but came to this country early, living in Apsley until he retired and moved to Hamilton. Mr. T. C. Yonge of this city is a son of the deceased.

Rev. Mr. Yonge of New York State, another son, arrived in the city for the funeral which took place this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

SOME SPLENDID SUBSCRIPTIONS

Among the fine subscriptions that helped to swell the amounts that were registered by the teams were $500 from Mr. R. B. Rogers, $500 from J. D. Collins, Mr. A. W. Cressman $250, T. F. Matthews $500, and then some more. Turner and Sons, who upheld the British traditions of the head of the firm with $500, B. F. Ackerman for the whale of a contribution of $1,000, and several in kind. Mr. Dumble, gave a $700 lot, with the remark that the committee could sell it for what they liked but to credit him with $500. That lot will be put up at auction, likely in the rooms, and we will see who will get it.

AN APPEAL FOR A WIDER USE OF THE FLAG

Public Meeting Arranged for Next Monday in the Council Chamber

Editor, Review:

Sir,—The world conflict, in which our Empire is engaged is bringing home to many Canadians the meaning and value of certain possessions which were perhaps indifferently regarded and too little used in times of peace. Among these is our flag. Wherever it waves today, stimulating messages of patriotism are flashed forth in all directions, bringing before men's imagination the Empire, its glory and its needs, and calling all sons and daughters of the Empire to imperial duties.

This being so, why should we not widely extend the use of a symbol so heartening and so inspiring? Contemplate in imagination the effect if, looking down our streets, flags were to be seen floating generally from churches, commercial buildings, factories and homes!

Now, why should we not enjoy something at least of this inspiration? Small flags can be obtained for a trifling sum and give the same message as larger ones. All homes should possess their country's ensign; most of us have one or more, and if only these were used, the result would be striking. But following an all too easy-going custom, we seldom display our flags, even on public holidays, and so their message and inspiration are lost.

Is not this time so exceptional as to call for the changing of certain customs? The national flag is something more than an evidence of joy or exultation, of a cheap sale, or of a holiday excursion! Its great purpose is surely to enable all citizens to express belief in and loyalty to their country, particularly called for at times of struggle and crisis. The flag is really our but it becomes so only when flying. Hoisting it we practically say, "I believe in my country and stand for her," and this expression is even more valuable in the hour of defeat than in that of victory.

While constant general use might not be possible, perhaps it might be considered advisable once a week, say on Sunday, the "Church and home day," when innumerable prayers ascend. Of course, this might not be deemed practicable.

At all events, the whole subject would seem to be worthy of thoughtful consideration to determine what is reasonable and possible of attainment. With this object in view, a public meeting has been arranged for next Monday, the 14th inst., at 8 p.m., by permission of the Mayor, in the council chamber. Delegates will attend from several patriotic societies which have given general endorsation to the suggestion that something should be done, and an invitation is offered to any other interested citizens.

Should a movement in any form be determined on, an opportunity for inaugurating it is presented in connection with the departure of our Canadian citizen-soldiers for the front, and Canada's entry into the present battle fields of the Empire.

What more appropriate reminder of our absent comrades could there be than the frequent sight of the Flag under which they serve? Floating proudly over our homes in times of depression it would tend to take people out of themselves and remind them of the wider needs and glory of the Empire.

But to eyes which could see, a far more powerful inspiration would be revealed by the Flag.

Its central PREDOMINATING SYMBOL, THE CROSS, would stand forth as never before, signalling messages of the glory of knightly succour, Christian self-sacrifice and hardship cheerfully borne. And looking further, there is at least a dim suggestion of the Figure of a Crucified One triumphant over death. Yes, the Cross-emblazoned banner is no token of depression or defeat, but with its brilliant colouring, one of cheer and joy and victory.

Have we not a wonderful flag, capable of giving forth abundantly both National and Religious inspiration? Once more, I venture to say, cannot we agree to by some means make a wider use of such a possession?

Yours, etc.,
J. C. DAVIDSON,
December 10, 1914.

CAME HERE WHEN THREE YEARS OLD

Daniel Cushing Succumbed to Attack of Pneumonia

Peterborough has lost another of its pioneer citizens in the person of Daniel Cushing, 330 Sherbrooke St., whose death took place at 4.45 this morning, after an illness of about fourteen days.

There are few residents of the city to whom the late Mr. Cushing was unknown. He was one of its earliest residents, coming here from Ireland with his parents when only three years of age.

He was in his 68th year, and lived here for 65, where he followed landscape gardening as an occupation. Pneumonia was the cause of death.

The deceased leaves a wife, two sons and one daughter, John and Daniel, and Mary Ellen.

He was an active member of St. Peter's T. A. S.

His funeral will take place Saturday morning from his late residence, 330 Sherbrooke street, to the Roman Catholic cemetery, after a service in St. Peter's Cathedral at 9 o'clock.

TURKISH ARMY HAS YIELDED

Subhi Bey Surrenders to the British

LONDON, Dec. 10.—It is officially announced that Subhi Bey, late governor of Basra, Asiatic Turkey, commander of the Turkish forces at Kurna, Tuesday surrendered unconditionally with his troops to the Indian expeditionary force, which is operating at the head of the Persian Gulf.

Kurna subsequently was occupied by the British, who are now in complete control of the country from the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers to the sea, and of the richest part of the fertile delta.

The Indian officer in a despatch describing the operations of the British forces on the Persian Gulf, says:—

"A reconnaissance of the enemy's position at Kurna was made Dec. 5 by Col. G. S. Fraser, with the 110th Mahratta Light Infantry. The enemy was encountered on the left bank of the Tigris, opposite Kurna. They were promptly attacked and driven across the river, losing heavily. Two guns and 70 prisoners, including three Turkish officers, were captured.

"Kurna was found to be strongly held by guns and infantry, and the British, finding no means of crossing the Tigris, withdrew to their original bivouac.

"The following day reinforcements were sent from Basra under Brig.-Gen. Charles Irvin Fry, and captured Masera, cleared the left bank of the Tigris, and took three guns and 100 prisoners, including three officers.

"On Dec. 8, the British crossed the river, and the next day Subhi Bey surrendered.

"The British casualties during the whole of these operations amounted to one British officer killed and three wounded, with 40 Indians of the rank and file killed and 120 wounded."

Tribes Hostile to Turkey.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Dec. 10.—The latest news received in Egypt from Arabia shows that the attitude of the Moslems in the Aden hinterland is most satisfactory. Most of the tribes in Yemen and Assir are still hostile to Turkey, and would welcome the British. Turkish misgovernment has entirely alienated the Arabians. Reports from the Soudan state that the natives are loyal everywhere. It is reported from Syria that the Turkish army for the invasion of Egypt has been considerably depleted in order to prevent the Russian advance.

LODZ WAS GIVEN UP

Russians Did not Lose a Man in Evacuating the City

PETROGRAD, Dec. 10.—The evacuation by the Russians of Lodz, Russian Poland, is admitted in a semi-official communication issued yesterday, though the statement adds that the Russians did not lose a soldier when the position was given up. The Russians continue their operations against Cracow.

The text of the communication regarding Lodz is as follows:—

"The German official communication says that the Russians must have had enormous losses in evacuating Lodz. The confidence that should be placed in this communication is evidenced by the fact that the Russian troops withdrew from Lodz about midnight on Dec. 6, while the Germans remained motionless for fifteen hours in front of our empty trenches, the attack on which had cost them more than 10,000 soldiers, and upon which they dared not advance.

"Only at three o'clock in the afternoon of Dec. 6 did the Germans move forward to verify that there was nobody in the trenches facing them. They then entered the town.

"In changing our positions in the region of Lodz we did not lose a soldier. We undertook this manoeuvre only after we had ascertained that the Germans had definitely decided not to continue their attacks in this district.

"Our manoeuvre was entirely independent of any aggressive action on the part of the enemy."

The Russian movements enveloping Cracow continues slowly, but successfully. According to information reaching Petrograd, however, the centre of operations has shifted to the southward to the foothills of the Carpathians, on the left wing of the Russian front, which extends from Velitchka, six miles from Cracow, and within the outer circles of the Cracow forts, to Neu Zandet, 70 miles southeast of Cracow.

Quebec Man Saw Outrage.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10.—Lieut. De Fong, a resident of Verdun, Que., has returned from the battle front where he served with the Belgian army. He was wounded in the shoulder, his injury having been received just outside of Dixmude. He states that he witnessed a case of German barbarism at Termonde where a 17-year-old girl was forcibly taken away by a German officer while her father was tied to a telegraph pole and made a target for empty champagne bottles until he was dead, and a younger brother of the girl was tightly bound and thrown to the ground.

Americans in London have formed an "American Society" with Mr. Geo. A. White as president. There are already one hundred members enrolled.

Review that during the trouble at the water works plant, ten or twelve men were at work. The superintendent was on the job practically all of the time.

Questioned as to the volume of water, Mr. Moore said there was a head of ten feet and that the maximum provided for was twelve feet. The same trouble had been experienced from Fenelon Falls to Trenton.

He said the consulting engineer was on his way to Peterboro to discuss with the commission, the question of an auxiliary plant.

Asked why the commission had not taken the step before, Mr. Moore said the commission had been expending the money available in improvements to the system of mains and they had not had the money to go ahead with the former proposition. He pointed out that there had been no demand made on the ratepayers for money. The extensions to the mains last year cost about $20,000.

Lakefield Shut Down.

From another source the Review was informed that the Lakefield plant was shut down part of yesterday and that the officials at Young's Point had the worst experience with ice in twenty years.

The Auburn mills were without power, part of which is provided at the mills. They were helpless to act. The Quaker Oats Co., the C. G. E., who have their own power houses, were in a similar position. The street railway company which gets its power from the new Auburn plant, owned by the Seymour Power Company were in the same fix. Lindsay had no power and the papers of that town, as was the case in Peterboro, printed their regular edition under great disadvantage.

The Accusing Coin

A Christmas Parable

By EDWIN MARKHAM

It was when Ferdinand was king
In Naples, back in a little ring
Of noisy years forgot and gone,
A whirl of mist across the dawn.
A little legend of those years
Stays to proclaim their toils and tears,
One little legend that, I wit,
Is in the Book of Judgment writ.
And now the accusement of this rime
Will cry it into the ear of Time.

The king to bind with crafty hold
St. Francis of Castellammare,
Flung to the friar a purse of gold—
You should have seen the courtiers stare—
A thousand ducats as an alms
To lay within God's reaching palms!

But Francis, friend of God, stooped down
And, lifting up one coin aglow
New stamped with Ferdinand's head and crown,
He bent it till it broke, when, lo,
Blood gushed from it in scarlet flow!

"Take back your gold," the friar cried;
"The traitor gold that props your pride!
Behold, the people's blood you draw
Through stealthy treasons of the law!
This blood cries out the griefs and wrongs
Of them to whom the gold belongs.
Give all to them if you would give
The gold into God's hand and live!"

Beware! All deeds, even deeds of kings,
May cry from out these mortal things.
—New York Sun.

CHRISTMAS IN THE ARCTIC

A good many years ago the missionaries in Labrador began to make use of white turnips at Christmas time. Maybe our brethren in their first attempts to grow something on this bleak coast were gladly surprised at the heartiness and the returns this vegetable yielded, and in order to make the most of it and with an eye to benefiting the Eskimos they reserved a quantity of these nice large turnips for Christmas. Then on Christmas eve, during one of the most impressive services of the year, these same turnips were served with a small lighted candle stuck in the middle, and each child in the community, from the infant in arms to the boy or girl of fourteen, received one of them as a Christmas gift. White turnips are classed at home among the inferior or common fruits of the field, but this is by no means the case in Labrador. Most of these people of the far north have never seen an apple or an orange or a plum, and as they cannot think of these fruits by comparison the turnip occupies the highest rung of the ladder in their estimation. You ought to see one of these Eskimo boys or girls bite into a turnip, writes Christian Schmitt in the Christian Herald. It is enough to make one's mouth water. At Christmas I have seen more than once not only the turnip disappear, but the candle also.

Jack Horner Pies Popular Feature of Christmas Parties

ELABORATELY trimmed Jack Horner pies, within which are concealed small gifts and favors, are conspicuous at holiday parties. One design is in the shape of a huge Christmas bell. It is of gold paper, with clusters of holly tied in place with scarlet gauze ribbon, and is to be suspended by ribbon from a chandelier. Inside the white tissue paper lining are concealed two dozen favors, each one connected with a long streamer of scarlet gauze ribbon with a little gilt bell at the end.

The same design is carried out in an immense bell covered with frosted silver paper and decorated with sprays of mistletoe tied with green and scarlet tulle. The mistletoe harmonizes with the frostiness of the silver paper and the tulle is even lighter and prettier than the gauze ribbon. The individual bells are of silver to match.

A big plum pudding Horner pie, made of just the right shade of brown crape paper and with many little depressions showing simulated bits of fruit made of black glazed paper, is another design. Each simulated plum is the starting place for a ribbon attached to a gift, so that each guest is literally asked to "pull out a plum" from the contents of the big dish. The dish is surrounded with a circle of holly tied with a full bow of scarlet tulle.

Another Horner pie, designed to hang from a central chandelier, is in the form of a fashionable muff, with many frillings of white crape paper and an elaborately arranged lining of white tissue, inside of which are the gifts. The muff represents white fur and is made of short fringes of paper. On each side is fastened a spray of mistletoe attached to the end of each red ribbon hanging from the inside of the muff.

Where the Jack Horner pie is to be used as a centerpiece on a table a small natural Christmas tree makes a pretty decoration. The gifts can be arranged in a pan or dish, giving space in the center for a firm base for the tree.

An ornamental flowerpot or jardiniere can be fashioned in this way, covering the outside with closely laid rows of twisted paper rope and scattering artificial moss around the base of the Christmas tree. Under this start the ribbons, connecting each gift to a miniature tree, which serves as a favor for each person.

Tiny wisps of evergreen, kept upright by a spool, make pretty table decorations at each plate. The spools can be painted red or green or can be covered with tinsel paper.

Legend of Christmas Wreaths.

In sword and sash and scarlet coat
Upon a Christmas day
Through frosty woods and hoary fields
A soldier rode away.
She watched him through the falling snow,
A young and lovely maid,
In milky pearls and flowing robes
Of velvet green arrayed.

With rumors of the distant wars
The months went slowly by Till once again the Christmas bells
Were pealing to the sky,
And, walking in the lonely wood,
A bush the maiden found
With thorns as sharp as little swords
And scarlet berries crowned.

She leaned against an ancient oak
And wove a wreath to wear
Of scarlet berries, bright and gay,
And set it on her hair.
And, lo, the pearls upon her breast
Were changed to berries, too,
And, rooted to the oak, a branch
Of mistletoe she grew!

When sweet and clear the Christmas bells
Ring out o'er vale and hill
The maiden mistletoe is seen
In pearls and velvet still,
And with her in the revels ruled
By music, mirth and folly,
In sword and scarlet still arrayed,
Behold the soldier holly!

A Hard Row to Hoe But They Hoed it

Some Interesting Incidents in the History of the Peterboro Corps of the Salvation Army, Including a Tale About Mark Spenceley's Horn

For well nigh thirty years there has been an institution in the city of Peterborough engaged in the noble task of saving souls; reclaiming the fallen, the outcast, the drunkard, the woman of easy virtue, the man who has lost his manhood. It has consistently and persistently held aloft the torch of truth and salvation. It has publicly proclaimed the messages of God to these who would lend ear. It has fought opposition, ridicule and jeers unshrinkingly, never wavering, and today it stands for true religion, pure and undefiled before God and man. That institution is the Peterborough Corps of the Salvation Army.

Today the Salvation Army and band is long past the experimental stage. It is in its prime in every sense of the word, an organization with a reputation firmly established throughout the Dominion and with a corps of musicians that cannot be surpassed by any similar aggregation of instrumentalists in the country. If one were asked to touch the source of all its greatness he could give but one answer. It is great because every member is a living example of its efficiency, its power and blessing.

Founded in 1885.

The nucleus of the present Salvation Army was laid on July 17th, 1885, when Staff Captain Eadie, A. D. C., arrived in the town for the purpose of establishing a corps here. That evening will always be a memorable one for those who recollect it. That night the soldiers turned out in full force, among the rank and file being several officers and soldiers from other places. After marching through the principal streets they went to Bradburn's opera house where most of the soldiers took seats upon the platform.

Among them were Staff Captain Eadie, his assistant, Captain Robinson of Brantford, Capt. Professor Wiggins, Cobourg, Capt. Scott, Lindsay, Capt. Lottie Willis, in command here and Cadet Hart. There was a large attendance at this organization meeting. Captain Wiggins spoke briefly of the persecution the army has been subjected to in Cobourg, but it had always won the victory. Captain Wiggins told part of his own life story. For 25 years before he received salvation he did not believe that he had more than two days' sober. While a church organist, he often used to play the instrument when under the influence of whiskey. Captain Scott then led in prayer. Staff Capt. Eadie called the soldiers together and proceeded to form the Peterborough corps, afterwards outlinging what he expected of the officers and defining their duties.

A Hallelujah Wedding.

The next event of any great interest chronicled dealing with the army occurred about one month later, when Captain Eadie's hallelujah wedding was solemnized. Bills had been posted up around the city announcing the wedding would take place in the opera house. Captain Eadie was married amid great rejoicing on the stage of the opera house, the old records devoting almost a whole column to the wedding, at which "Happy" Nancy and "Glory" Tom made rousing speeches, the former "waxing eloquent" according to the chronicler of another day.

A Hard Row to Hoe.

When one speaks of the Salvation Army he immediately connects it with the army band, and it is but natural for after all, the band has done grand work in Peterborough. For years they had a hard row to hoe before commencing to blossom into anything remotely resembling their present day efficiency. There is some slight uncertainty over whom credit belongs for founding the present band, but old timers say the honor belongs to Mr. J. M. Greene who came up from Stirling, Ont., and gathered around him five men fairly proficient with different instruments. The regular streets parades were then commenced and many were the amusing incidents that centred around the infant band. One day Mark Spencely one of the first men to join the band, was in a parade, vigorously blowing a somewhat weatherbeaten bass horn. There happened to be a hole in this same instrument which Mark had stuffed with soap to preserve harmony. But alas, an extra heavy blast, and out shot the soap, and left Mark loudly tooting forth the horrible discord.

Band Grew Rapidly.

As time passed and immigration from the old country started, the strength of the band was greatly augmented. It was recognized however that some musical tuition was necessary and Finch W. Miller proffered his services as instructor and practices were held regularly, the band making splendid strides. Women as well as men gave freely of their time and services. Mr. George Stevens became the bandmaster holding the office for several years, being succeeded by Frank Arnold and later by J. M. Greene who held the office for sixteen years all told and who has done more than any other leader for its welfare. Mr. W. E. Payton was leader for three years however previous to bandmaster Greene. Bandmaster Greene was succeeded by W. H. Peryer who led the band up to a few weeks ago, when Handmaster Beer arrived from Calgary and is now in control..

Had Exciting History.

But to go back twenty-five years or thereabouts and learn of the Salvation Army's eventful youth is indeed an interesting occupation.

Mark Spencely when in a reminiscent mood is a veritable mine of army anecdotes.

"Many were the "fricases" we used to have in them days," declared Mark, his eye lighting as the memories crowded in upon him.

He described some of the persecution suffered by the founders and early members of the army.

A well known Peterborough man went to the barracks on Simcoe Street one night with the avowed purpose of starting something. He declared to a mob outside that he was going to call a certain man a "liar" when he rose to give his testimony. Sure enough he did, but he soon had reason to be sorry. He was hurriedly grabbed and hustled from the building and badly pummelled by a number of men outside, receiving a lesson that was badly needed.

The First Barracks.

During their early history the army was located in the old church on Aylmer Street where many a soul was won to Christ and miracles of salvation performed. Many a sinner whose reclamation seemed impossible drifted in and came forth a saved man. It was early recognized that the army was to become a force in the city as the records of the organization have amply justified. Only those however who were in the thick of the fight for recognition in the early days can really describe how strongly they fought and how many triumphs were won.

The progress of the band kept pace with that of the army. Things were vastly different then to now in the management of the band. Then every member had to pay for his own instruments and tuition and there was no one place such as a band hall where they could practice as they felt inclined. Visits were made nightly to the homes of the different members where they managed to get in a certain amount of practice. Later however they secured quarters above an old hide shop where Adam Hall's establishment now stands and here every night the bandsmen would congregate for practice. It was at this time that Mr. Finch Miller was secured to train the band and whip them into shape.

Opposed by Police.

While the Salvation Army was regarded with contempt by many people and even was opposed by the police, they were never prevented from marching on the main streets or playing on the corners. The same cannot apply however to Lakefield where one of the members of the army was arrested for refusing to withdraw from the main street in response to a constable's order. For such disobedience he was confined to jail for two weeks on a charge of public blocking the streets and creating a disturbance. It is said however that the army was not popular with the police here for some time but they were never molested.

A Changed Life.

Once a physical wreck, a slave to drink and as low in the social and moral scale as man could be; today through the influence and saving grace of Christ a decent respectable hard working citizen. That is the history in a few words of Alfred Cooney, who owes his remarkable reclamation and salvation to the practical religion preached every day by Adjutant McElhiney in charge of the Salvation Army.

You are welcome any time to drop in at the barracks and talk to him yourself. You will find him engaged in looking after the barracks, earning honest money and able to look you squarely in the eye and tell you he is a different man to what he was a year ago. That is but one of scores of things that have been accomplished by the devoted adjutant and his faithful helpmate, Mrs. McElhiney, during their short residence in Peterboro, but it illustrates the spirit that animates them to serve their fellowmen. Scarcely a day goes by without you will find the adjutant or his partner at the police station ready to assist those in need of help, the reckless thoughtless, or drink sodden man; the erring or wayward girl, to start a better life. Sometimes they fail, 'tis true, but more often they succeed and if the truth were only known there is many a man and woman in Peterborough today who could tell a story of rescue from sin through the loving assistance of the Salvation Army.

TWO CHRISTMAS COOKIES

In all good, old fashioned German households the hausfrau is very busy for days baking her Christmas cakes. Does it seem to you rather early? No, indeed. It is high time that the Yuletide goodies were being packed in the huge earthenware crocks to stand in the cool storeroom to "mellow." They improve with age, just like fruit cake. Here are a few delicious cookies that are served at festive coffees during the holiday season:

CHOCOLATE KISSES.

One pound ground almonds, one pound pulverized sugar, one-half pound sweet chocolate (ground), stiffly beaten whites of eight eggs, juice of one-half lemon.

Stir the sugar into the beaten whites for ten minutes. Add the lemon juice, chocolate and almonds. Drop with a spoon on buttered tins and bake in a very cool oven until crisp to the touch.

HAZELNUT COOKIES.

One-half pound ground hazelnuts, one-half pound ground almonds, one pound pulverized sugar, whites of five eggs.

Beat the whites stiff. Add sugar and stir ten minutes. Take out one-half cupful of the mixture to be spread on the top of the cookies just before baking. Roll out the mixture one-quarter inch thick, cut into pretty shapes and bake in a cool oven until the pale fawn color appears.

CHRISTMAS FRUITS

Seasonable Delicacies to Adorn the Holiday Dinner Table.

Fortunately at Christmas there are many fruits to be had. These not only add to the elegance of the table, but are dainties that will neutralize the indigestible qualities of other foods. The acid fruits, like oranges, grapefruit or pineapple, are especially good for this purpose. They may be served in the form of salads or as sherbets, mousses, compotes or as fillings for puddings and pies.

Winter pears, juicy red apples, oranges, bananas and clusters of grapes piled high in a basket or fruit dish make a handsome centerpiece for the Christmas table. Dates and figs may be served also.

Fresh fruits are to be preferred, of course, but for the dinner the housewife who is proud of her culinary skill has opportunity to draw on her store of put up fruit for jams, jellies or preserves.

A delicious salad may be made of pears, apples, nuts and figs as follows: Peel and core the apples and pears. Cut them into slices, arrange the slices of apple around the salad bowl, over these the pear slices; then lay little heaps of blanched walnuts all around the dish. Upon each heap place the figs, cut in two, around and overlapping the apple and pear slices; then a mound of minced almonds. In the center of the bowl arrange a mound of minced apple slices; screen these with walnut, also minced, and lemon slices, peeled and free from seeds. Screen the whole with whipped cream, at intervals dusting in fine powdered sugar. White wine vinegar may be added to taste or the juice of two or [illegible] lemons.

FRUIT FOR CHRISTMAS TABLE.

VARIETY IN CAKES

Attractive Shapes With Christmas Decorations Please Children.

Small cakes are useful to have in the pantry at Christmas time, especially if there are little folks in the family. The tiny cakes may be made of simple ingredients and will be quite as satisfactory to the tot as the rich Christmas cakes which are prepared for the adults. The cakes should be got up in attractive style. A little pink, green, white or chocolate icing, candies, cherries or tiny bits of holly or mistletoe may be used as decorations.

Domino cakes always please the children. To prepare them make a sponge cake or any other simple cake mixture and bake it in shallow tins, making the cake about half an inch thick when cooked. When cool ice with white icing. Allow this to set, then with a sharp knife cut it into small oblongs about three inches long by one and a half inches wide. Melt a little chocolate and with a small brush paint spots to represent dominos. If wished the little cakes may be split open and spread with jelly before icing.

Holly cakes may be thus prepared: Take half a cupful of shortening, a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of milk, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder and the yolks of three eggs. Cream the shortening and sugar together until light, add the yolks of eggs, which have been beaten until light, and the milk slowly. Sift the flour and baking powder together and mix well. Bake in shallow pan which has been lined with brown paper. Bake fifteen to eighteen minutes in hot oven. Dust with pulverized sugar and turn on cake cloth and remove paper. When cold cut out with a small cake cutter. You may ice them with white icing and place a small spray of holly on each cake.

LET THIS BE YOUR CHRISTMAS.

A day off, a few remembrances from relatives and friends and a good dinner—is that all that Christmas means to you? Surely you are going to make it an occasion for more than usual rejoicing this year, a real old fashioned Christmas. Surely you are going to be more liberal in spirit than ever before and scatter merriment on all sides. Have you been a little selfish, have you devoted so much time to enjoying yourself that you have forgotten other folks?

Those you have forgotten are good folks, aren't they, the best folks in the world? And you are just going to show them how appreciative you are. You don't like this way of turning dear old Christmas into an occasion for trading and exchanging gifts.

You are going to see all the friends you can on that day and shake hands with as many; pat them on the back and tell them how glad you are to be with them. And to those you cannot see you are going to write cheery, warm hearted letters and tell them you want to hear from them oftener. Isn't that how you feel about the greatest of all birthdays?

HOMEMADE TRIMMINGS ADD TO TREE'S BEAUTY

The beauty of a Christmas tree does not depend upon the amount of money which has been expended upon it. Capable fingers and judicious thought may weave the magic spell of romance about it. Indeed, the flutter of preparation and the merriment of creating your own decorations have far more the real spirit of Christmas than a hurried visit to a store where these things can be purchased at short notice.

Indeed, nothing quite takes the place of the old time tree, with its boughs laden with simple gifts and homemade ornaments. Each trifle has some significance—has a meaning of its own, or a funny incident connected with it. If you live away from the city there are many things right at hand which you can turn to good account for the purpose.

Nuts may be gilded or silvered or covered with gold or silver paper. Popcorn may be strung, and if you wish for a bit of gay color it may be dipped into a dye of the color you want. Individual cranberries, or strings of them, make effective trimmings. Crabapples, in all the radiance of their fresh color, or oranges make a bright spot on the somber green. Gingerbread animals, birds and dolls are a delight, and flowers of tissue paper, cornucopias and many geometrical figures may be made with a little ingenuity. Paper dolls, cut from magazines and colored, if they are not already so, mounted on cardboard look quite imposing, and chains of colored or gold paper may be made by folding the paper innumerable times and cutting it in the shape required. When you unfold it one link is fastened within the other, and a large chain may be draped from branch to branch. Circles made by folding a paper in quarters and stringing a number of these together at the folded point make lovely balls. Dolls can be fashioned from many objects. A corncob holds many possibilities, legs and arms and a cotton padded head being joined to this body. And did you ever see a dolly shaped from a clothespin?

Ides of March.

In the calendar of old Rome the fifteenth day of the months of March, May, July and October and the thirteenth day of the rest of the months were known as ides. In old Roman writings one hears of the "ides of March," which is a poetic way to express the date.

Wild Potatoes.

Botanists are unable to discover from what plant the aborigines of America developed the potato, for it is not found growing wild anywhere in the world.

We must learn to work with patience. With the tasks appointed to us will be provided the power and also the opportunity.

THE CHRISTMAS TURKEY

THE turkey is of course the most important item on the Christmas dinner menu, and the choice of the fowl is one of the most delicate tasks which the housewife has intrusted to her.

It is wise to economize on anything but the turkey. When buying she should go to a first class dealer and see that he gives her the best fowl he has in stock.

There is less danger of getting a cold storage turkey than a chicken, for advanced methods are in vogue in poultry raising, and the dealers are not often overstocked with turkeys since only enough to supply the trade from season to season are raised.

Keeping the Fowl.

Do not keep the turkey in so cold a place that it will freeze. Freezing impairs the flavor. It should be cleaned and dressed as soon as possible after being killed. Pinfeathers are best removed with a small knife.

To draw the tendons from the drumstick make an incision lengthwise between the bones of the leg below the joint while the foot is still attached to the body. Next, take a strong, thin skewer and pick up the tendons one at a time through the incision, hold the skewer with the tendon on it with the first two fingers and give a vigorous pull. There are seven small and two large tendons. If these are removed the drumstick will be as tender as any portion of the bird.

The feet may now be cut off a little below the joint and long hairs on the body removed by singeing. Do this by holding over a burner of the gas range or by lighting a small saucer of alcohol and holding the fowl over it. There is then no danger of smoking the skin.

Drawing the Turkey.

The turkey is then ready for drawing. Make an incision in the skin below the breastbone and with the hand remove the gizzard, heart, intestines and liver, being very careful not to break the gall bag, which is attached to the latter, as it would cause the parts with which it came in contact to have a very bitter taste. Remove the lungs, which lie on either side of the backbone; also the kidneys, windpipe and crop.

Wipe the bird well both inside and out. If there seems to be any indication that it has been kept too long wash with water in which a little soda has been dissolved and put a small piece of charcoal in the body to absorb any possible odor.

Trussing the Fowl.

Next truss the turkey as follows: Draw the legs up close to the body and fasten in place with a skewer run through both drumsticks and the body. Do the same with the wings, skewering them so that they lie flat. Cut the neck off close, fold the skin under and fasten it down with a small skewer.

Cut a slit in the skin just above that made for the removal of the intestines and pull the tail through the slit, fastening it in place with a long string that the opening may be concealed. Now take the same string and twist it round the ends of the skewer that holds the legs, cross the string over the back of the bird and fasten to the other skewer so as to hold all four joints in place and keep them from slipping.

Prepared For Roasting.

There are several ways of getting the turkey ready for roasting. It may be trussed and roasted without being stuffed at all, the pure flavor of the bird being thus preserved, or it may be served with any one of a dozen different dressings. When it is served unstuffed it should be sent to the table on a dish garnished with watercress. The only sauce needed is its own gravy.

Most persons, however, prefer the turkey stuffed. It may be stuffed with bread or cracker crumbs which have been seasoned with sage, thyme, salt and pepper.

The Christmas Table

FOR the woman who likes to entertain Christmas offers many opportunities. The social obligations of months may be paid off at this time with little extra trouble or expense. Decorations, of course, must be seasonable, although the Christmas table may be decorated in a number of ways.

Christmas bells covered with holly will give a festive appearance to any dining room. Strong wires wrapped around with ribbon and draped with greens should be fastened to the chandelier and bent to form the support of the bells. Each small bell is then suspended by a loop and bow of red ribbon to fall in front of a plate.

A large bell hangs a little higher in the center. From each tongue of the small bells is fastened a place card by means of baby ribbon. Around each plate there is a garland of evergreen fastened with a bow of red ribbon. This makes a very pretty table.

Tree Decoration.

For a variation in the way of table decoration set tiny Christmas trees at the four corners of a large mirror and a larger tree in the center. The frame of the mirror and the tree stands should be covered with green moss, over which asbestos snow should be piled. The trees should be decorated with tinsel and ornaments, and the center tree may have small candles.

The Basket Centerpiece.

The hostess who prefers a simpler decoration may perhaps find something to her liking in the following suggestion of a tasteful combination of holly and ribbon: A silver basket—or if a silver basket is not at hand any basket of a fancy weave of straw—filled with holly may form the centerpiece for the dinner table. A bow of red ribbon should be tied on the handle with one end trailing on the table. Bank holly around the basket, coming to points on the white table cloth.

Candlestick Arrangement.

Candlesticks should stand at each point bearing white tapers, with dainty shades of white lined with red. The places may be designated by dolls' stockings caught with bows of red ribbon and should be filled with nuts and bonbons. If desired red ribbon may stretch from each stocking to the basket, where, concealed by holly, it may be attached to some gift, to be drawn out at the end of the dinner.

Christmas Candies.

Christmas candies make suitable favors for the Christmas dinner or for the children's Yuletide party. The candies should be placed in fancy boxes, of which a wide assortment shown in the shops at the holiday season will serve as inspiration for those who wish to make their own. After all, with a little gay paper, some cardboard and a jar of paste very creditable substitutes may be prepared in case the hostess does not wish to purchase boxes.

Candy Recipes.

Some simple Christmas candies may be prepared as follows:

Cocoanut Snowballs.—Form some cooked or uncooked fondant into balls of uniform size, roll lightly in grated cocoanut and place on glazed paper to harden. These are especially attractive for children's Christmas boxes and for parties.

Christmas Stars.—Cook two pounds of sugar and one pint of water until when a little is poured into cold water it can be formed into a ball; then remove from the fire and add a pound of grated cocoanut. Stir with a wooden spoon until it looks white, pour into a shallow pan and when nearly cold cut into stars with a tiny cake cutter. These may be colored yellow to look like gilt stars.

Appropriate Sweets.

Holly Balls.—Boil two cupfuls of granulated sugar, a saltspoonful of cream of tartar and a cupful of water until it threads when poured from the spoon. Remove from the fire and beat until it begins to cream slightly; then add the beaten whites of two eggs and half a teaspoonful of lemon juice and beat until nearly cold. Season with a teaspoonful of vanilla or half a teaspoonful of orange extract. Drop on a buttered platter and form into balls, into each of which press a conserved cherry. Pecan, English walnut or almond kernels may be substituted for the cherries if preferred.

Mince Bars.—Into plain fudge work a mixture of ground cinnamon, nutmeg extract, minced nut meats, conserved ginger, cherries and raisins. With the hands work it to a paste and then form into a loaf and let it stand until slightly hardened. Cut the bars and serve in fancy boxes or on a tray surrounded with a wreath of holly.

CHICKEN DINNER.

Bouillon in Cups.
Roast Chicken, Giblet Gravy.
Mashed Potatoes.
Boiled Onions.
Cranberries.
Brown Bread.
Mince Pie.
Nuts. Raisins.
Coffee.

Origin of Geography.

The Phoenicians were the first people to communicate to other nations a knowledge of distant lands. It is now known that before the time of Homer that enterprising people had passed beyond the limit of the Mediterranean into the great western ocean, and it was by their sailors that the first rough charts of the world as then known were made. But geography as a science originated among the Greeks, its real father being Herodotus of Halicarnassus, about B. C. 484.

Force of an Auto Smash.

If a motorcar is wrecked when going forty miles an hour its occupant is thrown out against a wall, a post or a fence with the same force that he would strike if he fell to the ground from a height of 53.78 feet. To get an idea of what the force of this impact might be stand on a wall or a house 53.78 feet high, look down and contemplate the jump.

If the car is going sixty miles an hour the impact is equivalent to a fall of 121 feet.

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary Treasurer, or

THE CAMERA AS A DETECTIVE

It Will Reveal a Forged Signature Where Microscopes Fail.

The camera has been frequently instrumental in the detection of criminals. In case of forgery photography is invaluable, for there is no forger in the world clever enough to baffle its detective skill. An interesting proof of this was provided a few years ago in the case of a forged will. An enlarged photograph revealed the pencilled lines over which the signatures of the testator and witnesses had been written, although no trace of them was visible through the microscope.

This is one of the peculiarities of the camera, that it brings to light marks which are invisible through a microscope, just as it has been known to reveal the signs of measles and smallpox several days before they became visible to the naked eye.

Where a forged signature is suspected the method adopted is to take photographs of the genuine and supposed false signatures, magnify each a hundredfold or more and compare the results. Under this careful test the slightest discrepancy becomes exaggerated out of close resemblance to the signature, and every sign of hesitancy—for few forgers can write a counterfeit signature with perfect ease and fluency—stands revealed.

A forged banknote, however minutely and faithfully the original may have been copied, cannot deceive the eye of the camera, which will show not only the slightest deviation from the genuine note, but also any difference in the texture of the paper used. In a recent case, where a section of a check had been removed and another piece in the form of pulp substituted with infinite skill, the camera revealed the fraud at once, showing exactly where the new and old paper were joined.—London Standard.

Life of the Farmer.

I think that the life of a husbandman of all others is the most delectable. It is honorable, it is amusing, and with judicious management it is profitable.

In indulging these feelings I am led to reflect how much more delightful to the undebauched mind is the task of making improvements on the earth than all the vainglory that can be acquired from ravaging it by the most uninterrupted career of conquest.

I know of no pursuit in which more real and important service can be rendered to any country than by improving its agriculture, its breeds of useful animals and other branches of a husbandman's care.—Country Gentleman.

An Indian Marathon

Remarkable Speed and Endurance of a Noted Mohave Hunter.

In the early days of Ehrenberg, Ariz., a man was frightfully burned by kerosene. There was no physician and no drug store in the town, and so a noted Mohave runner who lived near by was hastily engaged to run to Fort Yuma, a government post directly across the Colorado river from the present town of Yuma.

The distance from Ehrenberg to Fort Yuma, as the crow flies, is sixty miles. By the shortest trail that the Indian could take it was at least seventy-five miles, and he had to swim the river once each way. The Indian was to get $10 for the trip and $10 additional if he returned in twenty-four hours. He prepared quickly for the undertaking and disappeared down the trail.

Within twenty-four hours he was back in Ehrenberg, bringing with him the packages of medicine for which he had been sent. Each package bore the labels of the Yuma dispensary. There was no living being along the trail between the two places from whom he could have obtained any assistance whatever. That Indian ran 150 miles in less than twenty-four hours over a barren, stony desert, interspersed with deep, dry gulches and ravines, in and out of which he was forced to climb, and in addition he swam the Colorado river twice.

When he got his $20 he bought some of his favorite food, crawled into the shelter of some mesquite trees, ate and slept alternately for two days and then reappeared in perfect condition.—From A. M. Welles' "Reminiscent Ramblings."

A TRAGIC EXPERIMENT

How a Husband Tried to Cure His Wife's Fear of Pythons.

Concerning pythons, the following is a true story: A young lady in England for a long time resisted her lover's entreaties to go out to India with him as his wife. She had a horror of the wild animals she believed she might encounter there, especially serpents. At length, however, after he had issued a sort of ultimatum, she consented to accompany him. She did not, however, leave her fears behind her and lived in constant terror of some day meeting what she so intensely feared. Her husband did his best to laugh her fears away, but without avail. Then he resolved to try more drastic means.

A huge python was killed in the neighborhood of his bungalow. Without telling his wife anything about it he ordered the reptile to be brought into the drawing room and coiled up as if asleep on the hearth rug. Then he went out and called his wife, telling her to go into the drawing room and that he would join her in a few minutes. Soon after he heard a dreadful scream. "That will cure her of her fear of serpents," he smiled to himself and purposely delayed his entry. When at last he went into the drawing room he saw his wife lying dead on the floor, and coiled around her was another huge python, the mate to the one that lay dead on the hearth rug.—St. James' Gazette.

Well, She Owned Him.

A woman mounted the step of a car carrying an umbrella like a reversed saber.

The conductor touched her lightly, saying, "Excuse me, madam, but you are likely to put out the eye of the man behind you."

"He's my husband," she snapped, with the tone of full proprietorship.

A Youthful Investigator.

"Miss Bellam," said a six-year-old boy to a visitor who was waiting for his mother, "will you take one of your shoes off a minute?"

"My shoes!" exclaimed the caller in amazement. "Why?"

"Well, I heard mother say you were getting crows' feet awfully!"

A Failure.

Wigg—At the first night of Scribbler's new play I understand there was a big house.

Wagg—Yes, but most of the audience left early to avoid the rush.

ENGINEERING FEATS

Clever Tricks With Which Emergencies Have Been Met.

Engineering is filled with so many tricks to meet emergencies that most of them pass unnoticed, but two have recently attracted the attention of engineers because of their real oddity.

One was a scheme for stopping a blazing leak in a big high pressure gas main in San Francisco. Some unknown men who wanted to make trouble set off a chemical preparation on the gas main, with the result that in a few seconds a hole had been melted in the main, the gas poured out and a great flame shot twenty-five feet in the air. It was then after midnight, and it was very inadvisable to shut the big main off, so it was decided to make an attempt to stop the leak without shutting off the gas.

An oil well trick was used. An iron pipe six inches in diameter and twenty feet long was stood on end beside the gas main and then by careful manipulation placed directly over the leak. This sent the leaking gas shooting through the pipe and flaming out at the top twenty feet in the air. Some gas leaked out at the bottom of the pipe, but this was easily stopped, so the only flame was that at the top of the pipe.

Ropes had been attached to the pipe, and finally at a given signal the ropes were yanked and the pipe was thrown many feet away from the gas main. The pipe carried the flame with it. The leaking gas then shot directly into the air from the main, but as there was no flame near it did not burn. It was then a comparatively simple task to plug the hole until permanent repairs could be made.

The other scheme was to get to the top of a high chimney without using scaffolding or other expensive methods. The chimney rose two hundred feet beside a Missouri power plant, and it was proposed to attach a sign running up and down its side. A little parachute with a stout cord attached was pushed into the chimney at the bottom, the flue gases carried it to the top and then out into the air. It fell on one side, dragging the cord after it. Then by means of the cord a rope was passed up outside of the chimney and down the inside and the chimney top was accessible.—Saturday Evening Post.

Chloroform.

Chloroform was the result of ages of experiment in an effort to do away with the pain of surgical operations. Opium and many other drugs had been tried with more or less success. In executions by crucifixion vinegar and gall or myrrh were given to the victim to stupefy him.

Humor and Philosophy

THE PHILOSOPHER.

YOU say you cannot be my wife,
That it was bold and rash
In me to hope for that, although
You helped me spend my cash.
You say that in a little cot
We two can never dwell
And be a pair of turtledoves.
Oh, very well!

You say you cannot see your way
To help me with my dream
To put a million in the mine
And realize the scheme.
You say that you are much afraid
The profits would not swell
The way that it appears to me,
Oh, very well!

You say you cannot vote for me
Or help me in the race
To win the honors that I seek
And get the pleasant place;
That you are pledged to some one else
Whose average you must swell
Because you think he is more fit.
Oh, very well!

You say you cannot see just how
With business running slow
That you could boost my wages up
Another five or so.
You say that some time it may come,
But when you cannot tell;
That I can quit if that don't suit.
Oh, very well!

Something of a Flirt.

"What an engaging girl!"

"Disengaging?"

"Yes."

"But I don't understand."

PICTURES AS GIFTS.

A picture need not be expensive to be beautiful. The stores are selling copies of the best pictures by great artists and copies of pictures valuable for their tender, noble sentiments or for pleasing colors. The frames are made of odds and ends of stained or polished molding and are in good taste.

If you took some interesting snapshots last summer of your holiday trips or of your home, which you would like to send to relatives at a distance, mount them on the regular photograph cardboard, which may be bought for 8 cents a dozen up. Fasten them together in a long strip by running a narrow ribbon through holes made in the lower corners of the mounts. When hung in a long strip on the wall the pictures add beauty to that particular corner of the room and give pleasure to the beholder.

To mount a water color picture on thin cardboard for framing cut the mat the desired size, place the picture back of it and use a number of strips of paper to join the corners to the thin cardboard. Passe partout is excellent for the purpose, or the mat material may be used. It will not wrinkle the cardboard, and pictures so arranged may be carefully rolled, placed in a tube and sent by mail.

When making picture mats, calendars, booklets and other articles of soft cardboard a blemish will sometimes occur which is difficult to remove. By rubbing the spot with bread it will disappear. The bread should be fresh and not dry. A putty made with flour and ammonia is often used for cleaning white mats.

The ladies of Lansdowne have raised over $500 for the patriotic fund, as well as sending 12 large cases of clothing to the Belgians.

MR. BOWSER'S PLUNGE

It's to be in Pigs at $1,000 a Month Profit

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER was smiling as he left the office.

He chuckled as he took the street car.

He reached home with a grin on his face.

That he was about to make a break of some sort was apparent to Mrs. Bowser before he had been home five minutes, but she asked no questions, and he managed to contain himself until after dinner. Then he rubbed his hands together, chuckled softly and said:

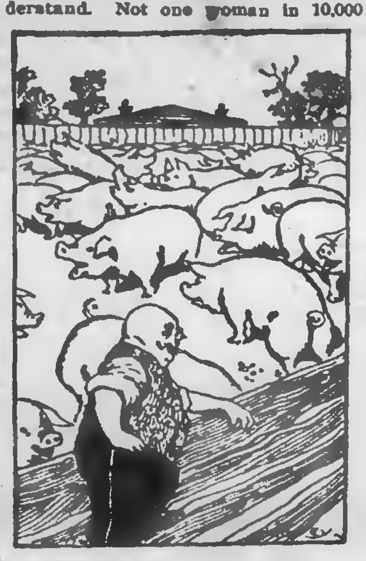
"I suppose that if I should tell you that I expect to make a clean $1,000 a month on the outside for the next five years you'll call it one of my fads, wouldn't you?"

"Perhaps not," answered Mrs. Bowser doubtfully. "Are you going to speculate?"

"Not at all. I have simply struck a sure thing."

"If it's a sure thing it will be nice. What is it?"

"I'll tell you, though you won't understand. Not one woman in 10,000 has a business head on her. I have often wished you knew something of business, so that I could talk to you. It isn't your fault that the Lord created you to read novels and gad around to the stores in search of bargains, and so I don't lay it up against you. I'll tell you what my new move is. I am going into hogs."



"I SHALL BUY A THOUSAND PIGS."

Mrs. Bowser Hits It Right.

"I can understand that much," quietly replied Mrs. Bowser. "You are going to raise hogs in order to supply the market with pork."

"That's the plan to a dot, and you deserve praise for catching on so quickly. I shall buy a thousand pigs. A pig six months old can be bought for a dollar."

"And 1,000 pigs for $1,000."

"That's it. I invest $1,000 in pigs. At the age of two years every pig is ready to be made into pork. The average weight of a two-year-old pig ready for the pork barrel is 200 pounds. Fresh pork is worth 13 cents per pound. That is $26 for every pig, or $25 clear profit. Any man with an ounce of brains in his head can figure $25,000 clean profit in two years. Is there any fad about that?"

"I'm sorry I haven't got a business head on me," said Mrs. Bowser as she got pencil and paper, "but I will figure with you a little. Where are you going to fatten your hogs?"

"Why, on a farm, of course. You don't suppose I'm going to turn the basement of our house into a pigpen, do you?"

"But where is your farm?"

Various Little Oversights.

Mr. Bowser's jaw dropped. He hadn't figured on a farm.

"A farmer figures that it costs 6 cents per pound to make pork for market," continued Mrs. Bowser. "Those are the figures even when he owns his farm and grows his own corn. It will take, in addition to all other feeds, at least twenty bushels of corn for every one of your pigs. Have you figured on buying 20,000 bushels of corn, Mr. Bowser?"

He began to flush up and breathe hard, but made no reply.

"To care for a thousand hogs you must at least hire five men. It will cost you quite a sum to get them together. There will be more or less loss to figure on. You must also figure on butchering and getting your pork to market. And you haven't counted in"—

"Woman, do you take me for a fool?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he jumped off his chair and frightened the family cat under the piano.

"Not at all," she calmly replied. "A fool would go into this hog scheme and lose $3,000 instead of making $25,000, but you won't."

He didn't know whether to bluff it out or give in gracefully, but finally decided to do the latter. Her facts and figures were beyond dispute and had laid him cold, but he feared she would feel puffed up over it.

Something Better.

"Of course," he said, "I should have figured it to a penny before investing money. What you say is all guess work, but we'll let it go for a time. In fact, the hog scheme was a secondary matter. I've got a better thing than that. I was in hopes Brown might drop in this evening and I'd talk it over with him."

"Why not talk it over with me?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"You won't comprehend it, of course, but I'll give you an outline of it. How much do you suppose a man in Ohio has made out of chickens in the last year?"

"A thousand dollars, perhaps."

"Over $5,000 clean money, and next year he will double that amount. I've got my facts and figures down pat, and I'm going into chicken raising."

"What are your facts and figures?"

"You can't understand them, but I'll give you a few. I'll start in with 1,000 hens."

"Where do you start?"

"Where do I start? Perhaps you imagine I'm going to make a hen roost of the top of the house! I start in our back yard, of course. I buy 1,000 hens at 25 cents apiece."

"I don't know where you are going to do it," said Mrs. Bowser. "The very lowest figure you can make is 50 cents, and the fowls will be common at that. Having got your thousand hens together, then what?"

"Then I depend on eggs and chickens," replied Mr. Bowser. "I figure on 500 eggs per day. We'll call it fifty dozen, and put the price at 20 cents per dozen. Or 10 per dozen for sure. One thousand hens ought to hatch 10,000 chickens per year. Each chicken will readily sell for"—

Again Figures Rise Up to Taunt Him.

"Just wait a minute. Let us begin with the back yard. We have an area of 30 by 45 feet. One thousand hens wouldn't have room to flap their wings in that space."

"Are you trying to make out that I don't know enough to come in when it rains?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he bobbed up with furious gestures.

"Not all. You are going into poultry. You are going to make a fortune. I haven't a business head on me, of course, but I can figure a little. You might coop up fifty hens in the back yard, but not more. As to eggs, if you get 200 a day from 1,000 hens you would do well. The increase would not be half what you figure. Then you have not figured on the expense of lumber and carpenter work for the coops, nor for feed and help. You see"—

"Yes, I see. Of course I see! I see that you know nothing about poultry. I tell you that any man with an ounce of brains can make $5,000 a year out of 2,000 fowls."

"Well, let us see how it is done."

"It's done in a business way, of course."

"Then we'll figure in a business way. You will want lumber and nails for the coops, and there will be carpenter work. How much lumber"—

"Not a plank, not a board, not a foot!" howled Mr. Bowser.

"But how are you going to do it?"

Mr. B. Goes Clear Off the Handle.

"None of your business! I go to work and invent a plan to make $5,000 a year as easy as rolling off a log. I come home feeling pleasant over it. Like an ass I state my plan to you, and you immediately and maliciously set out to tear it to pieces. Woman"—

It was lucky for Mr. Bowser that just then he heard the voice of a tramp in the basement hall asking the cook for a bite to eat. It offered him a diversion, and he took advantage of it. He turned from Mrs. Bowser and rushed downstairs followed by the cat, and he fell upon that unsuspicious tramp like a thunderbolt. There was a mixup, three or four whoops and yells, and then the tramp broke loose and spread his wings and made for the street. He didn't stop to open the gate, but went over the fence like a bird, and the chase was over. When Mr. Bowser returned to the sitting room pencil and paper had disappeared, and the diplomatic Mrs. Bowser was looking into the family almanac to see what day of the week the next Fourth of July would fall on.

PUMPKIN PIE

Considered Indispensable on Some Christmas Tables.

Many persons like pumpkin pies quite as well as mince and insist on having them at the Christmas season. They are more wholesome than the average Christmas mince pie.

A good way of making them is the following: Steam a small pumpkin which has been pared and cored. When it is tender press through a sieve and take out any lumps. Season with a tablespoonful each of ground cinnamon and ginger. Beat well the yolks of two eggs and while the pumpkin is still warm stir in the beaten eggs together with a tablespoonful each of melted butter and flour, the grated rind of an orange, a teaspoonful of salt, a cupful each of boiled and seeded raisins and a cupful of cream. When it makes a thick batter sweeten and pour into a deep pie plate lined with a rich crust. Bake until golden brown.

Some people do not like the flavor of the pumpkin, but make their pumpkin pies in the form of custards. For pumpkin custard pies proceed as follows: Pare and cut up enough pumpkin to cook down into a pint. The way to cook this pumpkin is to put the pieces into a kettle with a half cupful of water and let the pumpkin steam until it is tender. Then take off the lid and allow the water to evaporate. Drain in a colander and press the pumpkin through, removing all moisture. Beat three eggs and combine with a pint of milk before mixing into the pumpkin. Stir in half a teacupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and half a teaspoonful of ginger. Mix thoroughly and then pour into pie dishes lined with crust. Cook until golden brown.

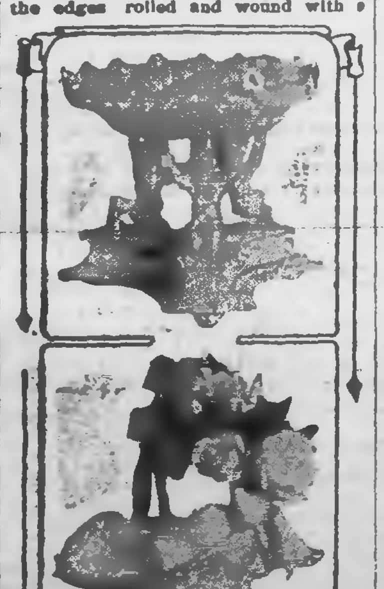
TABLE ORNAMENTS.

Novelties For Beautifying the Christmas Table.

The appearance of the Christmas table is an important question. If the housewife is expecting guests she desires something more elaborate than the dish of ferns, vase of flowers or dish of fruit which is quite elaborate enough to please the family. If she gives a Christmas dinner party there are favors to be thought of. Attractive tables may be got up with crape paper.

A large bunch of holly placed in the center of the table in a low vase or fern dish may be tied with a flowing bunch of scarlet ribbon.

The napkins may be crimped around the edges rolled and wound with a spray of holly instead of napkin rings. Spread the cover and arrange a piece of holly on the cloth in front of each plate. The ends of these sprays may be joined to form a circle of green around the table.



SPUN SUGAR BONBON BASKETS.

The turkey, also may be elaborately garnished with holly, while nothing could present a more attractive picture than a dome of creamy white potatoes smoothed high in a tureen and mounted with a touch of green leaves.

No Christmas dinner is quite complete without a dish of fruit and nuts piled high. To pyramid a fruit dish is quite an art. First fill in the bowl with oranges and apples, ranging bananas around the rim in such a way that the heavier fruit will hold them in firmly. Fill in the small spaces with lady apples, figs, dates, raisins and nuts. The picture shows two bonbon baskets made of spun sugar.

A Sharpshooter Duel

By SAMUEL E. BRAND

At the close of the Spanish-American war Edward Cunningham, who had been through the Santiago campaign as a private in a sharpshooter regiment, was considered an expert in that line of warfare. He knew all the dodges in drawing an enemy's fire to an inanimate object, in causing him to show himself, and had the ability to put a bullet just where he pleased at almost any distance.

Cunningham left college to go to the war, and when he came out of it, being much run down by the climate of Cuba, he decided to go abroad to recover his strength.

In Paris Ned met a couple of young Americans who had been in the Spanish war, and the three set about seeing Paris. One evening at a cafe they ran up against a party of French army officers, who, recognizing them for Americans, began to make invidious remarks against the United States. They said nothing calling for resentment, however, till Ned took a little silk United States flag out of his pocket and waved it in their faces.

"Put that dirty rag up!" said one of the officers.

"You call that a dirty rag, do you?" said Ned, his eye lighting with anger. "I'll give you a colored shirt." And he threw some wine from his glass in the officer's face and on his bosom. The man thus attacked calmly wiped away the wine with his napkin, then said a few words to one of the others, who came to the table of the Americans and demanded satisfaction under the code. Cunningham assented, but, being the challenged party and thus having the choice of terms under which the duel should take place, chose for the meeting grounds a farm some twenty miles from Paris and for weapons rifles. The principals were to take positions a mile apart and advance, each conducting the campaign according to his own secret will.

This did not suit the Frenchman at all. There were but two ways of fighting a duel to which he was accustomed—the one with a foil, the other with a pistol, the former being the ordinary French method. He objected to any except one of these methods. Cunningham would not yield. He proposed, however, that if the Frenchman would apologize for speaking disrespectfully of the American flag he would apologize for throwing wine over him. But the officer, being in the army, could not permit such an insult to pass without a fight. He was therefore obliged to accept Cunningham's terms.

One morning bright and early the two parties started by separate conveyances to the farm on which they were to fight. They had succeeded in keeping the affair from the public, but it was known among army officers, and they flocked to the ground in order to witness this singular fight. They have sharpshooters in their armies abroad, but it is a question if there is the free fighting, the ingenious methods practiced among Americans, whose expedients come down from the Indians.

The two principals were placed, the one on the north, the other on the south side of the farm. The interval between them was made up of fields partly and thinly wooded. Unless they purposely covered themselves by taking position here and there behind a tree the duelists could see each other all the way. The distance, so far as the fight was concerned, was not so great as would appear, for the carrying range of the rifles was considerable.

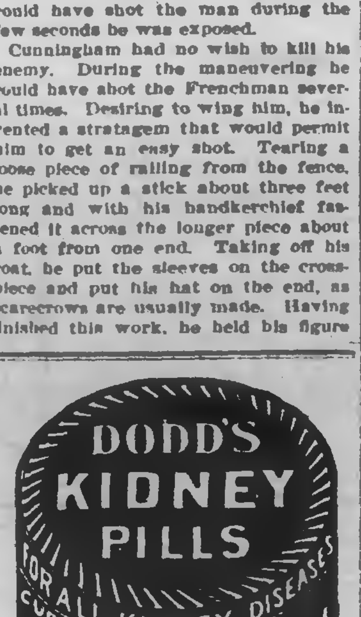
They had scarcely left their positions before Cunningham fired several shots. Whether he did this to get some idea of the range or to rattle his enemy was not known. His first stop was made behind a fence thickly lined with bushes. At the same time his enemy took position behind a stone wall. They were at long range.

The American resorted to the common device of raising his hat above his screen. Getting a bullet in it, he made up his mind that his enemy was not skilled in this kind of warfare. When he saw the Frenchman change his position, passing a gateway, Cunningham's surmise was confirmed. He could have shot the man during the few seconds he was exposed.

Cunningham had no wish to kill his enemy. During the maneuvering he could have shot the Frenchman several times. Desiring to wing him, he invented a stratagem that would permit him to get an easy shot. Tearing a loose piece of railing from the fence, he picked up a stick about three feet long and with his handkerchief fastened it across the longer piece about a foot from one end. Taking off his coat, he put the sleeves on the crosspiece and put his hat on the end, as scarecrows are usually made. Having finished this work, he held his figure against the top of the fence so that it would look to his enemy as if he were sitting on it.

Two shots came in rapid succession, one of them knocking the dummy over. The Frenchman saw it fall and, concluding he had shot his enemy, came out from hiding and advanced leisurely across the field. Cunningham watched for an opportunity to wing him without seriously hurting him and put a bullet through the calf of his leg.

Without the drawing of blood the affair might have gone on indefinitely. As it was, nothing more was required. Mutual apologies were exchanged, and Cunningham and his friends were handsomely entertained at the mess of the French officers.



THE FORCED RECRUIT

By ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING

In the ranks of the Austrian you found him,
He died with his face to you all;
Yet bury him here where around him
You honor your bravest that fall.

No stranger, and yet not a traitor;
Though alien the cloth on his breast,
Underneath it how seldom a greater
Young heart has a shot sent to rest!

By your enemy tortured and goaded
To march with them, stand in their file,
His musket (see) never was loaded,
He facing your guns with that smile!

"Aim straightly, fire steadily! spare me
A ball in the body which may
Deliver my heart here, and tear me,
This badge of the Austrian away!"

So, thought he, so died he this morning.
What then? many others have died;
Aye, but easy for men to die scorning
The death-stroke, who fought side by side—

One tri-color floating above them;
Struck down 'mid triumphant acclaims
Of a nation rescued to love them
And blazon the brass with their names.

But he — without witness or honor,
Mixed, shamed in his country's regard,
With the tyrants who march in upon her,
Died faithful and passive; 'twas hard.

'Twas sublime. In a cruel restriction
Cut off from the guerdon of sons,
With most filial obedience, conviction,
His soul kissed the lips of her guns.

THE REPORTER BLUSHED AT HIS ACHIEVEMENT

When the Houoe of Lords Adjourned at His Suggestion.

There is a good Fleet street story, says a writer in the London Daily Citizen, of how a reporter once adjourned the house of lords. He had worked in the gallery of the house of lords for about a quarter of a century, and it may be that familiarity had dimmed his sense of reverence. One day there had been a stodgy little debate with a dozen members in the house, and the reporter, with his colleagues perched in the gallery, was thoroughly sick of the whole business. His feelings found outlet in a muttered remark as some noble lord on the cross benches rose to continue the debate.

"Why don't you move the adjournment?" said the reporter to himself. He said it louder than he intended, and the words reached the noble lord who had just risen. He on his part believed the words to be a private hint addressed to him from the lord chancellor, and, feeling that he could not disregard the suggestion, he said, "My lords, I move the adjournment of the debate."

Instantly the lord chancellor was on his feet from the woolsack, and their lordships' house rose for the day. Hardened as was the reporter, it is stated that as he went out he was blushing at his achievement.

Easy Dusting

Mrs. Florin had a new maid, and one morning as she entered the library she was somewhat surprised to find the girl seated in one of the chairs with her hands folded.

"What!" cried the mistress. "Here you are sitting down! Why, you were sent in here to dust the room!"

"Yes, ma'am," was the girl's reply, "but I've lost the duster, and so I am sitting on each of the chairs in turn."—Harper's Magazine.

PLANNED TO LASSO A SHIP

An Old Time Mexican Scheme to Outwit the Americans.

A leaflet from Don Ramon's folk lore may interest you. When war had been declared against Mexico and the arrival of the American boats was daily expected in southern California, St. Agnes was in a tremor. Of course, not of fear, but of excitement.

One day the news came that a United States vessel of war was approaching the harbor. A council of the ancients of the city was immediately convened and many plans of offensive and defensive action were proposed and discussed, and finally the following one, designed by a Frenchman, whose brother had commanded a crack regiment under the great Napoleon, was adopted:

He was to take his spyglass and the only available artillery that St. Agnes afforded—a small brass cannon, which had been used alternately with anvils to fire salutes during religious and civic processions (I am unable to say how many of a pounder it was)—to the top of the mountain, a distance of twelve miles in a bee line from the ocean beach. In the meanwhile all the expert vaqueros, the moment the vessel was sighted, were to conceal themselves and horses along the beach.

When the ship had anchored and the proper moment, in the judgment of the French commander, had arrived, he was to fire the cannon from the top of the mountain, at which signal the vaqueros were to rush through the surf and lasso the masts of the ship, capsize it into the breakers and harpoon the soldiers and crew as they endeavored to escape to shore. This brilliant coup d'etat was not carried out, only because the ship never came. —From "Romance on El Camino Real," by Jarre T. Richards.

DO YOUR XMAS SHOPPING NOW

Do your Christmas shopping now! Christmas goods are still fresh. So are the salespeople.

You can now see the full lines of goods and get the obliging attention of an undistracted clerk. There is room in the shops to turn around.

Still for a few days Christmas shopping may be a pleasant experience.

You know very well what it will be just a little later—with the article you really want sold out, and a young woman tired to the point of nervous prostration trying to wait on three people at once.

If you put off your shopping until the last minute you will simply exasperate yourself and afflict the busy clerk.

What is the use of that?

In spite of the war there's going to be lots of Christmas shopping.

Do it now!

"Button, Button, Who Makes the Button?"

Ordinarily, a button is looked upon as an article of minor importance. But sometimes a great deal depends upon just one button. Its importance is not fully realized until it has been lost.

Canada spends about a million and a quarter dollars every year for buttons---yes, just buttons.

And---more than two-thirds of these buttons are imported, more than $800,000 is sent to foreign countries which could just as well be kept here.

If these buttons were produced in Canada, fourteen factories, employing over nine hundred Canadians, would be kept busy to turn them out.

There is no reason why these buttons can't be "Made in Canada" just as well as anywhere else; in fact, some $400,000 worth are every year—the other $800,000 worth will be, if you will only "play the game" and— 10a

REPORTING A HURRICANE

By F. A. MITCHEL

There is a town in Florida that some years ago was the scene of a rivalry between two newspapers. The field was barely large enough for one journal, the Chronicle, which had occupied it ever since Joe Baxter established it during the last century. When Baxter died his son, Captain Joe, Jr., carried it on. But the captain had been in the Confederate army during the war between the states and received a wound that had crippled him for life. The girl he had left behind him, however, was true to him and married him in a hospital after the surrender.

Joe was fitted to perform the indoor work connected with a newspaper, but was not able to do much getting about gathering news. Mrs. Joe did a good deal of that, and, having many friends, she was kept well posted on the social news, which is important to any newspaper. She and Joe managed to keep the wolf from the door till Philip Stringer came from New Orleans, looked the place over and determined that there might be room enough for two papers.

The truth is that the place was beginning to fill up with northern visitors during the winter, and the more people the more chance for a newspaper. But the special inducement was that Joe's physical handicap kept him from getting about to gather in the news, and Stringer calculated to get ahead of him in this respect every time. Besides, Springer, having been connected with a New Orleans paper, believed he knew better how to cater to city people than did Baxter.

So the Gazette was established and, being the more enterprising of the two papers, got most of the new subscribers and advertisers, the old residents standing by the Chronicle. But the new was more valuable than the old, and the former was constantly eating into the latter till it looked as if the Baxters would soon have to discontinue their paper.

One morning Molly Baxter, after having cleaned up the breakfast dishes and sent the children to school, reported at the office to find Joe very gloomy.

"The weather bureau reports a hurricane coming up from the West Indies and says that it will probably reach our coast today. If it should be here I ought to go to the coast and write a description of it. But I can feel the storm in my wound now, and it takes all the starch out of me. Stringer will be there and will write it up with all the grandiloquence of which he is capable."

"You stay where you are. I know how bad weather affects you. I'll do what work is to be done here between now and 11 o'clock, go home and get the dinner ready for you and the children, and I will take the 2 o'clock train for the coast."

As the afternoon train neared its terminal on the coast on passing between two hills it was struck by a gust of wind that lifted it clear off the track. Molly Baxter was on it and considerably bruised. She thought of how Joe, when he was wounded in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg, got up and went on till he was driven back with the rest by a murderous fire, and, pulling herself together, she forced her way against what wind there was on the lee side of a hill facing the ocean to the top and found herself in the corner of a stone wall, where she was perfectly protected and with her eyes just above it saw one of the biggest storms that have ever visited the Atlantic coast. She did not have writing materials with her, for she would not have been able to use them, but she had a fine memory and stacked it with numerous details. She saw the waves envelop the town below, its shrieking citizens climb the hills, one ship riding at anchor buried by a huge billow and then lifted over a dock and landed up among the houses. These and many more things as terrible she saw and crammed them all down in the storehouse of her memory.

When she had got enough the problem was to get back home with it. About dusk the wind went down inland enough to admit of a vehicle not being blown over, and, hiring a farmer to take her in his wagon, she reached the Chronicle office about 11 o'clock, where she found her husband anxiously waiting for her. Assured of her safety, he gave her copy paper and a pencil and prepared to set up what she wrote. At 2 o'clock the next morning she had finished her description and helped him set up the last column.

When the Chronicle and the Gazette came out those who read the Chronicle account remarked, "What a big storm that was!" Those who read the Gazette said, "That storm has given Stringer a chance to spread himself." A correspondent of a northern paper who had not seen the storm, but saw Molly Baxter's account of it, telegraphed it verbatim to his paper. A message came back:

"Who wrote that description of the hurricane?"

The reply stated that it was written by Mrs. Baxter, wife of the owner of the —— Chronicle.

The next mail brought Molly Baxter an offer of $3,000 a year as special correspondent for a northern newspaper to cover such places as would interest the northern public. She accepted it, but she and Joe kept the Chronicle, for Molly's storm work turned the tide against Springer, and he sold out to them for a song.

A Lawyer's Bill.

A lawyer's bill, like the plumber's, is full of detail. I have just seen a specimen sent to a business friend of mine, who, anxious to settle up his account, telephoned to his lawyer. The bill came in with elaborate detail, and the last item was, "To attending you on the telephone in answer to your request for bill, 3s. 6d." My friend vowed he would see them in—chancery before he paid that and struck it out.—London Chronicle.

For Young Folks

A Country Baby Boy and His Pet Rooster.

Most people love animal pets, especially little people. Dogs and kittens are usually chosen, and rabbits, guinea pigs, squirrels, etc., are common, but a rooster is surely an exception. The baby in the picture is not much larger than his feathered pet, and both are about the same age. As the illustration shows, they are on excellent terms and apparently are enjoying a confidential talk. Kindness to animals is a fine trait and one that all boys and girls should cultivate. Kind treatment quickly wins the trust and affection of nearly all members of the animal kingdom, and they show it in many pleasing ways. Of course, care must be used in the selection of such a pet, since some roosters are vicious.

The Jolly Game of Pig.

Any one who has not played the game of pig has yet to learn what a merry game it is. It can be played either for prizes or forfeits.

The cards used are ordinary playing cards, which are dealt around, one at a time, till the pack is exhausted. Players sit around a general table, and the cards are dealt face down.

Every one matches the cards dealt to him in pairs as quickly and quietly as possible, laying them aside as fast as matched, the object being to get out of cards as soon as can be done. As soon as any is out of cards, which is done by drawing from his neighbor and matching, as in old maid, he says nothing, but folds his hands under the table. This is a signal for all the players to do the same thing—that is, to lay aside their cards and observe silence. But most players are too intent upon the game to notice the silence in other parts of the table. One by one they become aware of it and quietly lay down their cards. The last one to do so is the "pig," who must either forfeit his chance for the prize or pay a forfeit, according to the arrangements made in advance of the game. A number of rounds are played in order that a number of pigs shall be made.

In case prizes are given the one first out is entitled to a prize. The pig might receive a booby prize.

Good Work of Boy Scouts.

The Boy Scouts of America of Boston, Ga., were recently of great service to their community. After trying several plans to obtain proper sanitary means of having the garbage and rubbish taken up from the streets and after meeting each time with failure the citizens of the town called on the scouts for aid. The scouts, under Scoutmaster R. D. MacAlpine, put the problem before the Ladies' Twentieth Century club in the form of a petition, which was indorsed by their members, after which they carried the petition to the town authorities. The work of the scouts united the various forces in the town, and the relief was promptly granted.

HASTINGS HAPPENINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Dec. 10.—Once again it becomes our sad duty to chronicle the demise of an aged and respected resident of Hastings, in the person of Mr. Thomas Learmouth, who passed away at his late residence on Thursday morning in his 68th year. Deceased was a life-long resident of this place, being in the employ of the Fowlds Co. for a number of years, and was well known by both old and young. In politics he was a Liberal and in religion a Presbyterian. He also held the position of Reeve of the town for a number of years, and was very active in any measure that had as its object the betterment of the place. In the I.O.F. he will be missed as he was a very active member, and, in the order, much regret is expressed at his removal. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his widow, two sons, Thomas and William, of Outlook, Sask., and one daughter, Olive, at home, who have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement. The funeral was held on Saturday morning from his late residence, to the Presbyterian Church where service was held after which the cortege proceeded to the Norwood Cemetery where interment was made. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, showing to some extent, the high esteem in which he was held in his native town. His sons were both present at the funeral.

Mr. Isaac Thomson has resigned his position as care-taker of the Methodist Church, after having held the position for upwards of 39 years, during which time he was only absent two Sundays. This is a record which would be hard to beat.

On Thursday evening last a large representation of the congregation met at the church to express their appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Thomson's services and to show in some tangible manner that their work was sincerely and faithfully performed. During the course of the evening they were presented with an address, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomson each with a well filled purse. Though much overcome they replied in a few words thanking the congregation for their kindness. Following is the address which was read by Mrs. Nelson Beavis:—

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Thomson:—

Dear Friends,—Once again we are reminded that all things earthly are subject to change, for now the time has come when you are severing your connection with the church, in the capacity in which you have served for such a number of years. We feel that in all your duties in the church you have done your part very faithfully and sincerely, and we cannot let this opportunity pass, without in some way informing you of our appreciation of your services, and of our associations with you.

You have maintained a record deserving of the highest honor, and we have learned to respect you for your integrity, and your noble Christ-like characters, and unitedly, we desire to follow you with our best wishes and an earnest and sincere prayer, that your declining years may be your brightest and best.

As friends, we shall still hope to mingle with you, and we trust that your sphere of usefulness may be in no wise lessened; but that your joy in service may be abundant.

And now, as a slight token of our esteem, we ask you, Mr. and Mrs. Thomson, to accept these gifts, and may they ever remind you of the friends and associations you have made during your long term of service; and when you are called to sever all connections with the church militant, may you join the church triumphant, in that bright land where Sabbaths have no end.

Signed on behalf of the congregation of the Methodist Church.

Iceland Brides.

In Iceland, where various interesting and fantastic superstitions abound, there is an ancient custom that every bride must invite all her friends to a dinner in her home, and every article of food must be prepared by the bride herself. If she succeeds in pleasing her critical guests she achieves not only praise for her own skill, but she helps along her own younger sisters, who are then assumed to be equally well instructed in the intricacies of the culinary art and consequently have their chances of marriage more than doubled.

THE ARMY OF THE DEAD.

BARRY PAIN, in Westminster Gazette.

I dreamed that overhead
I saw in twilight gray
The Army of the Dead
Marching upon its way,
So still and passionless,
With faces so serene,
That scarcely could one guess
Such men in war had been

No mark of hurt they bore,
Nor smoke, nor bloody stain;
Nor suffered any more
Famine, fatigue, or pain;
Nor any lust of hate
Now lingered in their eyes
Who have fulfilled their fate,
Have lost all enmities.

A new and greater pride
So quenched the pride of race
That foes marched side by side
Who once fought face to face
That ghostly army's plan
Knows but one race, one rod—
All nations there are Man,
And the one King is God.

No longer on their ears
The bugle's summons falls;
Beyond these tangled spheres
The Archangel's trumpet calls;
And by that trumpet led
Far up the exalted sky
The Army of the Dead
Goes by, and still goes by—

Look upward, standing mute:
Salute!

PERSONAL INVESTIGATION.

Figgins Hears of Something New and Tries to Buy the Article.

BUSINESS was rather slow that day in the only shop in the village. Though they sold everything there from a box of matches to a white elephant, not a single copper had been passed over the counter.

As the church clock struck midday the bored assistant cast a hopeless eye up the narrow street. Only one figure was to be seen coming toward the shop, and he was on the other side of the road. It was old man Figgins.

A look of hope came into the assistant's eyes. Yes, the old boy was crossing the street and making straight for the shop! He entered.

"Mornin', mornin'!" he said heartily. "I've just looked in to buy an average. Let's have a look at some, will yer, young feller?"

"An average, did you say, sir?" said the assistant blankly.

"Yes, yes; same what old Bruggins bought."

"What's it like, sir?" asked the unfortunate fellow behind the counter.

"'Ow should I know?" answered Figgins angrily. "All I know is as old Bruggins told me as 'ow 'e's got a hen what lays twenty-five eggs a week on an average, an' I wants one, too—so trot 'em out and let's have a look at 'em."—London Answers.

Conveniently Deaf.

A man in Ayrshire had a habit of feigning deafness when he wanted to avoid answering an awkward question. One day a neighbor said to him:

"I'd like to borrow your cart this morning. Mine is having a spring mended."

"You'll have to speak louder," the old farmer answered. "I don't hear very well—and I don't like to lend my cart, anyhow."—Stray Stories.

ACCIDENTS ON THE WATER.

How a Pot or Pan or Even a Hat May Be Used as a Life Preserver.

The worst thing to do in an accident on the water is to flounder around and shriek and cry. That expels the air from the lungs, and then the body will quickly sink. With this fact understood we may experiment with a number of things to show how little it takes to support the body. The high silk hat of man contains sufficient air to keep him from sinking if he grasps it by the rim and holds it upright so that the air is imprisoned under the hat. Even a derby hat will support a half grown boy or girl if held right.

Dishpans and buckets or tin pails can also be used as life preservers. Invert these in the water and grasp the rim with both hands and do not tip them so the air can escape. Not long ago a party of girls out rowing had their boat upset in a mountain lake. All of them except one could swim. This girl had an umbrella with her, raised to ward off the sun's rays when the accident occurred. Finding herself in the water some distance from the boat, she grabbed for the nearest thing in reach. It proved to be her umbrella, floating with the handle down in the water. She threw both arms frantically around the open umbrella. To her surprise and to that of her comrades, she did not sink. The imprisoned air under the umbrella supported her head above the water until help arrived.

The small amount of air contained in a bicycle tire will keep one's head above water for hours. Even if one is a fair swimmer, the day may come when a knowledge of some of these every day life preservers will prove of the greatest value. If thrown in the water a long distance from shore you may be able to float and swim with such an aid three times as far as you could without them.—George R. Walsh in Leslie's.

A few days after you have quit tobacco a friend in Kentucky ships you enough tobacco to last you a year. And when you make up your mind to quit lying some girl asks you to guess how old she is.

Patience.

There is no road too long to the man who advances deliberately and without undue haste. There are no honors too distant to the man who prepares himself for them with patience.—La Bruyere.

Five Million Dolls From One Town.

About 5,000,000 dolls are turned out in one year at Vincennes, France. The dolls are not dressed there, but are sent to Paris, where several hundred girls, some of whom are fashion experts, clothe them in the latest styles. Each year prizes are offered for the best design of a doll and for improvements in the art of manufacturing them. This is one of the reasons why the French doll has reached such a high degree of finish. Scores of women in all parts of the world make their living by dressing dolls and many by designing the clothes for the novelties demanded every year.

SOME LONG BASEBALL GAMES

The longest major league game was played on Sept. 1, 1906, between the Boston and Philadelphia American league clubs in Boston, when the Athletics won by a score of 4 to 1 in twenty-four innings. Jack Coombs, then a recruit from Colby college, and "Jumbo" Harris, a young pitcher from the New England league, were the respective boxmen used by the Philadelphia and Boston teams. The game lasted four hours and forty-seven minutes.

The previous longest games in the National league were played at Cincinnati on June 30, 1892, and at Philadelphia on Aug. 24, 1905. Both ran twenty innings. The game at Cincinnati was between the Reds and Cubs and resulted in a tie score of 7 to 7. At Philadelphia the Cubs defeated the Quakers by a score of 2 to 1.

On May 31, 1909, the longest professional game on record was played between the Bloomington and Decatur teams of the Illinois-Iowa-Indiana league, Decatur winning in the twenty-sixth inning by a score of 2 to 1. Fargo and Grand Forks engaged in a contest which lasted twenty-five innings at Devils Lake, N. D., in 1895. Later Hartford and New Haven, in the Eastern association, played twenty-three innings, the former winning 2 to 1. Geist, for the winning team, and Jansen, for New Haven, pitched the entire contest.

Amateurs are credited with playing the longest game, the East End All-Stars and the Brooklyn Athletic club teams of Cleveland contesting for thirty innings on July 4, 1907, the latter winning 4 to 1.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

NOT THESE I PITY

By MARGARET SACKVILLE in the London Times.

Not these I pity
Who in the sweep and surge of battle die
With passion in their hearts, but these
The wrecks and ruins of the city,
These million souls outcast, they know not why;
Torn, tempted, outraged, driven overseas.

For these what price
Shall the inexorable laws demand?
Upon their heads what heavy toll is set?
Theirs is the sorrow and the sacrifice.
Their tears have watered the waste lands.
When God remembers, who shall pay the debt?

TRAGIC FATE OF MAXIMILIAN AT THE HANDS OF MEXICANS

The Atonement of Blood—Coolness of the Unfortunate Prince.

No more tragic incident is recorded in history than the execution of Maximilian. Half a century ago a younger brother of the Emperor Francis Joseph was sent to rule Mexico. Together with his wife, he sat upon the frail throne, even then tottering. How he failed is another story, but when he was taken prisoner he prepared himself for death—the red death of war.

In a volume written some years ago Major John N. Edwards pictures graphically the closing hours of the tall, handsome prince who would be king as follows:

The morning broke fair and white in the sky, and at 6:30 o'clock three carriages drew up in front of the main gate of the convent of Capuchins. The bells rang in all the steeples, there were soldiers everywhere, and long lines of glittering steel that rose and fell in yet the soft, sweet hush of the morning.

In the first carriage got Maximilian and Father Soria, a priest. In the second carriage there came Miramon and his priest, in the third Mejia and his. Then the solemn cortege started. * * * All the people were in the street. On the faces of the multitude there were evidences of genuine and unaffected sorrow. Some among the crowd lifted their hats as the victims passed along, some turned away their heads and wept, and some, even among the soldiers and amid the hostile ranks of the Liberals, fell upon their knees and wept.

The place of surrender was to be the place of execution. Northwest of the city a mile or more the Hill of the Bells (El Cerro de las Campanas) upreared itself. It was inclosed on three sides by 6,000 soldiers of all arms, leaving the rear or uncovered side resting upon a wall.

It was 7:30 o'clock when the carriages halted at the place of execution. Maximilian was the first to alight. He stepped proudly down, took a handkerchief from his pocket and his hat from his head and beckoned for one of his Mexican servants to approach. The man came.

"Take these," the emperor said. "They are all I have to give."

The faithful Indian took them, kissed them, cried over them, fell upon his knees a few moments in prayer to the good God for the good master and arose a hero.

In front of the dead wall three crosses had been firmly embedded in the ground. On each side was a placard bearing the name of the victim to be immolated there. That upon the right was where the emperor was to be shot, that in the center was Miramon, that upon the left for the grim old stoic and fighter Mejia.

Maximilian walked firmly to his place. The three men embraced each other three times. To Mejia he said:

"We will meet in heaven."

Mejia bowed, smiled and laid his hand upon his heart.

To Miramon he said:

"Brave men are respected by sovereigns. Permit me to give you the place of honor."

As he said this he took Miramon gently by the arm and led him to the center cross, embracing him for the last time.

Escobedo was not on the ground. An aid-de-camp, however, brought permission for each of the victims to deliver a farewell address. The emperor spoke briefly. Miramon drew from his pocket a small piece of paper and read.

When Miramon had ceased reading Maximilian placed his hand on his breast, threw up his head and cried in a singularly calm and penetrating voice, "Fire!"

Eighteen muskets were discharged as one musket. Mejia and Miramon died instantly. Four bullets struck the emperor, three in the left and one in the right breast. Three of these bullets passed entirely through his body, coming out high up on the left shoulder; the other remained embedded in the right lung. The emperor fell a little sideways and upon his right side, exclaiming almost gently and sadly:

"Oh, hombre, hombre! Oh, man! Oh, man!"

He was not yet dead. A soldier went up close to him and fired into his stomach. The emperor moved slightly as if still sensible to pain. Another came out of the firing party and, putting the muzzle of his musket up close to his breast, shot him fairly through the heart.

The tragedy was ended. Mexican vengeance was satisfied; the soul of the unfortunate prince was with its God, and until the judgment day the blood of one who was too young and too gentle to die will cry out from the ground even as the blood of Abel.

Sugar as Food.

With the temperature 62 below zero Shackleton and his men, in their antarctic exploration, in marching took two or three lumps of sugar each every two hours. Within ten minutes of eating these they could feel the heat going through their bodies.

Life is not jest and amusement; life is not even enjoyment. Life is hard labor.—Turgenev.

Poor Papa!

"I am not at all certain," said the father, "that my daughter loves you sufficiently to warrant me in intrusting her to your keeping for life."

"Well," replied the young man, "perhaps you haven't had the same advantages for observing things that I have."

Coins For Lepers.

The Philippine government has minted a special coinage for use in the Culion leper colony. The coins are of aluminium and include pieces of 1 peso and 20, 10, 5, 1½ centavos. They are accepted at face value for all business carried on within the colony, but are of no value elsewhere.

The Pipe of War.

There is hardly a country in the world where the pipe is not smoked in one form or another. In many villages of the northwest provinces of India are to be found public hookahs for the use and comfort of travelers. Every one has heard of the North American's pipe of peace. General Blucher's pipe smoking was of a very different character. He appointed a man to the post of "pipe master," whose duty it was to fill a long clay pipe and hand it to the general before every engagement. Blucher would then enjoy a few puffs, give back the pipe and gallop into the firing line.

THE FAMOUS GOOSE-STEP

The snapshot shows a German soldier performing the "goose-step" frequently mentioned in despatches. The legs are thrown out stiff-kneed in front almost waist-high. The goose-step is used when guards are changed and upon certain ceremonial occasions.

Treatment of Brittle Nails.

Brittle nails are often due to bad health. They should be treated daily with a little pure white vaseline.

The vaseline should be well rubbed over and into the nails, and also worked into the under part of the nail just above the finger tip.

Hang nails are due to excessive dryness of the skin surrounding the nails. Try rubbing the base of the nails every night with a little good cold cream. That should help to cure them.

Cleansing the Hands.

When the hands are dirty try adding a little sugar to the soap with which they are washed. The sugar increases the lather and also the cleansing power of the soap, and the sugar removes dirt and stains.

When You Eat Onions.

After eating onions eat a leaf of parsley or drink a glass of milk and the unpleasant smell and taste will at once disappear.

CHRISTMAS PASTRY

PIES—mince, cranberry, pumpkin, etc.—are an important part of the Christmas dinner. Owing to the many other rich ingredients which comprise the Christmas feast, heavy pastry is likely to prove disastrous. Unless the housewife is an excellent pastry maker she would be wise to buy her Christmas pies.

Only the best materials should go to the making of the Christmas pastry.

Most housewives use lard instead of butter for shortening pies because it is cheaper. The result is not so good or so digestible as it would be if butter were used or even butter and lard together. The French use eggs in their puff paste, but they are not really necessary. Expert cooks have half a dozen different kinds of pastes suitable for various kinds of pastry. The finest of these is puff paste, but it is so rich that it is best to use it only for tarts and the upper crusts of pies.

Materials Should Be Good.

The following rules for pastry making have been contributed by a clever cook: One of the first essentials for pies is to keep everything as cool as possible. Use the best quality of flour and sift it fine. The butter, lard or other shortening should be good and used in the proper proportions. When mixing the pastry use water sparingly. The paste should not be sticky. A knife should be used for mixing. When rolling out use as little flour as possible. To bake the pastry you must have a hot oven. Do not open and shut the oven doors often. A draft will prevent the pastry from rising. When baked, cool gradually in a warm place. This will prevent the crust collapsing. If stored in a cool place and reheated when served pastry may be kept for several days.

Plain Pie Crust.

A good plain pie crust may be made as follows: Put one and a half cupfuls of flour in a bowl, a quarter cupful each of lard and butter and a teaspoonful of butter. With a chopping knife chop the shortening into the flour and add about a quarter to a half cupful of ice water, just enough to hold the ingredients together. Chop while the water is being added until the dough is smooth. The paste should be allowed to stand in a cold place a day or two before using.

To make puff paste take a half pound each of flour and butter, the yolk of an egg, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a pinch of salt and water to mix. The puff paste should be allowed to stand ten minutes between every other rolling; otherwise it will be too soft and oily. Puff paste is better if made the day before it is to be cooked.

A cream crust may thus be prepared: Mix one and one-half teacupfuls each of graham and white flour. When smoothly blended moisten with one scant teacupful of cream as lightly as possible, making a rather stiff dough. Roll out not quite so thin as for white flour crust. Use for pies as any crust. The lower crust of a fruit pie should be dusted with a little flour and sugar mixed together. This will keep the juice from soaking in.

One Crust Pies.

If pie crust is at best indigestible then surely one crust pies are preferable to those with two crusts, for each portion contains only half as much crust. And a well baked one crust pie is considered much more tempting and savory by many than a pie with two crusts. In many cases the one crust pie can be wholly or at least partly baked before the filling is put in. There are several ways of baking crusts so that they will keep their shape. Some cooks stretch the crusts over the outside of the pie plates and stand the pie plates upside down on a tin cup in the oven. When the crust is brown they turn it gently into a pie plate and put in the filling. Other cooks spread the crust in the pie plate, then cover it with a sheet of waxed paper and fill it with beans or rice to weight it down and so hold its shape. When the crust is brown the waxed paper and beans or rice are removed.

Making Cakes.

When about to make cake or any other dish read over carefully the recipe and directions. Be sure all required ingredients are at hand, and unless you are experienced do not substitute something else as "just as good." Have the best of everything needed, if you can get it, and do not skimp on butter, eggs and flavoring. Poor butter and stale eggs will give a bad taste to the entire batch of dough.

When baking cakes, particularly where a gas stove is used, the tin which contains the cake should be put inside another tin which has a layer of sand laid in. This will prevent it from burning.

To Ferment.

"You know Elsie, that 'ferment' means 'to work,'" said the teacher. "Now you may write a sentence on the blackboard containing the word 'ferment.'"

After a moment's thought Elsie wrote as follows: "In summer I love to ferment among the flowers in our garden."

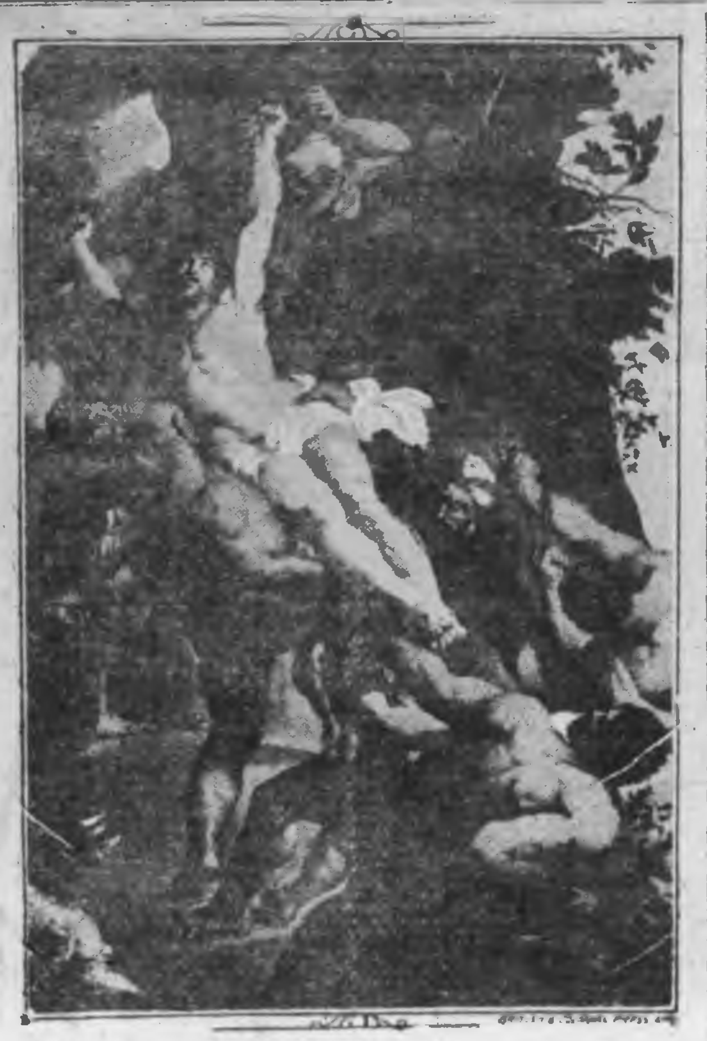
Caught Her.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am, for calling you to the door."

"What's the trouble?"

"Why, the lady next door told me you would buy a jar of our beautifying cream because you needed it. But I see you don't. Good day, ma'am."

"Wait one moment, please. I'll take one anyway."



ART TREASURES SAVED FROM ANTWERP.

"The Crucifixion," by Paul Rubens, was one of the famous paintings which hung in the Antwerp Cathedral till the near approach of the German army made it advisable to remove it. The picture was taken down before the bombardment of the city and is now said to be in England.

Bird Houses.

Martins, bluebirds, and wrens do not take kindly to houses made of new, bright wood. Their instincts lead them to prefer the places which more clearly resemble the insides of decayed trees, in which their ancestors have nested from time immemorial. Build your birdhouses to suit the birds rather than to please your own tastes.

Cause For Applause.

At the close of the premiere performance of a recent operatic novelty, one particularly unimpressionable operagoer was observed beating his palms together vehemently.

"What are you applauding for?" asked a friend.

"To show how thankful I am that the curtain is down at last," he replied.

A True Courtier.

Upon his arrival at the court of Vienna a former French ambassador was presented to the empress, who was aware that the day before he had visited the beautiful Countess X.

"Is it true," she asked, "that the Countess X. is the most lovely woman in Europe?"

"I thought so yesterday, your majesty," replied the diplomat, with a graceful bow.

FAMOUS TREE THAT BLOOMS ON CHRISTMAS.

A very interesting group of Christmas superstitions clusters about plant and animal life. Tradition tells us that after Joseph of Arimathea had begged the body of our crucified Saviour and had laid it in his own newly hewn tomb he left Palestine forever. Staff in hand, he traveled many weary months and finally reached Glastonbury, in England. Here he planted his staff, and in the course of time it sent out leaves and buds. On the glad Christmas morning the buds burst into a mass of exquisite bloom. Since that day of long ago the Glastonbury thorn never fails to be covered with delicate white flowers on Christmas morning. By the following day they have all disappeared.

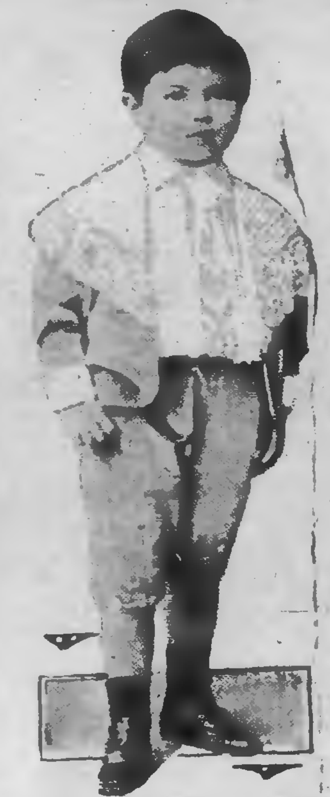
A cutting of the Glastonbury thorn was taken to Buckinghamshire, where it became as famous as the parent plant itself. Thousands of people from near and far were wont to go to see the blossoming of the thorn on Christmas morning. When about the middle of the eighteenth century England adopted the Gregorian calendar, which brought Christmas eleven days earlier than under the older style of reckoning time, the common people were greatly dissatisfied. To their simple minds they had actually been deprived of eleven days of their mortal life, and mobs marched through the streets carrying placards bearing the inscription, "Give Us Back Our Eleven Days!" That they had been wronged became a conviction when the Buckinghamshire thorn failed to blossom on the new date, and when the people actually refused to attend church on the 25th of December the clergy in that part of England were forced to celebrate divine worship on both the old and the new dates.

In pagan times special deities were supposed to preside over the harvests, and the people sought in every possible manner to propitiate these powerful gods. In out of the way parts of Europe the trees are still formally invited to the Christmas feast. Taking acceptance for granted, the remains of the Christmas dinner are spread about the roots of the fruit trees. This ceremony is supposed to insure plentiful harvests the following autumn. In other places the trees were in olden times beaten with clubs to make them more productive.

Alleged Scottish Kings.

Jests innumerable have been showered upon the hundred portraits of alleged Scottish kings, with a strong family likeness, especially about the nose, which adorn Holyrood—kings, as Scott says, "who, if they ever flourished at all, lived several hundred years before the invention of painting in oil colors." The late Mr. W. C. Haslitt, recalls the London Chronicle, had a story of a visitor who gravely inquired of the old woman who showed him over the palace, "Did you do these?" She shook her head as gravely, and he added, "You might have done better."

NO GREAT FUN TO BE CROWN PRINCE OF EGYPT.



Crown Prince Edert.

This chubby little lad looks as if he'd like to play a game of baseball in the back lot—but he never does. He's the crown prince of Egypt and he's so carefully guarded by teachers and soldiers that he never gets a chance to play games with other small boys.

If the little crown prince hears nothing of games and sports, he hears a great deal of war these days, for his father, the khedive of Egypt, has joined the Turks against the allies in the "great war."

Boiling a Fish.

In boiling any fish you should put enough water in a large pot to enable a fish to swim in it if it were alive. Add to this water half a cupful of vinegar, a tablespoonful of salt, one whole onion, one dozen whole black peppers, one blade of mace. Take any fish and sew it up in a new piece of cheesecloth fitted to the shape of the fish. Put in the water and heat slowly for thirty minutes; then let it boil hard and fast for about ten minutes. Unwarp and serve with drawn butter made from the liquor in which the fish was cooked and add to it the juice of half a lemon.

ATTACKS AT YPRES AND IN THE ARGONNE ARE REPULSED

French Troops Continue to Make Progress in Direction of Enemy's Lines

OCCUPY STATION

To the South of Thann and go Forward in the Forest of Le Pretre

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 11. — The official afternoon statement says: "Yesterday the enemy was active in the vicinity of Ypres. Three of his attacks were repulsed, but one of the important French trenches was reached by a force of Emperor William. Nevertheless French troops continue to make progress in the direction of the enemy's lines, according to an official report.

"In the Argonne we have pushed forward several of our trenches and driven back two German attacks.

"In the region of Varennes we have consolidated our gains of the preceding days. German artillery has been very active, but we suffered no losses.

"A similar condition has existed on the heights of the Meuse.

"In the forest of Le Pretre our progress has been continued.

"To the south of Thann we have occupied the railroad station of Aspach.

"Along the remainder of the front in the Vosges there have been artillery engagements."

THREE GERMAN CRUISERS WHICH WERE SUNK

This silhouette drawing shows the prominent features of the three vessels sent to the bottom of the Atlantic by Admiral Sturdee's squadron. The Scharhorst and Gneisenau were sister ships of the armored cruiser type, the Scharnhorst being the flagship of Admiral Von Spee. The Leipzig was a smaller vessel—a light cruiser and by their removal the loss of the Good Hope and Monmouth is avenged with interest. The three German vessels carried a total of 74 guns and about 1,800 men while the two British ships lost of Nov. 1 carried 78 guns of all sizes and 1,437 men. The Nurnberg, another unit of the German squadron, has also been sunk.

NIGHT CLERK SHOT DEAD

Operator at Whitby is Murdered by an Unknown Hand

TWO ARRESTS MADE

Was Able to Use Phone But Was Dead When Found

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Whitby, Dec. 11.—Telegraph operator William P. Stone, night clerk at the G.T.R. station, was shot through the heart about one o'clock this morning by a party unknown. Two men arrested at York, were captured on a freight train that left Whitby about the time the shooting was done.

Stone who was twenty years of age was the operator at the Grand Trunk station at Whitby Junction. He was a native of this place and very popular and the murder has created a sensation.

Called for Police.

No cause for it has been discovered and it is believed, there were no witnesses. Stone telephoned to the Bell Telphone central saying, "Send down the Chief of Police, I have been shot," and when the chief arrived on the scene, he was lying dead at his desk with the telephone receiver still in his hand.

An impression was taken of some finger prints on his desk.

ENGINEER IS INSTRUCTED

To Take up Question of Auxiliary Plant for Waterworks

A COST ESTIMATE

Might be in Neighborhood of $16,000 Engineer Says

William Kennedy, jun., of Montreal, who engineered the construction of the old pump house some twenty-five years ago, and also the construction of the new pump house some four or five years ago, was last night authorized by the Utilities Commission to go thoroughly into the matter of installing a steam auxiliary plant and to report back to the Commission as soon as possible.

Mr. Kennedy met the Commissioners, and Chairman T. F. Matthews placed the matter before him, remarking how the Commission is desirous of overcoming frazil ice. An electrical auxiliary plant had been suggested, but they wanted Mr. Kennedy's advice. Mr. Kennedy remarked that he had given the matter a little consideration and felt like recommending a steam plant. In his opinion the city would not need an expensive plant, as it would be operated so seldom. It might be possible to install the pumps in the present pump house and erect a boiler house. The capacity would be about five million gallons per day.

About the Cost.

Mr. Moore asked if the cost would be between eight and ten thousand dollars, to which Mr. Kennedy remarked that he could only state offhand, but he thought it would be a little more.

Mr. Hicks brought out the idea of installing a steam plant to provide fire protection and have an auxiliary power plant operated by electricity. In his opinion, there would be about nineteen times out of twenty that power could be secured from outside points. Mr. Hicks explained that as the city owned the power, it would not have to pay for electricity all the year round, but merely for the power utilized. If the power department was owned by an outside concern, it would be necessary to sign a contract for the year. To the last statement Mr. Kennedy remarked that the city was in a much better position than many other cities.

Mr. Hicks expressed himself as believing that the city can get along without the power far more easily than without the water. With the power off, the factories and industries are disorganized, but with the water off there is a possibility of having the factories swept away by fire and disorganized for months.

Hard to Overcome.

Mr. Kennedy informed the members of the Commission that anchor ice and frazil ice are very hard to overcome. There is just about one five-hundredth of a degree difference in water when it will stick and when it will not stick.

John Murphy, an electrical engineer at Ottawa, who is in the employ of the Government, has patented an apparatus to heat the water and overcome the frazil ice in that manner.

Auto Corps For Guard

Scheme Will be Laid Before the Executive Next Week

A scheme for the speedy mobilization of the Peterborough regiment for home defence in case of emergency will be laid before Lieut.-Col. Goodwill and his staff next week by Alderman A. H. Stratton. The proposition will be that an auto corps be organized that would be prepared to assist in assembling militia at short notice.

Ald. Stratton interviewed the officials of the Ontario Motor League when in Toronto, and learned how such an undertaking would be managed. In Toronto Major Gen. Lessard, officer commanding the Toronto divisional area, has requested the cooperation of the Ontario Motor League for speedy mobilisation in case of emergency.

Nothing definite has been arranged here. The whole matter, with data, will be laid before the Home Guard executive next week, Ald. Stratton feeling that until the patriotic campaign was over it would not be opportune to present his report.

A Splendid Parade.

Five hundred of Peterborough's home guard marched last night in one of the most soldiery parades yet held, and incidentally traversed a longer route than they have since organizing. As a source of interest and civic pride, the guard look like winning candidates for popular favor. Certainly their showing last night created a most favorable impression which found an outlet in frequent outbursts of applause from spectators that lined the route of march. A great many favorable remarks were passed regarding their smart appearance and trim marching order. "Tipperary" proved just as popular as ever as a marching tune, discoursed by the 57th Regiment Band. The Salvation Army band contributed music also.

A pause was made in front of the patriotic committee headquarters and several salvoes of cheers given as the guard noted the height of the mercury in the war fund thermometer. The route of march was down George to Charlotte, across to Water Street, up Water to Brock, down to Aylmer, and out Aylmer to Charlotte Streets and up George to the armouries.

Musketry Lecture.

Here one half of the guard were given a musketry lecture, and were put through a good half hour drill. Col. Sergeant Dodds explained the use of the rifle and his services as well as those of other 57th officers, which are given entirely free, are greatly appreciated. Quite a number of recruits were enrolled and sworn in last night.

Good Shooting.

Noticeable improvement was seen in the shooting which took place last night at the new rifle ranges. It has been decided to record all scores of thirty points and over out of a possible thirty-five. Those who made this last night were;—

SECRETARIES FOR EPWORTH LEAGUES

Toronto, Dec. 11.—At the meeting of the General Board of the Methodist Sunday School and Epworth Leagues, which came to a close yesterday, a redistribution of territory was decided upon and the following appointed secretaries: Rev. Manson Doyle, for British Columbia and Alberta; Rev. F. H. Langford, for Manitoba and Saskatchewan; Rev F. L. Farewell, for Montreal and the Maritime Provinces with Newfoundland, and Rev. S. T. Bartlett, for Toronto, London, Hamilton and the Bay of Quinte.

Rev. Dr. Chown, the General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, was appointed representative on the International Sunday School Lesson Committee which will meet in Washington.

It was decided to make the Epworth Era the organ also for the Social Service and Evangelism Department.

ONE STEP FROM $50,000 MARK CAMPAIGN HAS BEEN SUCCESS

Thermometer Jumped to $48,000 This Afternoon and Awaits the Magic Touch

Forty-eight thousand dollars and only a few more hours to go. Enthusiasm mounted to fever heat at the Patriotic Fund headquarters this afternoon when the total proceeds were reported. Up went the mercury in the thermometer in front, to $48,000, and that it will go several notches higher before night is a certainty.

The team captains submitted their returns for the second day at a big banquet at noon today. They are as follows:

No. 1	$641 13
No. 2	693 75
No. 3	765 94
No. 4	659 00
No. 5	1100 40
No. 6	2722 00
No. 7	2944 00
No. 8	465 00
No. 9	385 30
No. 10	390 00
Finance Committee	475 00

The grand total of last evening was something over $43,000. Leaving about $7,000 to go to win. Several substantial subscriptions are in sight which will make the raising easier. Among the fine amounts so generously given were those of Miss Dickson $500, Miss Charlotte Dickson $500, Mrs. W. Walsh $500, and Mrs. Hazlitt of $1,000. These ladies are ever generous in a good cause and this one particularly appealed to them. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Aylmer gave a very welcome $500. The ladies of the Chamberlain Estate made the handsome gift to the fund of $1,000. Mr. B. F. Ackerman, whose subscription of $1,000, for the firm, will make another $1,000 on his own account as the last thousand to be raised.

Mr. Kendrey of the Auburn Mills handed in a fine subscription of $1,000, for the company and its heads. The employes are doing fine, as well, though the amount to be contributed will not be known until the close of the day. Judge Huycke contributed $300. Mr. Claude Rogers gave $200. The De Laval employes raised in a day's wages $160. The Peterborough Canoe Co., $250, the Peterborough Lock Co. employes $106.60.

Had the plaster on the ceiling of the committee room not been fastened on with paper it might fallen right after dinner. The first contribution from Peterborough Old Boys was a cheque for $10.00 from Mrs. Margaret Ellis, of Canajoharie, N.Y. It was received with cheers and Tipperary. Before putting it in the fund it was claimed by two of the teams, who tried to prove relationship to the lady.

Then the suggestion was offered to set the cheque up at auction. No sooner said than done. Auctioneer Dan O'Connell asked for bids. They came fast and furious. He patrolled the room to get in close touch with his customers. The bidding rose by instalments and by dollars and was finally knocked down to team No. 3, at $20 coin of the realm. There was more fuss, shouts and laughter than many a grand opera gains. All in good shape.

The lesson in this incident is that there is always money in the country when the proper inducements are offered. Are we downhearted. No, emphatically, no.

Yesterday the Red Cross exhibit in the window of the Turnbull department store attracted a large and interested crowd. The object of this display is to attract attention to the objects of the fund and to give some realistic conception of the real work being done on the battlefields. The young lady nurses taking part and giving their services were Misses Powers, Mann, Smith and Davis, of the Nicholls Hospital staff. The hospital kindly supplied the essentials to be used in the demonstration. The whole thing was well put on and beyond causing some agitation caused to the police by the crowd obstructing traffic there was no trouble. But the object was to collect a crowd, else the display were of no avail. Apologies to Chief Thompson and his men for just this once. It will not happen again. The names of the boys who submitted to the caresses and wrapping up will be given later.

Later the returns came in from the Grafton Co. being $100 from the firm and from the employs $30.

Here is where a good man does something that will be as the same as money. Money is rather hard to get these days. So Mr. Jas. Ellis of the Peterborough Mattress Factory gives ten mattresses. They are worth an average of $4. These will be accepted, in fact are taken in with thanks. None of us will be the worse off for sleeping on one of Ellis' mattresses. They will be put up on sale, presently, and Mr. Ellis undertakes to deliver them to any part of the city, from his factory. Samples will be shown at the time of sale. Better bid now.

The saddening intelligence comes in that the Bandaging Exhibit will have to be cancelled for this afternoon. Mr. Might has been very good and business has to some extent been disorganized and one whole window placed at the service of the committee. This must go back to showing Saturday's sale goods and the exhibit is cancelled. Thanks, Mr. Might, you have done well. The boys may now call the attention of their children in years to come that they have had their legs wrapped up in that same window during the war days of 1914.

The first Peterborough Old Boy letter to come in was received this morning, it was from an Old Girl. More power to the sex. It came from Mrs. Margaret Ellis, of Canajoharie, N.Y., who writes that she is only too glad to send the check of $10 and wishes it could be ten times the amount. Good for the Canadian girls, even if they are translated to become of the American nation. They are Canadians at heart, and the hearts are big ones.

Some confusion had arisen. The names of the people to be solicited for subscriptions had been typed on cards and handed to the several teams. In some cases the cards had been duplicated; and the team that got there first took the money and claimed the credit. Then the other team remonstrated, and some adjustments were made. All in good humor and amidst much laughter. Everyone felt good. There were results.

The Bell Telephone Co. staff gave one day's pay on the occasion of the first subscription and have donated another day as well The employes at J. E. A. Fitzgerald's the same, also J. J. Duffus garage are in line and the Peterborough Planing Mill. The city Post Office staff are busy and their contribution will come in. The Peterborough Cereal Co. employes gave $60 and Grafton & Co. will send in a good amount.

End of the second day. Boisterous, well yes; distinctively so. Cheers, shouts, protestations, laughter. As the results from the canvass of the several teams was read out the excitement rose. It had been barely hoped that the day's work would net at least $6000. But when it was known that over $11,000 had been raised the meeting went wild. It was ahead of the best anticipations.

One marked effort that deserves to be noted is that of the Peterborough Chicle Co. employes. Many of these are young girls who are working in the minor operations connected with the putting up of the goods and whose salaries are not so large. Instead of taking a day's pay decided to work overtime for the number of hours that would make up a good subscription. That spirit is fine and is to be praised.

Just to head off a rumor that might as well be nailed now as further on. The committees have had meals served at the committee rooms, more to hold the teams together, and for a general meeting and fixing up. These are all paid for individually, each man for himself. Gentlemen, this committee is self-acting and self-supporting and don't you forget it.

Thos. Gunn, brush maker, hands in in two dozen brushes. Kind not specified, because not known. These brushes should go off quickly, being fired from a Gunn. Better speak now. Handy to have around the house.

BOTH SIDES IN THE EAST HARD HIT

Re-inforcements Will be a Factor in the Situation

FOE LOSES EMPETUS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 11. — Incessant, hard fighting for four weeks has told severely on both sides, and a decisive factor in the situation will be the ability of either side to rush in reinforcements.

The attack of the Austro-German army seems to have lost its impetus with the exception of General Mackensen's army, which is reported only 15 miles from Warsaw.

Great Northwestern Takes Over Lines

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Dec. 11. — Official announcement is made that the Great North Western Telegraph Co., commencing January 1st, will operate the commercial telegraph lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, and that within a few months the Western Union lines in the Maritime Provinces will also be brought under the Great North Western management, making one line from the Atlantic to the Pacific as a rival to the Canadian Pacific.

Naval Loss Admitted

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, Dec. 11. — A semi-official statement today regarding the naval battle off Falkland Islands, says, the loss of the cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig, is conceded and little hope is held out that the Dresden and Nurnberg could long evade capture.

The statement shows that the German naval base had no knowledge of the position or movements of the ill-fated ships after they left Santiago, Chile.

Col. Wigle Hurt

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Ont., Dec. 11.—Lieut-Col. Wigle, commanding officer of the Eighteenth battalion now in training here for overseas service sprained his ankle yesterday when his mount slipped in the centre gutter at the barracks and fell over his rider.

The colonel remounted and rode with troops for twenty-two miles. Today he is confined to his quarters under a physician's charge.

PURCHASE OF HORSES.

The purchase of horses for military purposes will take place at the market square Saturday morning.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1914

THE CHANCE AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

THE ARTICLE in the Review yesterday on the power situation in Peterborough was not intended as a reflection on the present Commissioners, but to draw attention to the seriousness of the condition in which this city found itself. We were informed on what we considered a reliable authority that only one Commissioner was on the job, but we learned later that all three were present, and that Mr. Matthews was indefatigable in his efforts to relieve the situation. Some think that the present Commissioners have nothing to do with power. They were called formerly the Water, Light and Power Commissioners, but this year are known as the Public Utilities Commissioners, and have supervision of the water, light and power utilities of this city.

The condition arising from needle or anchor ice was well known to those who have had supervision of Peterborough's power and water. They say the present season has been the worst in twenty years. Very well. The fact is that from time immemorial those having charge of these utilities, whether privately or publicly owned, have taken the chance that the season would pass without severe consequences. In such cases it is always the odd time when disastrous results condemn such a policy. The present Commissioners are not to blame for what their predecessors handed down, but the present occasion shows the result of such a policy and the necessity for a change.

Without proper provision to meet the contingency arising from needle or anchor ice, there is no reasonable assurance that at certain seasons of the year constant power will be supplied to the industries of Peterborough. When the power goes off, as it did this week, thousands of dollars in wages, delay on contracts, and depreciation in revenue, are lost. Besides, new, or prospective industries are looking for a constant power.

The same criticism applies to the water situation. If a fire broke out when there was no water there would be indignation meetings and a vociferous calling for heads on chargers, whether responsible or not. It is essential to safety to have proper means of protecting the city from fire. True, there may not be a bad fire in twenty years, but the odd time when it occurs is the one for which provision is necessary. Let there be an end to the old policy that nothing serious will likely occur. It is better to rely less on the vagaries of the weather and of nature and more on reason, even if it does cost the city considerable money. It is reasonable to suppose that the citizens will support any proposal of the Commissioners that is calculated to relieve the situation and be within the resources of this municipality.

AN INCONSISTENT AND FOOLISH POLICY.

ONE WOULD EXPECT Canada's leading Liberal newspaper, the Toronto Globe, to express in its editorial utterances at least a measure of consistency. The editor of that paper, however, is an advocate of peace, not war, and, now that we are at war, he finds himself in a predicament. He wants to support the war because it is a defence of national liberty and democracy, yet he is opposed to war, and wants to advocate peace. The result is that such affinities lead him into most glaring inconsistencies, and the Globe hardly knows "where it is at." Here is what it said recently:

> "The sword ought never again to be sheathed. It ought to be broken. This war that threatens the world, destroying the treasures of civilization and turning back humanity to savagery, famine, and death, ought to be the world's last war. In order that it may be the last, its weapons ought to be put out of the reach of any nation. The spoils of this war ought to be not new territory for the victors, and not the destruction of the vanquished, but disarmament for vanquished and victor alike. . . "

Then the Globe goes on to say that armaments MUST be destroyed; all great armies MUST be dissolved; all great navies MUST be dispersed. If the Globe had added a paragraph of its usually splendid diction to explain how this is to be done, there would be some real worth in its article. Who is going to enforce the "must"? The fact is that all peace advocates, when emphatic, usually make such a glaring error. The sword will not, we have no doubt, be broken, but sheathed, after this war. Great nations will still keep their armies and navies as a measure of protection. To write, as the Globe writes, in time of war, is not only inconsistent, but foolish in the extreme. It is advocating an impossible object quite opposed to the spirit of the time, and which should for that very reason weaken the force of what it says on its most serious page. If any newspaper in Canada is to be a real power in the land, it should make some attempt to maintain consistency, and not support that which weighty evidence condemns as impossible of realization for at least centuries to come.

WHAT will the poor old Karlsruhe do now, all alone out there on a big ocean?

WESTERN ACRES FOR NEXT YEAR'S WHEAT.

LAST SEASON in the three Prairie Provinces the acreage under wheat was about 10,500,000 acres. For next year the acreage will be 12,500,000 or 13,000,000 acres. But there are scores of millions of acres yet unbroken that could be brought into cultivation next year in readiness for cropping in 1916. From now on, says the Toronto Mail and Empire, and especially after the war, Western Canada will be a hotbed of grain production. In four or five years, owing to the stimulus of high grain prices, we should have 20,000,000 acres under wheat alone, without any sacrifice of the mixed farming Western Canada has begun so energetically to develop.

It would be an incentive to the farmers, and a real aid to Western agriculture, if the Governments concerned provided traction plows for breaking land, the cost to be charged against the first crop. Traction engines have, of course, been extensively employed in the West, but a Government system of breaking land for farmers at cost could be employed with economy to all. As our correspondent points out, farming operations such as this can be cheaply and profitably done by co-operation, and particularly by Government aid. Traction plows could be kept going in the West from early Spring to late Fall, with the result that the subsequent preparation of the land and the seeding would be tremendously facilitated. No other single Governmental action would be so efficacious for enlarging the grain output and restoring prosperity to the West.

ENGLAND'S RESOURCES.

ENGLAND'S RESOURCES in money seem to be inexhaustible (says an American newspaper). She has already loaned $215,000,000 to her Allies and friends for war purposes; $50,000,000 to Belgium, $4,000,000 to Servia, $8,000,000 to Greece, besides large cash advances to Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand. These loans are without interest so long as hostilities continue. When the European nations took up arms against Napoleon, England pursued the same policy. She financed country after country until the menace of a one-nation tyranny was banished. There is no doubt that Great Britain is in a healthy financial condition and better able to stand the drain and strain of a long war than any other power. And her financiers prophesy that when peace comes she will be in even better condition than when the struggle began.

General Orders From Berlin.

(Life, New York.)

1. When the German army arrives within ten miles of a town which is about to be invaded, all the inhabitants thereof shall look happy. This regulation is necessary to preserve the morale of the German army and must be strictly observed, or the town, including suburbs, will be burned, the hands of all the residents between fifteen and thirty cut off, and a tax levied.

2. The foregoing rule must not be interpreted as allowing inhabitants of invaded towns to look too happy. Excessive happiness will naturally lead to the suspicion that the honourable Germans are being laughed at. Anyone caught laughing, no matter how ludicrous the German officer may be, will be shot, all female inhabitants of the town carefully searched, the hands of the unwilling cut off, and a tax levied upon all towns within one hundred miles.

3. As soon as a town has reason to hope that it is going to be invaded by the German army, all the citizens thereof shall immediately proceed to stock their cellars with wines of the choicest vintage and their larders with the best provisions. They shall then forward lists of these wines and provisions to the general board of strategy at Berlin. Those citizens who make the best selection of dainties will be spared. All others will be killed or maimed and a tax will be levied.

4. All towns are warned that it is dangerous to undertake any measures of self-defence. If a town allows itself to be burned in the right spirit, the honour of the Germans is pledged that no harm shall come to it, and, in proof of the good intentions of the German officers and men, all town officials will be shot and a tax levied. —(Signed) General Von Vandal.

The Length of the War.

(Kingston Standard.)

Estimates of the length of the war are interesting. The latest is that of "a high French military authority." He divides it into six periods: two past, one present and three to come. They are: the advance through Belgium into France, the battles of the Marne and Aisne, the battle for Calais, a German retreat and battle on the Meuse, a German retreat and a battle on the Rhine, and —the march to Berlin. All this, he says, will take till 1917. We hope not.

GERMANS DRIVEN OUT FROM ROULERS AND ARMENTIERES

Drive in Belgium and Northern France Goes Steadily Forward and Thick Band of Steel Confronts the Kaiser's Forces at Every Point—Gain Also Made by Allies Between Lens and La Bassee.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — Despatches from northern France tell of notable advances of the allies at various places.

Reuter's Boulogne correspondent, who has just returned to Boulogne from Armentieres, says the Germans on Tuesday were driven out of Armentieres by the British and hurled back beyond artillery range.

Armentieres is nine miles northwest of Lille.

The Germans have been driven back between Lens and La Bassee. They are weakening their hold on La Bassee.

The allies have entered Roulers (Rousselaere), in West Flanders, about 12 miles northeast of Ypres, according to the Sluis correspondent of The Handelsblad of Amsterdam.

A despatch to a London newspaper from the Belgian frontier Wednesday said the German Divisional Headquarters was removed from Roulers when shells began to fall in the town after the British had captured Passchendaele, a short distance to the west.

The Daily News publishes the following despatch from William Ridsdale, its correspondent in northern France:

"This must be a day of bitterness for the Kaiser. Yesterday (Dec. 10) was the date fixed for him for the triumphant arrival of the German troops in Calais, but as I write the Calaisians are no doubt sleeping peacefully in their beds and all along the line the Germans are held, not by a thin line of khaki and blue, but by a thick band of steel, which grows stronger every day. The allies are now upon the offensive, and though the Germans are not in many places content with playing merely a game of defence, they are beginning to slowly but surely move eastward.

"During the last two or three days the allied troops have been specially successful along the line between Ypres and Dixmude. It has been stubborn fighting. A number of German trenches have been taken and held, and work with the bayonet is reported to have been exceedingly fierce in several places. This fighting, I believe, is merely a prelude, and there is reason to believe that by the end of the month the Germans will hold considerably less of Belgium than at present, and some towns in eastern France will come once more into the possession of friendly soldiers."

SITUATION ANALYZED BY RUSSIAN OFFICER

They Are Throwing Themselves Desperately Against Both Ends of the Long Russian Line, Which is Now Greatly Strengthened Since Retirement From Lodz.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — The Daily News has the following from Frederick Rennett, its correspondent in Petrograd:—

"The Germans are now throwing themseves in frantic desperation on both ends of the long Russian line. Their renewed attempt, with strong reinforcements, to pierce the Russian front south of Cracow has been defeated, with terrible bloodshed, and the Russian army in Galicia has now successfully brought its campaign to the final stage. This gives the Russian southern position great strength, which is increased by the new alignment to the northward since the withdrawal from the exposed angle around Lodz.

It is estimated that the Germans have now brought 300,000 men, including 60,000 cavalry, from the western theatre of the war. The greater part of them are engaged in the renewed campaign in East Prussia. All the dispositions of the German troops brought from France, Belgium and the home reserves are regarded here as pointing to the supreme political decision of the Kaiser and the Berlin Government to wage war now for the protection of German territory, and to gradually abandon the dispositions made earlier with a determination to maintain a campaign of conquest. The alignment of the vast forces now turned against Russia is consistent only with the aim of preventing an invasion.

A Russian military expert analyzes and interprets the German attempt on Warsaw as follows:—

"Although the German forces are more numerous than in their former advance and they are planning attacks from several separate directions simultaneously, their task is greater than before on account of the vastness of the Russian army which is massed to meet them.

"Gen. Francois of the Eighth German army corps from Osterode and Soldau is proceeding from East Prussia southward through Miawa, Ciechanow and Przasnysz, on the right side of the Vistula, in an attempt to push toward Roshan with the evident intention of giving the powerful fortress of Nowo Georgievsk a wide berth. The Germans thus hope to outflank the Russian right wing and strike Warsaw from the northeast.

"Gen. Mackenzen's German army from Thorn meanwhile continues an offensive on the left side of the Vistula through Lowicz, engaging the Russian centre and aiming to hit Warsaw from the west. Another part of Field Marshal Hindenberg's army from Sieadz recently engaged Lodz and Piotrkow, making every effort to march through Skiernievice and threaten Warsaw from the southwest.

"The Austrians from the west and southwest of Cracow complete the German plan by beginning an offensive in an effort to outflank the Russian left, which is besieging Cracow, while the other part of the Austrian army on the north, which is in contact with the extreme German right, is trying to proceed northeast with the object of taking Kielce and Radom. These movements take the form of a widespread fan with Warsaw the handle.

"Except on the north from Clechanow, the movements are not new, the Austro-Germans having tried them before and failed.

"According to the Russian authorities, the yielding of cities to the enemy does not constitute an important war factor, since the taking of big cities like Lodz, with the attendant destruction of life and property tends to demoralize the army. Thus, if it is of strategic value to evacuate Warsaw, the capture of that city ought not to be considered important."

KAISER'S STATE SERIOUS.

Illness of War Lord Alarming, Says Copenhagen Despatch.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 11. — The Kaiser's condition is most alarming, it is believed in official circles. From a diplomatic source I learn that his condition is serious, though not dangerous. Much depends on whether he will obey the physicians. He cannot keep quiet and take a full rest. The Empress has great difficulty in prevailing on him to stay in bed. He has a very bad attack of influenza. His morning temperature was about 103, higher than the day before. If he is unwilling to take so absolute rest there may be real danger, as he is weak and his spirits are depressed.

Better, Says Berlin.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 11—(Via London.)—Emperor William's health has considerably improved, according to an official announcement made in Berlin yesterday. His majesty's catarrh is relaxing and his temperature and pulse are normal.

"The Chocolate Soldier."

Grand Opera House tomorrow, Satur day, Dec. 12th. Matinee and night. Prices, Matinee 25c., 50c, and 75c., Night, 25c., 50c., 75c., and $1.00.

FURTHER DETAILS OF SEA FIGHTING

British Ships are in Search of Dresden According to Official Statement

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Admiralty makes further announcement relative to the sinking of the German cruisers off the Falkland Islands in the south Atlantic, saying that a telegram has been received from Vice-Admiral Sturdee, in command of the British vessels in the engagement, that the Nurnberg also was sunk on Dec. 8, and that the search for the Dresden is still proceeding.

The action, according to the admiral's cablegram, lasted five hours. At the end of three hours' fighting the Scharnhorst sank, and the Gneisenau two hours later.

"The enemy's light cruisers then scattered," says the message, "and were chased by our light cruisers. There was no loss to any British vessel."

The official announcement of the Admiralty says:

"A further telegram has been received from Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee, reporting that the Nurnberg was also sunk on Dec. 8, and that the search for the Dresden is still proceeding.

"The action lasted for five hours, with intervals. The Scharnhorst sank after three hours and the Gneisenau two hours later. The enemy's light cruisers scattered and were chased by our cruisers and light cruisers.

"No loss of any British vessel is reported."

The Nurnberg was a third-class cruiser of 3,396 tons displacement, 254 1-4 feet in length, 43 1-2 feet beam, and a draught of 15 3-4 feet. Built and completed at Kiel in 1908, she had engines of 13,000 h.p., and her twin screws propelled her at the rate of 23 1-2 knots, or about 25 miles an hour. Her armament consisted of ten 4.1-inch guns, eight 2.1-inch quickfirers, and four machine guns, together with a couple of submerged torpedo tubes. She had a coal capacity of 850 tons and a complement of 295 men.

Reports received say that the Dresden is being pursued near the entrance to the Straits of Magellan. The German auxiliary cruiser Prince Eitel is reported to be cruising in the south Atlantic and to have on board 1,500 German soldiers.

So far as is known, the victorious squadron was composed entirely of British vessels.

The Japanese squadron sent to the south Pacific is not believed at Tokio to have taken part in the engagement. It is reported at Tokio that the British squadron was reinforced recently by the addition of several big gun ships.

There is not the slightest doubt here that Vice-Admiral Sturdee, the British commander, has with him first-class ships, battle cruisers at least. These vessels have the weight of gun and also the speed sufficient to overwhelm the light German cruisers either in a stand-up engagement or in a running fight. It is believed that he has no less than a division of these vessels, together with the lighter cruisers, which have been for some time in the Atlantic.

The withholding of the names of the British ships engaged is perfectly understood here. It is explained that the British Admiralty desires to prevent the Germans from learning what important ships have been withdrawn from the battle fleet in the North Sea. It is also desired by the British that the two remaining German cruisers at large remain in ignorance of the strength of the enemy in their vicinity.

The sending of an overwhelming force against the German cruiser squadron is commended as precisely the move required of Great Britain. The only mistake, it is declared, was in not sending it earlier, and thus saving Craddock from disaster off Chile.

It is pointed out that the advantage of having, as have the British, an overwhelming preponderance of ships, is to use them in such terms that they will never be compelled to face the enemy on equal terms, thus insuring the minimum of loss to the British.

The impression prevails among naval men that Admiral von Spee, realizing that he could no longer keep out of touch with the British and Japanese fleets patrolling the Pacific decided to enter the Atlantic and make a run for home, in the hope that at least some of his ships would get past the British. This move, it is said, was anticipated by the Admiralty, and Vice-Admiral Sturdee was sent south to head off the Germans before they could get well within the Atlantic and scatter, which would have made their capture more difficult.

Losses Great, Berlin Admits.

BERLIN, Dec. 11. — (Via London.)—An official communication issued by the Admiralty yesterday reproduced the statement of the British Admiralty regarding the sinking of the German cruisers off the Falkland Islands, and adds:

"Our losses seem to have been great. Concerning the strength of enemy, whose losses are reported to be small, the English despatches say nothing."

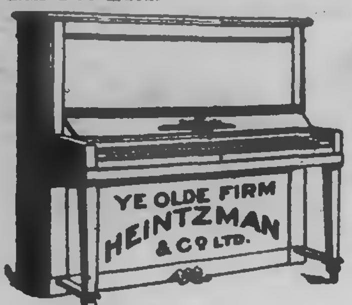
Sir Frederick Congratulated.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—King George yesterday sent a message of congratulation to Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee and the men of his fleet for their victory over the Germans.

Gen. Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British land forces, also sent a message to Admiral Sturdee on behalf of the army. In the message he said: "I congratulate you and the Admiralty on having practically swept the seas clear of the enemy's ships."

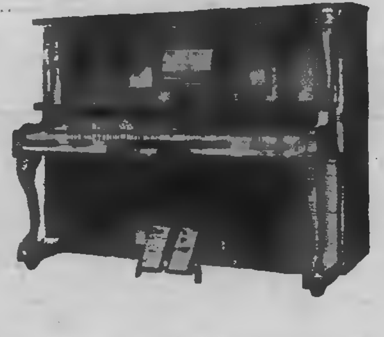
"Father and Mother do the Playing Now"

THAT is what you hear in the homes that have been blessed by the installation of a NEW PLAYER PIANO. The student daughter is not the only one to touch the piano now, any member of the family can play the finest compositions perfectly. And if the daughter has gone to a home of her own, the "Silent Piano" can quickly be exchanged for a Live Player, that responds to the touch of unaccustomed hands, with the music that appeals so strongly and is missed so much.



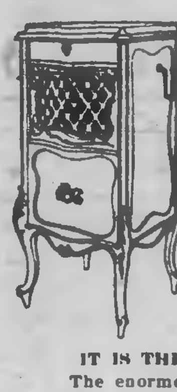
This Christmas is the Time to get the Live Piano

At the Greene Music Store you can have a demonstration of either the New Scale Williams Player, or "Ye Olde Firme" Heintzman & Co. Player, at any time. You can play them yourself, just to see how easy and delightful it is to produce some master selection that you could only listen to before.



We are prepared to take your old "silent" Piano and make a liberal allowance for it on the purchase of a live Player Piano. Better redeem the promise this Christmas by making a selection of a HEINTZMAN & CO. or NEW SCALE WILLIAMS PIANO, that is sure to please, with its exquisite quality of tone and beauty of design. Terms most favorable, making purchase easy.

EDISON'S NEWEST TRIUMPH



THE WORLD is today crowning Thomas A. Edison's genius by the most unqualified approval of his latest masterpiece, the EDISON DIAMOND DISC PHONOGRAPH. Never satisfied with the wonderful results he gave the world when the Edison Phonograph was first introduced and later improved, the great inventor spent years of incessant labor and study in finally producing the marvellous

NEW DIAMOND DISC

The satisfaction that Mr. Edison himself expresses when he says that the NEW DIAMOND DISC IS A REAL MUSICAL INSTRUMENT is also amply testified to by hundreds of delighted musicians throughout America. No such clear over-tones have ever been reproduced before. So natural is the sound of voice or musical instrument, that the performer seems to be right in the room beside you. Other features of the Edison Diamond Disc are that the Records are unbreakable and will wear for years without injury, also there is NO NEEDLE CHANGING NUISANCE, a diamond point that will not wear out, or injure records, is used.

IT IS THE INSTRUMENT YOU WILL HAVE FINALLY, BETTER GET IT NOW.

The enormous demand is already far overtaxing the capacity of the factory to produce the medium priced instruments, so if wanted for Christmas an immediate selection should be made to avoid disappointment. Hear it any day—Demonstrations Free any time we are open. Sold on very favorable terms of payment to suit buyers.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN PEARSON.

At the age of 72, Mrs. John Pearson, 310 Pearl Ave., died this morning about five o'clock after a lingering illness. She was greatly beloved and esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances who will deeply regret her death and sympathize with the bereaved family.

The deceased had resided in Peterborough eight years, moving here from the township of Smith.

Her husband, four daughters and three sons are left to mourn her loss. The sons are Frederick and Robert of Edmonton, and Thomas of Michigan, and the daughters are Mrs. J. H. Vallery, and Mrs. Wm. Westlake of Peterborough, Mrs. Harry Peters of Hastings, and Miss Carrie at home. As long as she was able, the late Mrs. Pearson always attended church being a faithful member of Charlotte Street Methodist.

Her funeral will take place on Sunday at 2 p.m. to Rae's cemetery, Lakefield.

MRS. JOHN CONDON.

There died this morning at 3 o'clock, Ellen Hanrahan, wife of Mr. John Condon, after an illness of slightly over six weeks, at the family residence, 273 William Street. During twenty-two years in which she resided in Peterborough she established a large circle of friends who feel her loss keenly. She is survived by her husband, two sons and one daughter, James, Edward and Gertrude. She has three brothers, John, Timothy and Michael of Peterborough and three sisters, Bridget, and Mary of Peterborough, and Mrs. Mitzky of Rochester, N.Y. Her mother also lives in the city.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2.30 to St. Peter's Cathedral and cemetery.

CHRISTMAS DINNER FOR SOLDIERS BY THE GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, Dec. 11. — Every man under arms in Canada will have a Christmas dinner at the Government's expense. This will include the 8,000 odd men now doing outpost, garrison and guard duty throughout the Dominion, and the 30,000 troops now mobilized here for service overseas. It has been decided that no one of these shall be deprived of at least some part of the Christmas cheer which their fellows in mufti enjoy.

Of course, many of those now assembled at divisional and district headquarters who have homes in the Dominion near enough to headquarters will be granted leave for Christmas Day.

Superintendent Dobbin has written to Engineer Murphy for information of his method.

Favors Steam Plant.

William Kennedy, Jr., of Montreal, the engineer who has been called in to look into the matter of installing an auxiliary plant at the pump house went over the ground this morning in company with Mr. T. F. Matthews and Mr. R. Hicks, of the Utilities Commission. Interviewed by a Review reporter this afternoon, Mr. Kennedy stated that he as yet cannot state just what will be done. He favors the construction of a steam plant of about 300 horsepower. Although the matter has not been fully gone into, Mr. Kennedy was of the opinion that the pumps could be located in the present pump house and a boiler house would be constructed.

"What would you estimate the cost at?" asked the reporter. In reply the engineer stated that he had not anything like exact figures, but roughly speaking would put it at fifteen or sixteen thousand dollars.

"Isn't that quite expensive for a plant that would be used so seldom?" was the next question.

"Well, Peterborough never had a big fire," answered Mr. Kennedy, "for the simple reason that there was always water available. The big Chicago fire could have een extinguished by a few buckets of water when it first started. Fifteen or sixteen thousand dollars might be a rather large sum, but one big fire would do far more damage. The only possible way of being assured that no large fires will occur is to have water on hand."

"What do you think of a reservoir?" asked the Review man.

"Well, a reservoir is a very good thing, but it costs considerable."

"Could you give an estimate of the cost or capacity?"

"The matter would first have to be gone into thoroughly and levels, grades, and so on, taken."

"How long will it be before you can make any definite statement as to what will likely be done?"

"That is hard to say," Mr. Kennedy remarked. "I intend going to Toronto this afternoon to look over some plants there, and will likely return next Tuesday or Wednesday."

One item of the present expenses that will be done away with should a steam auxiliary plant be constructed will be the heating of the pump house, as at the present time. The heating apparatus will be taken out and the building heated from the steam auxiliary plant.

The McDougall pump which is installed at the pump house, and which it is claimed is not working satisfactorily, will be taken apart next week. Mr. Kennedy and a representative of the McDougall Caledonia Iron Works Co. of Montreal will be present and the pump inspected.

Anniversary Services Were Very Successful Local Pastor Preached

(Bowmanville News.)

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Methodist Church on Sunday was one of the most successful in the history of the congregation. Good weather, splendid congregations, very excellent sermons, and inspiring music all tending to make the day a most gratifying success. Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., the popular pastor of George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough, preached at both services speaking in the morning on "Christianity, the Great Moral Uplifting Force in all History," based on the words "Everything shall live whither the river cometh" Ezekiel 47-9. He compared the river to Christianity and presented under three heads, its rise and source, direction and tendency and its life-giving effect. In the evening Rev. Mr. Peever's subject was "Canada and Her Need," based on Mark 8, 36-37, changing the word man to nation, "What shall it profit a nation if she gain the whole world and lose her own soul, or what shall a nation give in exchange for her soul?" The request of the Trustee Board for an offering of $1,000 was freely responded to and when Pastor Kenny announced that the amount had been placed on the plates the congregation rose and sang "Praise God from Whom all Blessings flow." Thus another anniversary day has passed.

150 BOYS ARE EXPECTED FOR CONFERENCE

Sessions for Three Days in George Street Methodist Church

For the purpose of providing young men leaders in Christian work to reach that type in village and city communities, a conference of young men to the number of one hundred and fifty from the Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues in the Bay of Quinte Conference is called to meet in George Street Methodist Church on December 28, 29 and 30. Prominent leaders in the Y. M. C. A. and of the Methodist churches will be speakers.

The boys will meet in George St. Methodist Church, the conference being entirely under Methodist auspices.

Expert boy leaders from all of the Bay of Quinte Conference will attend the conference, and during their sojourn in Peterborough will be billeted at the homes of Methodist adherents around the city. At the close of the conference a committment or consecration service will be held, at which boys will be encouraged to consecrate their lives to helping others lead Christian lives.

Boat Capsized and Party of Five Were Drowned

Cornwall, Dec. 11. — One of the worst drowning accidents which this community has ever known took place when five people lost their lives: Wm. Antoine, his wife and two children, of Mille Roches, and Baptiste La Fex of Cornwall, a brother of Mrs. Antoine. The party left Sheik's Island in a rowboat to cross the little river to attend a party on Barnhart Island, given by the father of William Antoine James Antoine. The night being very dark they carried a lantern, which was upset while they were in the boat, and in their attempting to right it, the boat capsized, the whole party being drowned, with the exception of John Antoine, who rowed the boat and who managed to save himself with great difficulty. Immediately boats were requisitioned to search for the bodies, and so far three have been recovered—those of Mr. and Mrs. Antoine and one daughter, aged sixteen years. Mr. Antoine was an employe of the St. Lawrence Street Mill, Mille Roches, and his entire family perished with him.

UNIFY EGYPT

Britain Expected to Annex Khedive's Territory

PARIS, Dec. 11.—It is learned on very high authority that the British Government is about to declare the unification of Egypt—in other words, annexation.

Egypt is nominally a part of the Turkish Empire, but with an hereditary monarch, the Khedive. The affairs of the country, however, have long been administered by British officials, who occupy all the more important positions in the Government.

A number of leading Soudanese Chiefs have declared that their tribes are in complete unification with Britain, and will aid in the defence of Egypt.

The Higher Schools Club has been suppressed here. It was founded some years ago for the social use of students of the higher Government schools, and has always been a cause of complaint owing to the political uses to which it has been put

NEW TRIAL NECESSARY

Jury in Grisdale Case Failed to Agree After Four Hours

IS OUT ON BAIL

After four hours' deliberation the jury, trying James Grisdale for receiving stolen goods, before Judge Huycke at the General Sessions of the Peace yesterday, returned and announced that they had disagreed and were unable to render a verdict. They withdrew about four o'clock and at six, His Honor Judge Huycke summoned them and asked if they desired lunch. The foreman answered in the affirmative and immediately the body of twelve retired again. At eight o'clock they made known the fact that they were unable to arrive at a verdict. The division was six and six. To find the accused guilty or not guilty the twelve men would have to be unanimous in their opinion. The jury was dismissed and Grisdale allowed out on bail. He will come up for trial again before the next court of competent jurisdiction. Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution and G. N. Gordon acted for Grisdale. The jury were John Stark, Herb McConkey, W. H. Down, E. C. Cassan, A. Harris, Jas. Lillico, S. McIntyre, S. O'Reilley, Henry Gainey, E. Crough and P. Lewis.

Address of Defence.

Mr. Gordon in addressing the jury on behalf of the defendant reminded that body that before they could find James Grisdale guilty they must be satisfied that he knew the goods he received were stolen. He referred to Stanley Hartley, the star witness for the crown as a convicted burglar and self-confessed liar. Mr. Gordon submitted that a boy of his class would lie and his story in the box bore the earmarks of a lie. He further submitted that Hartley's evidence should be cast aside.

The counsel made reference to the statements of Detectives Newhall and Meagher, His Worship Mayor Buller, Dean McColl, Fire Chief Howard, and Mr. H. Fife, all of which went to show that Grisdale was a good honest citizen without a breath of suspicion very being cast upon him. He also spoke of the evidence given by Miss Murphy and the prisoner's wife. These two persons are respectable citizens nevertheless the crown asked Hartley, the convicted criminal, to re-enter the box and give evidence of a contrary nature.

As to the key Mr. Gordon submitted that Hartley took it off the table as Miss Murphy had stated in her evidence. So far as evidence of others went to show, the key was never used in theft. In conclusion Mr. Gordon asked that the jury consider the evidence and bring in a verdict acquitting James Grisdale.

The Crown's Address.

Crown Attorney Hatton opened his remarks by admonishing the jury to leave all sympathy for the prisoner out, and decide purely on evidence. They should consider Grisdale as "a man," not "the man." In speaking of the evidence of Hartley Mr. Hatton reminded the jury that the boy had received his sentence and there was nothing that would lead to the belief that he would perjure himself. As to Grisdale's reputation every criminal must commit his first crime, previous to which his reputation is good.

Mr. Hatton in speaking of the key stated that upon it hinged the case. The boy swore Grisdale had given it to him and no evidence had been submitted by the defence to contradict that. Mr. Hatton submitted that on the evidence the jury should bring in a verdict of guilty. As to the degree of punishment that rested entirely with the presiding judge.

Judge Huycke's Remarks.

His Honor in speaking to the jurors reminded them that Grisdale was not charged with theft but rather with obtaining or receiving stolen goods. To return a verdict of guilty they must believe that the goods were stolen, that Grisdale received them and that he knew or should have known they were stolen.

In speaking of Hartley, Judge Huycke remarked that he regretted exceedingly to see him appear in court in the morning with the jail costume on and when he learned that he was to return to the box in the afternoon he ordered that the boy wear civilian garb. His Honor asked the jury to remember that the counsel for the defence was right in argument when he brought out that the boy's story was not entitled to the same consideration as that of the other witnesses.

Judge Huycke also spoke of the key and advised the jury to leave it out altogether. It had nothing to do with whether Grisdale accepted stolen goods or not.

His Honor congratulated James Grisdale on having such prominent men as Dean McColl, His Worship Mayor Buller and Fire Chief Howard come to court and speak of his reputation as they did. That evidence however is valuable only when there is doubt in the minds of the jurors as to whether Grisdale committed the crime or not. His honor's final remarks had to do with the course to be taken by the jury in arriving at a decision.

A splendid portrait in oils of Dr. James L. Hughes, former Chief Inspector of Public Schools in Toronto, will be unveiled in the Council Chamber of the City Hall by Mayor Hocken. The ceremony will take place on the evening of December 22.

IS CHARGED WITH COLLECTING MONEY BY FALSE PRETENCE

Prisoner is Said to Have Secured Funds for Relief Purposes

Barrie, Dec. 11.—J. E. Farewell, alias Edward Huter, alias J. Playfair, is in custody charged with collecting money under false pretenses for the Belgian Relief and Soldiers' Relief Funds. Some four weeks ago he was in trouble for the same offence at Churchill, and was let go on the consent of the crown attorney, after making restitution and paying the costs and promising to get out of the country. Since then it is alleged he posed as a brother of Mr. Chas. W. Hunter of Barrie, and that he collected various sums from people in Vespra, Oro, Medonte and Tiny. Detective Beardsley got after him and on Sunday instructed Constables Jennett and Hodgins of Craighurst to arrest him. He drove a fine hackney horse attached to a rubber-tired buggy, and the Craighurst constables trailed him to the French settlement near Thunder Bay, in Tiny, where they arrested him at midnight. He was brought before Mr. George Raikes, J. P., at Shanty Bay on Tuesday and remanded for a week. He is said to have admitted collecting $1 from Mr. Coulson, $2 from Mrs. Archibald, $2 from John Plaxton, and other sums from various people in Oro and Medonte. When he stopped at John Spence's, Craighurst, he is said to have had a considerable sum of money on him, but when arrested he had but $10 in his possession, a valise containing furs and a Persian lamb coat valued at $300. He is also said to have negotiated for the purchase of several farms.

Botha Announces Operations Aginst South-west Africa.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Gen. Louis Botha, Premier and commnader of the defence forces of the Union of South Africa, announces that the rebellion is practically at an end. Since the capture on Dec. 4 of 500 rebels and the surrender of 200 others, five additional rebel leaders and their commandos have unconditionally laid down their arms. Only one rebel leader is at large—Col. Maritz.

Gen. Botha, in making the announcement, warns the people against harboring any vengeful feeling and concludes:

"Maritz and Kemp, who were corrupted while officers of the Union Defence Force, have succeeded in escaping to German Southwest Africa, and from there, equipped with fresh arms and artillery by their German allies, will seek to invade the Union. Our next duty is to deal with this danger and to make it impossible for German Southwest Africa to again be used as the source for a base from which to threaten the peace and liberty of the Union.

"I hope and trust that the people will deal with this danger as energetically as they dealt with the internal rebellion."

A despatch from Pretoria says:—"The body of Gen. Christian Beyers, the rebel leader, who was drowned recently while attempting to escape across the Vaal river from Government troops has been found at Vlige Kraal, not far from the spot where Gen. Beyers was seen to sink."

The official announcement says that there is no doubt with regard to the identification.

THE SPORTING WORLD

OTTAWA CLUB PLACES VALUE OF $25,000 ON FRANCHISE

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—Canadian League franchises are worth money despite the fact this country is involved in war. An offer for the Ottawa franchise was made as far back as last winter. The Ottawa club places a value of $25,000 on its franchise which when it is considered a Southern League franchise was sold for over one hundred thousand dollars the other day and the owners of the N. Y. American League franchise, the most lowly of the majors turned down $400,000 cash for the controlling interest, is not an over valuation.

The Hamilton franchise, though a consistent loser, is valued at $10,000, and would be double that with a winning club. The London owners would not let their holdings go under $15,000. Peterboro is reported to have dropped $5,000 last season, yet the Petes will be right back next season. If they receive the predicted boom next season, franchises will be worth something.

COMMENT As You Like it

It appears as though there will be no Western Ontario senior O. H. A. group. Preston has passed up the idea and will play intermediate and junior.

Jack Coombs, the Philadelphia American League pitcher, was given an unconditional release by the Athletic club yesterday. Coombs was injured while pitching in a world's series game against the Giants in 1911, and since then has done very little work on the mound. Recently Connie Mack asked waivers on Coombs, Plank, and Bender. The latter two have signed with the Feds.

Inducements must be good in St. Thomas. The makeup of the Northern League team is referred to as follows by the Journal:

"At a meeting of the officers of the club and players on Tuesday night President R. J. Cottrell stated that several good men might change their place of residence before the season opened and come to this city, while twelve additional men are now residing here in addition to the members of last year's team and all the younger men who were unable to make the grade then.

"Two good men are here from Owen Sound and another is in the city from Saskatoon, while Eddie Oatman, the former Tillsonburg lad, and the great Pacific Coast League star, highly praises the work of a New Westminster man who has taken up residence in this city.

"Hamilton, the sensational goaltender, is still in the city, and this year he will have three men from his old home with him. One is a defence man and the other two will likely do the work on the sides. Each of the new men is a star at his respective position."

ORILLIA SKIPS TO GIVE LOCALS BATTLE

Orillia, Dec. 11.—At a meeting of the Orillia Curling Club held in the Council Chamber, the skips were elected for the season of 1915 as follows:

Tankard—B. Frank Stewart and J. Ed. Hinds.

District Cup — Dr. J. N. Harvie and Ed. B. Farwell.

Peterboro and Lindsay Cup—B. F. Stewart, F. Toogood, G. T. Madden, J. E. Hinds, Dr. A. H. McLean, Dr. A. R. Harvie, D. A. Macnab, J. E. G. Curran.

Newmarket O. H. H. intermediates will be managed by H. Doyle, while B. McHale will look after the juniors. The colors will be grey and blue.

The same old line of bunk about all the good amateurs who are to strengthen the professional teams is already coming out of summer storage.

William Bauer, whose home town is Waterloo, where he has played in O. H. A. junior games, will try out with University of Toronto this season.

RABBIT SPRAINS LEG DURING ACT

Maranville Meets With Mishap on Lewiston (Me.) Stage

Lewiston, Me., Dec. 11.—Rabbit Maranville, crack shortstop of the world's champions Boston Braves, sprained his right leg during a vaudeville sketch at a local theater today. While giving an imitation of stealing second base, Maranville slid on the stage floor. Physicians said it would be some time before he could get around comfortably, but added there was no probability of permanent injury.

PUCKERINGS

Picton will play in the intermediate O. H. A. series this year and not in the junior.

C. Warren is captain of this year's Wodstock College O. H. A. junior team.

There will be no hockey games at Syracuse, N. Y., this winter. The arena is closed, to be sold.

Marlett, one of the speediest players of last season's Brantford O.H.A. team, is playing with Detroit.

Waubaushene will be again found in the O. H. A. this season with a junior team. G. W. Heels is secretary.

Eddie Carpenter, the Port Arthur boy who starred in the Maritime Provinces League, has signed with Torontos, of the N. H. A.

Bowmanville O. H. A. colors this year will be yellow and black for the intermediates and red and black for the juniors.

George Arthurs, last season with Sarnia, is now in London, and should make a plase on the intermediate team of the Forest City.

FOE'S SUBMARINE RAID FAILED

German Flotilla Said to Have Attacked Dover

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Half a dozen German submarines made an attempt at 6.30 o'clock yesterday morning to enter the Admiralty harbor, according to a Dover despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., and for half an hour the batteries kept up a furious fusillade, firing at least 200 shots. It is reported that two or three of the submarines were sunk, but no confirmation of this can be obtained.

The attempt was made under cover of early morning darkness and during a heavy rainstorm. The first alarm, says the despatch, was given by the firing of the naval gun, and soon all the batteries were in action.

The Admiralty, to whom this despatch was submitted, said that it had not received confirmation of the reported attack.

According to a bulletin of The Daily Telegraph the submarines were first sighted off Dover harbor at 4.40 Thursday morning. One shot was fired by the harbor gun, and the submarine disappeared. A second attempt was made at 6.30. Several submarines attempted to enter the harbor at the eastern entrance. Several warships are in the harbor, and were undoubtedly the object of the attack. The effect of the firing by the batteries was watched by numbers of people who hurried to the seafront. Powerful searchlights were sweeping the sea from the piers and breakwaters.

STENOGRAPHER GAVE $25

As T. F. Matthews left his home for the office this morning he was handed a piece of paper by one of the maids he employs. It was her contribution to the Patriotic Fund. Mr. Matthews took it, thinking it a one-dollar bill, but looking at it a few minutes later saw it was a five-spot. Imagine his surprise.

A certain stenographer sent in $25 this morning, her little contribution to the fund.

Tea growing is a fine art. The quality of tea depends on the elevation of the land and the nature of the soil. Cheap teas are produced in vast quantities in the low lying valleys where the humidity encourages the growth of large coarse leaves. On the breezy hill-tops are found the most delicate and tender growths. Salada tea is grown entirely in hill-top gardens, hence its distinctive charm of flavor.

At the December meeting of the Women Teachers' Guild, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

We, the women teachers of Peterborough, desire to convey to Miss A. Weir, B. A., our deep regret at her departure from the city, and our —Capt. W. H. Munro, Monday. as a teacher and a citizen.

We feel that her removal from our midst is an irreparable loss to our organization.

FOE EVACUATES WEST BANK OF YSER CANAL

Field Batteries are Silenced and Howitzers Are Destroyed — Infantry Fighting Goes Against the Germans

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 12. — The official bulletin this afternoon says: "The enemy has completed the evacuation of the west bank of the Yser canal and we occupy this bank. At several points our heavy artillery silenced field batteries of the Germans. At a point northeast of Vailly, one of their batteries of howitzers was completely destroyed.

"In the region of Perthes there have been artillery engagemnts and some infantry fighting which resulted advantageously to us.

"Our artillery demolished at Deuxnouds to the west of Vigneulles-les-Hattonchattel two batteries of the enemy, one composed of guns of large calibre and the other used for firing upon aviators.

"In this same region we have blown up a blockhouse and destroyed several trenches."

GERMAN PLAN FOR POLAND A FAILURE.

PARIS, Dec. 12. — The Matin's Petrograd correspondent says the German plain in Poland which was to turn both Russian wings simultaneously has completely failed and the Germans are reduced to bloody and useless attacks on the Russian front.

The Matin says that Servia's great victory over the Austrians was largely due to the spirit infused into the Servian soldiers by King Peter, who rode through the ranks everywhere and was greeted by the wildest enthusiasm. Addressing the troops he said: "Soldiers, heroes, your old king has come to die with you for the fatherland. Let us drive out the enemy."

TURKS CARRY OFF BRITISH COUNSUL AND TURKEY IS ASKED TO EXPLAIN

ROME, Dec. 12. — Grave complications are threatened for Turkey over the incident at Hodieda on the Red Sea, where Turks dragged British Consul Richardson from the Italian Consulate and carried him off.

The United States will demand an explanation from Turkey for this violence offered to a British subject, and Italy will inquire about the violation of her consulate.

PHOTOGRAPHS AS EVIDENCE OF BRUTALITIES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12. — A cable from Rome says the Pope has received from Louvain authenticated photographs illustrating brutalities inflicted on Belgians by German soldiers, and also the destruction done to churches and public buildings. The Pope has also received the rector of a Belgian college, who was captured by Germans, stripped and ill-treated. The Pope was greatly shocked and declared that such outrages must cease.

ATTACKS ON FIRTH OF FORTH, TWO SUBMARINES ARE REPORTED SUNK

LONDON, Dec. 12. — A Daily Mail's Edinburgh despatch says two submarine attacks were made on the Firth of Forth on Wednesday morning and both were repulsed. Two German submarines were destroyed.

The Admiralty does not confirm this story. The important naval base of Rosyth, just above the great Forth bridge, where no doubt a large British fleet is now assembled, would be the natural object of attack.

BARRACKS DESTROYED BY FIRE.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 12. — The great Gottorp barracks, situated on an island west of Kiel, has been destroyed by fire, the origin of which is being kept secret.

DRESDEN ON THE COAST OF PATAGONIA.

LONDON, Dec. 12. — A despatch to the Evening News from Valparaiso, Chili, says it is reported that the German cruiser Dresden has taken refuge in an inlet on the coast of Patagonia.

LONDON, Dec. 12. — A despatch from Constantinople via Berlin says a Turkish fleet yesterday bombarded the environs of Batum, a Russian seaport on the western coast of the Black Sea.

One hundred Russians were killed and a number wounded.

IMMIGRATION OFFICE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

Never was there such efforts put forth to give work to all and accommodate those needing help.. Last week there was a report on the large number of 81 placed by the City Council agency.

Messrs. Might and Taylor, in the immigration office, say that although there are no immigrants coming now, there have been a number of good men apply. Since a date early in the Fall they have received over 112 applications, and the demand has been such, especially from the farms, that they have not over ten unemployed on the list. Some of them must have gone away, as they have been sent for and have not shown up.

CONGRATULATIONS

W. C. Rean, who came from headquarters to assist the Patriotic Fund campaign, received the following wire this morning:

Congratulations upon the success of the Peterborough campaign.

Canadian Patriotic Fund.

SAME TAX RATE IS POSSIBLE

Increase in Assessment Will Care for $10,000 Donation

$25,000 TO SPARE

It will not be necessary to add an extra mill to the tax rate of next year to overcome the donation of ten thousand dollars by the city to the Peterborough Patriotic Fund. When the deputation waited on the Council the other evening it was pointed out that a donation of $10,000 would call for an extra mill on next year's rate, but the Review learned today from City Treasurer F. Adams that on account of the increase in assessment of $1,326,541, it will be possible to have the same rate as for this year (26 mills) and have $25,000 extra money for other purposes after giving $10,000 to the fund. Without the donation being taken out, the extra amount coming to the city treasury would be about $35,000.

In view of the increase in assessment, to which the retail merchants unsuccessfully objected, it will be quite possible to lower the rate of next year down to 25 mills and have an extra amount of $33,000. From this it would be possible to grant $10,000 and still have $23,000 for other purposes.

STARVATION IS IN SIGHT

West Flanders Citizens Appeal on Behalf of Suffering Towns

LONDON, Dec. 12.—"If somebody does not come to our aid, God knows what will become of us," writes two leading residents of Blankenberghe, West Flanders, in a pathetic appeal they presented yesterday to the representative at Rotterdam of the American commission for relief in Belgium.

These men were deputed to seek help on behalf of Heyst, Wenduyne and several other communities as well as Blankenberghe, in all of which they say "the situation is so grave that if in the near future food does not arrive they will be plunged in blackest famine."

The plight of these places is particularly hard because they are cut off from all communication with the rest of Belgium—even with Bruges, capital of the province in which they are situated.

TEST RUNS BY CHEMICAL ENGINE

No Fires But Plenty of Excitement

There was no fire when the brigade dashed across into East City this afternoon. It was a test to Auburn to try out the motor chemical engine which has been in the city for two or three days and which Chief Howard is giving a thorough trial before it is taken back to Toronto. The Chief would like very much to keep the engine right in Peterborough as he is delighted with the efficient manner in which it operates and the speed with which a fire can be reached and quickly extinguished. Yesterday afternoon he gave some of the aldermen an opportunity to see how quickly a blaze could be extinguished, when he started a fire of old rubbish in the incinerator building. The chemicals worked perfectly and inside of a minute it was a smouldering mass where previously there had been a fiercely burning heap. To test the efficiency of the engine and chemicals a fire must be burning in the interior of a building where the gases will not escape. The chief and those aldermen who witnessed the trial yesterday were greatly pleased with it.

If one were added to the equipment of the local fire hall it would aid in bringing down the rates at fire insurance according to one prominent citizen who witnessed the demonstration.

Made Money for Patriotic Purposes by Concert at Bridgenorth

ALSO KNITTING SOCKS

The ladies of Bridgenorth arranged for an excellent concert at Bridgenorth on Thursday night, and the proceeds of $27.40 will go to swell the patriotic fund. The concert was held under the auspices of the Bridgenorth Patriotic Society, the program being made up of instrumental and vocal music, recitations, readings, and choruses. Mr. J. A. Jobe was chairman, and he did not forget to refer to the excellent work being done by the ladies. Addresses were given by the president of the society, Mr. R. N. Scott, and Rev. Mr. Ireland.

To date, the ladies have collected $102.15. Their work also includes knitting supplies for the soldiers and the needy. Already fifty pairs of socks have been made, and before long it is expected they will have knitted 100 pairs.

Trent Canal Employes.

The employes of the Trent Canal, engineering and maintenance gave one day's pay to the Patriotic Fund, and forwarded the amount of $467.10 to Ottawa. This amount is exclusive of individual subscriptions made to the local fund.

ALMOST $60,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND

Grand Total To date is $59.092,56 and There Are Other Subscriptions Yet to Come --- Enthusiastic Scenes Marked the Closing Moments of Campaign

AFTER ALL, it was not such a long way to the goal. The campaign is over, and latest report gives a total of $59,092.56 for the Patriotic Fund. It is quite probable some subscriptions to be received will substantially increase the amount. Citizens will congratulate the usiness men and officials of the campaign and the workers will extend to the public appreciation of the generous responses.

The finale at the committee rooms will be remembered by the campaigners, when the first trip to the circus will have been forgotten. It looked like a big night, and the probabilities proved to be correct. School boys on the campus, after the last examination, could not be more frisky. It was the elation that comes as a reward for work well done.

Mr. Dan O'Connell, chairman of the campaign organization, remained at the helm when the brethren in arms gathered for the final sprint. They had supper as usual, and they paid up as usual. A collection paid for every item on the tables. It was not a free lunch counter in any sense. Then there were a number of happy speeches, yells and wild hurrahs. Every one felt in high spirits in their hour of triumph. Praise was bestowed on worthy heads and hands, and when it was all over, one and all admitted that the results of the past three days were worth all the efforts they had called forth.

They "put one over" Mr. O'Connell, and it happened something like this: Rev. James Rollins and Rev. J. R. Webb drifted into F. L. Roy's studio yesterday, and in the course of the conversation with Mr. Roy, reference was made to the fund. The vision of the parsons rested on a spinning wheel, and as Mr. Roy was very much alive, he guessed correctly, but he explained that the article was an important item in his studio. The visitors feasted their eyes on the richly-adorned walls, and finally the Baptist parson asked Mr. Roy if he had a picture of Dan O'Connell. Sure he had, and the picture made its appearance. It was suggested that the picture should be framed, and framed it was, the whole being given to the callers.

Later the plot was hatched, whereby bidding for the picture would be brisk. But it was a little too brisk, and Rev. James Rollins, with his natural fear for policemen, got cold feet at the last moment and loudly acclaimed that there must be no suspicion of lottery, so he dismounted from the block and, amid the cheers of the crowd, presented the picture to Mr. O'Connell, who made a graceful acknowledgment.

F. H. Dobbin, chairman of the publicity committee, who did a lot of most excellent work, was presented with a mahogany tray, the gift coming from the members of the committee.

Several votes of thanks were extended, the organizer, W. C. Rean, from headquarters, not being forgotten.

The members of the committees and the amounts turned in are as follows:—

Other contributions—From old list, $5,000; City of Peterborough, $10,000; Finance Committee, $1,910.40. Grand total, $59,092.56.

Yes, there was considerable of a fuss. The concluding gathering of the Patriotic Fund workers was no solemn affair. Not much. The men who had pushed and pulled, raced around the streets and walked all over the city and combed the suburbs with a fairly fine comb were not, when the goal had been reached disposed to be quiet. It was felt that the fund had been realized and so every one felt good. Supper was served in a general feeling of glee.

The team captains reported the sums as realized from the day's work. There were many surprises and many fine contributions. Among these of the largest were those of Mr. W. G. Morrow for $1,000, the Toronto Loan and Savings Co., of $1,000 in addition to the amount already subscribed. R. Hall & Son, $150. Perkins, Ince Co., $200, Judge Huycke $300, G. W. Hatton $500, W. M. Irwin $500. Then followed a number, lesser in amount but very welcome including J. W. Bennet, Dr. Frederick, E. H. D. Hall, G. W. Green, Mayor Buller, W. G. Ferguson, H. G. Walker, W. Langford, and Moore, Ruth & Austin, all of whom handed in $100 each. W. Langford, Jr., supplemented the subscription of his father with an additional $50. R. Fair gave $100. The Quaker Oats Co. wired from Chicago a cool $1000. Mr. R. M. Waddell sent his check for $2,500.

Then again many of the employes of the local factories who had not finished their contributions as bodies of employes reported. $50 from Turnbull employes and a kind friend in that fine store added $37.50, bringing the total for this place up to $87.50. The Street Railway men gave $26.48. Peterborough Masonic Lodge sent in $50; this in addition to a contribution of several hundreds of dollars made to the Belgium relief fund a week or so ago. The new Masonic Lodge, Prince Arthur added $25, just to be in the swim. The Brinton Carpet Co. employes, $65.75, and the Quaker Oats employes the fine sum of $365. The Auburn Mills, finished up the fund contribution in several departments and handed in $43.75 additional to the first amount.

Here are the returns from the field teams as given in as the result of Friday afternoon's work:—

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Not by the Publicity Committee

Everybody did something. Everybody did their best, but there is a best that excells all forms of the best and that is Frank Dobbin's best. That Frank Dobbin did a wonderful work and the way he did it will be told by the committee men to their children's children. Tact, ability, industry, wit and humor, encyclopedic knowledge of men and affairs were in evidence twenty-four hours a day. The editorials, advertisements, press notes and posters were written up and distributed with lightning speed. In the world there are many nations but the conclusion of the committee in charge of the raising of the Patriotic Fund unanimously was that among the many nations there is only one Frank Dobbin and he is owned by Peterborough. Twenty-four hours a day is considered good work in almost any well run establishment, but for the last ten days the enterprising gentleman to whom this refers crowded at least twenty-eight hours work into every twenty-four hours. Finally brethren in the words of our mutual friend let us once more salute Frank Dobbin. All hail. All hail.

FOURTEEN FEET OF GREETINGS

Six Hundred Names on Letter for Peterboro Soldiers

With a beautiful message on it, followed by six hundred feminine names, the letter containing the greetings from the women of Peterborough to the boys from this city now at Salisbury Plain, was sent away yesterday and will reach them in time for Christmas.

The letter, with the signatures upon it, was fourteen feet in length, and it will keep the boys busy picking out the names of people whom they know whose signatures appear upon it. It was addressed to Major Bennett.

The message was as follows, prepared by Mr. Frank Dobbin:

To the officers and men from Peterborough on Salisbury Plain,
England.

We, your mothers, wives, sisters, sweethearts and lady friends at home, wish to tell you how we will miss you all from your accustomed place at the home fireside at this joyous season and to wish you one and all

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

We wish to tell you also how we appreciate the noble sacrifice you are making in offering your lives (if need be) in order to defend our glorious Empire, and Canada, our dear, native land, from the iron hand of the Oppressor, that we may continue to be a free and independent people.

We fear not that you will do your part nobly in defending and protecting not only our own Empire, but also the less powerful nations — of whom poor Belgium has been ravished and bled in a most brutal and inhuman manner—so that the world will know that our Empire stands for honour, for her treaties, for freedom, and against the oppression of the weaker nations.

We have noted that our noble King, our heroic Kitchener and "dear old Bobs," after reviewing you, have expressed such high opinions of you, and we are proud of you .

Your actions cannot fail to stimulate others to copy your example. Reinforce all your effort to support and defend to the end, the cause for which the mother country has drawn the sword, and appealed to you with no unhesitatingly confidence in your loyalty and patriotism. It is a good thing to be a Canadian and a proud thing to be one of the soldiers of the King and of the Empire.

We hear that you will soon be called to "the firing line' and you may be sure that our hopes and prayers will be that you may all come back, but if some should fall by the way, we know it will be in doing their duty and their names will be forever written in our hearts and on the honour roll of this city.

SPEEDERS ARE FINED.

Two motorists, Ozias De La Plants and Gerald Conroy, were given a gentle lesson this morning that they must not recklessly drive their cars or exceed the speed limit, thereby endangering life. Each paid a $10 fine this morning in police court.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1914

WE KNEW PETERBOROUGH COULD DO IT.

THE CAMPAIGN for Peterborough's Patriotic Fund has closed gloriously. While some were pounding away at the slogan, twenty thousand dollars, we felt that fifty thousand would not be too high a mark, and said so, but, while some were inclined to regard lightly Mr. Waddell's offer of $2,500 if fifty thousand were the fund, yet his offer was the first tangible evidence of what would be done if a proper objective were set. Mr. Warburton emphasized the same thought when he addressed the citizens here. By setting a respectable mark, this city has not only reached it, but surpassed it, so that in all probability, when everything is settled, the Patriotic Fund will total sixty thousand dollars. That sum is a very satisfactory one for this city, situated less favorably, as it is, than places like Kingston and Brantford, for raising money.

To those in charge, too much praise cannot be given. While in some respects the lists were not handled as well as they might have been, yet everybody did good work, as is attested by the splendid total realized. In operating such an organization of fully one hundred men, it would only be natural that some minor hitches should occur, but these did not impair the general momentum of the organization. Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. D. O'Connell took a leading part, but to mention names would lengthen this article unduly. Besides, the generous gifts of a great many citizens are worthy of mention. Mr. Waddell, Mr. James Kendry, the Misses Dickson, Mr. Lundy, Mr. Ackerman, are a few among a great many that will have to be left to the news columns to chronicle. The main points are that a handsome fund has been subscribed, that citizens of both ample and slender means were unsparing in time and money. The sacrifice made will be the best reward for the giving, and it should not be forgotten that the object of the fund, provision for those who are fighting our battles on the plains of France and Germany, is amply assured.

BOTHA'S SERVICE TO THE EMPIRE.

VERY ENCOURAGING is the news coming from South Africa. General Botha announces that the rebels are completely defeated, that the British dominion there is practically free of insurrection. There is still danger of invasion from German South West Africa, where the rebel leaders Maritz and Kemp have escaped. General Botha announces that he will deal with this problem so that no danger will arise in that quarter.

General Botha has done, by his vigorous work, a great service to the Empire. Had he cast in his lot with Germany, all the expenditure of men and of money in the Boer war would likely have gone for naught. The moral effect of disintegration in the Union of South Africa on countries like India and Egypt, might have been great and far-reaching. It might have meant, in its indirect influence, the triumph of German arms and the break-up of the British Empire.

As it is, the revolt will have a beneficent effect on the South African Dominion. It will consolidate it against a common enemy, weed out the seditious and disloyal, and prove the stability and strength of the British system of colonial government.

The occasion was, for Botha, one of supreme importance. It was no less so to Germany, yet Botha saved the day for Britain, and did it without hampering the Mother Country. That is a signal service to the Empire, and will not go without its just reward.

PETERBOROUGH'S HOME GUARD.

THE HOME GUARD of Peterborough is fast becoming a splendid organization. The march-out the other evening was an inspiration to the citizens and to all who took part. The marching was good, and the numbers showed the enthusiasm of the citizens to form an efficient military organization that would be of use in time of need. The arrival of rifles, and the instruction and practice in handling a weapon of war, gives them a training that is valuable, in view of the scientific methods of waging war at the present time. It is hoped that they will not be called upon to use their rifles in deadly earnest, but the main point is that if the need arises, as it may arise, there will be a large, strong, efficient body of citizen soldiers in this city with some preparation for national defence.

WE HAVE RECEIVED a handsome pamphlet, printed in colours, that is descriptive of the good points of the city of Miami, Florida. The pamphlet was sent out by the Board of Trade of that place, and does the city much credit. The population is said to be about 15,000, yet it has many fine hotels, apartment houses, and public buildings that would do credit to a larger place. While there are apparently few industries, and while it obviously flourishes as a winter resort, yet it shows what can be done to develop a city that desires to grow.

BRITISH AGREEMENT WITH PORTUGAL.

AN ARBITRATION TREATY between Great Britain and Portugal has been signed in London. The treaty, which is for a period of five years, is of special significance at the present moment, as is emphasized in the preamble in the following words:

"Being desirous of confirming by a further solemn agreement the friendship alliance which happily has subsisted for so long a period between them, and of eliminating so far as is possible from their relations everything which might impair or weaken that friendship, the alliance has agreed to the submission of questions in dispute in the terms of the articles of this treaty."

This agreement illustrates the difference between Britain and Germany. Even while at war, Britain is taking measures to prevent future wars. Germany's policy is to increase army and navy until insupportable unless a big war gives it something to do. Britain is endeavouring to minimize the adoption of such a policy in future by any nation.

THE "LIFE" OF A BIG GUN.

WHAT IS THE LIFE of the big guns that are playing so great a part in this war? A big battleship gun is used up after firing a hundred rounds. If each shell started the moment the one before had left the muzzle the gun would last only three seconds! After a hundred rounds the rifling of the core or lining of the gun is destroyed by the hot gases from the explosive, not, as one might suppose, by the friction of the shell. As to the life of the guns used in hand warfare, information is not so easy to get, but it must (remarks a correspondent) be much longer than that of the naval guns, considering the amazing rate of fire and the duration of the bombardments.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

H. B. COWAN, though on the wrong side of politics, deserves a word of commendation for bidding twenty dollars for a week's work donated to the Patriotic Fund by Mr. A. O. Kidd. When a man is bound to do what he can, he does it, and both gentlemen are to be highly commended, the former for the high value he placed on the gift, and the latter for the nature of the donation. By auctioning the week's work, Mr. Kidd's donation amounts thus to twenty dollars.

DID YOU NOTICE that the admiral of the British South Atlantic fleet was Sturdee?

A STURDEE old sailor was he, says the poet.

Sir Robert Borden's Speech in Toronto.

(Canadian Courier.)

One palpable hit Sir Robert made which reflects credit upon his national spirit. He quoted Bernhardi's comment upon the military forces of the over-seas Dominions. Bernhardi has said that the British over-seas forces would be too busy keeping order and looking after themselves to be able or willing to send any soldiers to assist Britain in a European struggle. Sir Robert sarcastically pointed out that he thought, when over-seas British forces to the tune of a quarter of a million of fighting men, were gathered upon the battlefield of Europe that the Emperor of Germany would believe Bernhardi was wrong and that the colonial forces were not so negligible as had been thought.

This sally seemed to please Sir Robert mightily, and also his audience. Sir Robert has been constant in his belief in the ability and fidelity of the people in the outlying portions of the Britannic Alliance, and he was amply justified in his manifest pride as an imperialist that the Hon's whelps were making good his highest hopes and ambitions.

Woman's Part in the Peace Councils.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

An eminent Englishwoman, conspicuous for her leadership in behalf of her sisters' and her own political rights, and now lecturing in the United States, has voiced an opinion that, if reiterated often and in high places, and if given the support of women everywhere, might make memorable the next conference of the nations of the world held to discuss international rules of conduct. Her contention is that because woman is so deeply concerned with war, she must hereafter claim the right to sit in the councils of those that endeavour to substitute judicial and arbitral for military methods in settling disputes between nations. That is to say, she argues for a woman delegate to the next Hague convention.

To Prevent Typhoid.

(Montreal Gazette.)

Dr. Sir William Osler, speaking of deaths in war from wounds and from disease, pointed out the chief factors in making the latter the more numerous, and added that typhoid fever, the most serious of the diseases that attacked a soldier in the field, could be prevented by vaccination. There has been criticism in Canada of the Valcartier Camp requirement that enlisted men should be vaccinated with the purpose of insuring them against the dread disease. Dr. Osler's statement will be a ready defence against the accusers.

A National Evil.

(Guelph Herald.)

Quite an uproar was raised in Hamilton because a school teacher put some soap on a child's lips in pretence of washing out its mouth after the utterance of vile language. Had she gone a step further and added a good thrashing to the clean-up the punishment would not have be too severe. The use of bad language cannot be too severely dealt with; it has become a national evil.

The Nickel Situation.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The Sudbury Mining News says that the way the matter of the export of nickel from Canada to Germany can be best handled is to require that nickel matte shall be refined in Canada, instead of allowing it to go to New Jersey. Having control of the finished product, Canada could then supervise its disposal. It would also be a triumph for the Made-in-Canada idea.

Saturday Evening Post's Fake Interview.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

We are glad to learn from Lord Kitchener that he remains the sort of man that we had supposed him to be, and not the sort of man revealed in the Cobb interview.

Not Accustomed to Surrender.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The German chancellor tries to make out that Belgium surrendered her neutrality to Britain. The chancellor should know by this time that Belgium doesn't surrender anything.

Cheap.

(Chicago News.)

It will cost Holland $80,000,000 to keep the peace, but in view of what happened to its next-door neighbor, the price seems small.

SOME GERMAN SUPERSTITIONS

Most of the Kaiser's Soldiers Carry Lucky Charms in Battle.

Superstitions akin to those which have been obsolete among the British peasantry for nearly a century are at this day rife among the uniformed sons of "Kultur." There is hardly a German soldier in the ranks who does not carry some sort of charm which he believes will make him immune from hurt.

The superstitions vary. The soldiers from Würtemberg have next the skin a linen bag containing the pollen of ferns, which is to render the wearer invulnerable.

In Bavaria they have a supernatural surgery which heals wounds in this way. Before going into action the soldier cuts a little hole in a birch tree, in which he places a few drops of blood from a self-inflicted wound, and his wounds heal simultaneously with the closing up of the bark of the tree.

The Tyrolese soldiers in the Austrian army wear, sewn into their underclothing, the wings of bats.

Recruiting in Napoleon's Time

Recruiting in the great war which ended in the fall of Napoleon was a vastly different matter from that which prevails to-day. Take the Militia Act of 1803, for instance. In each subdivision of a country a list was made of all men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, classified into (a) those under thirty and without children; (b) over that age; (c) men with no children under fourteen; (d) men with only one child under fourteen; (e) all others.

If the men required equalled the number in the first or second, or any set of consecutive classes, they were taken. If not, all the names were put in a bag and drawn until the requisite number was obtained. Any balloted man could purchase exemption for five years on paying a fine of $50, raised to $75 in 1803, the money being paid for a substitute. The men paying fines were exempted from the second ballot, and the money was devoted to enabling the men in the second ballot to obtain substitutes. On this vicious principle the only man really obliged to serve was the poor man drawn in the first ballot.

A Soldier's Self-sacrifice

The affectionate comradeship which exists between British soldiers is strikingly illustrated by an incident related by a sergeant of the Liverpool Regiment, who tells how one night in the trenches a man of the West Yorkshire Regiment took off his coat and wrapped it around a wounded chum who had to lie there until the ambulance took him away. "All that night the game 'Tyke' stood in the trenches in his shirt-sleeves," said the sergeant, "with water up to his waist and the temperature near to freezing point quietly returning the German fire. In the morning he would only own to 'a bit of a chill that a cup of tea and a smoke would soon put right,' but I wasn't surprised to learn that he had to be sent down to the base with pneumonia that afternoon."

PRO-GERMAN LITERATURE

Every evidence goes to show that consistent vigilance on the part of the authorities will be required while the present war lasts to keep the German special pleaders who are so busily at work in the United States from finding in this country a profitable field for their labors. So insidiously is this pro-German campaign conducted with such energy and lavish display of money, that the public mind in this country is liable to become more or less poisoned against the British cause as a result.

These pro-German and anti-British articles, such as are circulated by these German special pleaders, do not appear in any publication of authority or importance in the United States. Hearst remains, in this time of war, the only American publisher of wide interests who has printed articles offensive to Britons. Seditious matter should not be circulated in Canada in time of war. When the justice of Britain's cause is so widely admitted there is a particular argument against the practice. If there are sections of the Canadian public served by seditious matter at this time they should be willing to give it up as a courtesy to the nation in which they are making their living and enjoying the privileges of freedom and peace. The temper of the Canadian people will be aroused to a dangerous extent against foreigners of inimical nationalities unless the pro-German propaganda stops at the borders of Canada. —Montreal Daily Mail.

Why We Fight

A reader of the Herald asks, if it is not queer that the peoples of India, Australia, Canada and South Africa are fighting for England and the English.

They are not fighting for England or the English. They are fighting for the British Empire, in which they feel they have just as deep an interest as the English have.

Of the significant developments of this great war this is by no means the least. If Canadians, Australians, Africans and Indians regarded themselves as conquered by or mere appendages to England they would not be fighting at all.—New York Herald.

The Dauntless Three

It was for a brave feat that three men of L Battery, Royal Horse Artillery Battery Sergt.-Major Darrell, Gunner Darbyshire, and Driver Osborne—were recommended for the Victoria Cross. When their battery was surprised near Compiègne by a strong force of Germans with ten field-guns and two Maxims, only three of the British guns could be brought to bear on the enemy, and two of these were silenced after some of the German guns had been put out of action. The last gun was heroically served by the remaining few officers and men of the battery, who were killed or seriously wounded one by one, until only Darrell, Darbyshire, and Osborne were left. Although wounded, these three men continued to fire the one remaining gun until all but one of the German guns had been silenced. When they were relieved it was found that the German gunners had suffered terrible losses and abandoned all their guns.

Bernard Shaw as a Patriot

Bernard Shaw has written for our neighbor the "Times" an elaborate three-page thesis to maintain:

1. That Great Britain was abundantly justified in making war against Germany.

2. That the explanation given by the British Government for making war against Germany was stupid, hypocritical, mendacious and disgraceful.

3. That he alone is capable of interpreting the moral purpose of the British people in undertaking this necessary work of civilization.

4. That the reason the British Government's justification of the war is so inadequate is because no British Government is ever so clever as Bernard Shaw.

5. That even in the midst of the most horrible calamity known to human history it pays to advertize.

Various patriots have various ways of serving their country. Some go to the firing-line to be shot and others stay at home to be a source of innocent merriment to the survivors.—New York World.

A STAGECOACH ROMANCE

It Contrasted with Travel in These Latter Days

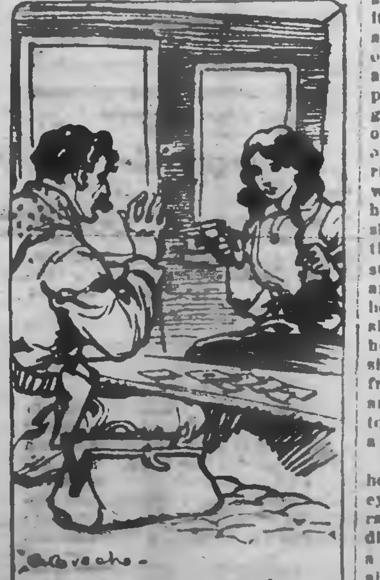
By THOMAS R. DAWN

A gentleman riding in a luxurious parlor car on the Central Pacific railroad read a novel which appeared to bore him, closed it, yawned, cast a glance through the window, yawned again and was about to settle himself for a nap when a white bearded septuagenarian in the chair next to him said:

"Dull traveling nowadays, isn't it?"

The bored man looked at the other as much as to say, "I have no acquaintance with you, sir, and I don't wish any." Then he grunted an assent and was settling himself further for slumber when the old man continued:

"When I traveled as a youngster there was something to keep a fellow awake. At ten years of age I went from Pittsburgh across the Allegheny mountains, part way by stage, part way by canal and the rest on a snorting steamboat on a river. On that canalboat there wasn't any porcelain bowl to wash up as there is on this car. There were only a tin wash basin and a piece of bar soap, with a roller towel to wipe on. But there was something better than there is here.



"SHE HAD ME COVERED."

There were two of the most eminent lecturers in the United States aboard, and one evening they both gave the passengers a talk."

The man who was obliged to take all this made a virtue of necessity and listened.

"I've crossed the prairies of Illinois in a stagecoach with a party the members of which had never seen one another before starting and before the end of the trip became friends for life. One man who had a stentorian voice said he never felt he had room enough to sing except when he was on what was then called the grand prairie of Illinois. We turned in, sitting straight up as we were, about 10 o'clock and were jarred from side to side and jolted up and down all night. But after the first night we slept well and were ready to crack jokes at one another in the morning. There were two matrimonial matches made on that trip. Curious, wasn't it? The parties had no acquaintance before."

A rough looking man not quite so old, sitting in a seat opposite, had been listening to this contrast between the old and new methods of travel and at this point spoke up:

"Mebbe you gents would like to hear one of them stagecoach romances."

The old man acquiesced. The other passenger looked as if he would like to call the conductor and have both men put off the train as nuisances.

"I don't look like a man as has had a romance, do I?" the third party went on. "I was better lookin' before a feller went gunnin' for me in the Alhambra gamblin' saloon at Cheyenne in 1868 and give me the scar. You talk about travelin' furder east in the forties and fifties. You didn't hev no sich places to stop as Cheyenne when it was the terminal of the U. P. And as for your canalboats, with lecturers on 'em, they couldn't 'a' been as lively as a stagecoach with road agents stoppin' the way and linin' up the passengers for their valuables. I was sittin' on the box with the driver of a coach one day—the inside was empty—when right out on the plain, where there wa'n't anything but cactus and gopher holes—not a tree or even a shrub to shade her—we come up with the purtiest gal I ever see walkin' in the hot sun. She looked awful tired and hot, and I suggested to the driver to take her up. He said if she wanted to ride she'd have to pay her fare. I asked her why she was walkin', and she said she hadn't no money; she'd run away from home on account of a stepmother and was tryin' to get to some civilized town where she could locate and make a livin'.

"The upshot of it was I agreed to pay her fare, and she got inside. The money wa'n't nothin' to me, seein' I'd just raked in some $3,000 at faro, and I didn't mind a little sum like that when a purty gal was concerned. The tears almost come into her eyes when she thanked me for doin' of it, and I wished I had some excuse to give her a lot more.

"Waal, after a spell I climbed down and got inside the coach. The old coachin' days in the east back in the forties might 'a' been sociable, but I reckon a feller seldom had a coach all to hisself with a purty gal. And mebbe there wa'n't nothin' to start a love affair on one o' them Illinois or Allegheny mounting rides. In my case there was a mighty big favor to start one. A gal as has jist been saved from walkin' on an alkali plain in the hot sun and transferred to the leather seat of a stagecoach is in a mighty good condition to be made love to by the man as done it.

"She told the pitifulest story of that stepmother o' hers I ever heered. It almost made me weep. I couldn't understand how the gal could 'a' stood it, or, rather, would 'a' stood it, seein' that she wa'n't no measly, bony little thing, but a real strappin', strong girl.

"Suddint it occurred to me that this was a good chance for me to reform and settle down. I tole the girl about myself and offered if she'd marry a galoot I'd quit gamblin', put the money I had in my pocket into stockin' a store and we'd be as happy as two turtledoves. She said it was awful suddint, but seein' she didn't know what on airth she was goin' to do—here she covered her face with her handkerchief and blubbered—she reckoned she'd better take up with me even if I was a stranger. I kissed her and promised to make her a good husband. Then she cried a leetle more and said such a generous man deserved a wife that would be kind to him and she'd devote the hull of her life to me.

"There's somepin I heered about 'a rulin' passion,' and I reckon I had one on 'em in them days. I got tired o' lovemakin' after awhile, jist as some married pursons want to come home and stop loafin' before the honeymoon has come to an end. Happenin' to put my hand in my coat pocket, I felt a pack of keerds and, takin' 'em out, asked the gal if she knowed any game. She said she'd never seen any keerds before. I allowed I'd teach her a leetle poker, and, she sittin' on the back seat and I on the front, we made a table o' the middle one. I loaned her some money to begin on.

"She was so stupid about it and played so bad, bettin' when she hadn't nothin' and layin' down a full hand, that I soon won all I'd lent her. She said if I'd try it ag'in she thort she could do better, so I loaned her some more money, and we went on with the game. This time she did better, although she was mighty stupid.

"'How much is one king wo'th?' she asked.

"'Nothin',' I answered.

"'Two kings?'

"'Not very much.'

"'Five kings?'

"'There ain't no sich thing.'

"'Well,' she said, 'I'm goin' to bluff this time.'

"I thort I'd show her that it didn't pay to tell she was goin' to bluff, and, havin' three aces, I went for her. After she'd exhausted what I'd loaned her she borryed some more and raised me and kep' borryin' and raisin' till there was a big pot on the table. When I thort I'd done enough to give her a good lesson I called her.

"D'ye know, that gal held four kings and cleaned me outen $400. I larfed and thort I'd show her how easy it would be to win it all back, and I started in. In an hour she had my pile in her bag.

"'My dear,' I said, 'seein' I tuck you into this yere coach out o' the broilin' sun and paid yer fare and considerin' that I lent you the fust stake, I reckon you'll not refuse to lend me somepin to start in with to get revenge?'

"'No,' she said, 'I better not. Seein' you're goin' to be my husband and I've got to reform you, I'd better hold on to any cash that comes into my hands. Your passion for gamblin' mought git the better o' yer in spite o' all yer good resolutions.'

"I don't like to spile yer idee o' this yer stagecoach romance by tellin' the rest o' it, 'cause it degenerated from a love affair to a draw, not a draw in a game o' poker, but a draw after a game o' poker, the difference bein' that the article drawed wasn't a keerd, but a weepon. I was so gol darned disgusted with the gal that I tole her I wouldn't trouble her to keep my cash as my sweetheart or my wife nuther and she could jist turn over the winnin's.

"She answered that the days when wimmen knuckled down to men was over and she proposed to stand for her rights. With that she tuk her hand from under a jacket she wore, and before I could say Jack Robinson she had me covered.

"'Up with yer hands, y' measly galoot,' she hollered, 'or I'll bore a hole through that stupid skull o' yours.'

"Somehow her voice didn't sound so soft as before—fact is, it sounded like a man's.

"'Who be you, anyway?' I asked.

"'Jimmie the Kid!'

"My brain become illuminated suddint. Jimmie the Kid was a desperado with a face and voice as soft as a gal's. He had lots o' ways o' doin' strangers, but his favorite one was the gal racket. I knowed that my money was gone and if I give the feller any sas I'd go up too.

"'I reckon you kin walk the rest o' the way,' he said. 'Walkin' was good enough fer me, and it's good enough fer my husband that is to be. Seein' the wimmen is gettin' the upper hand, I've calculated to be one of 'em myself.'

"Openin' the door, he told me to git, and I got."

Devotion.

"A woman's devotion is a wonderful thing," said the sentimentalist.

"No doubt of it," replied Mr. Meekton. "Where Henrietta places her affections her admiration is unquestioning. The only reason she objects to muzzling our bulldog is that she thinks the muzzle will spoil his facial expression."—Washington Star.

Mme. Vandervelde, Who Asks Aid For Homeless Belgians.

MME. LALLA VANDERVELDE.

"It came to me quite suddenly, this plan to get help for my people. One moment I had not thought of it; the next I knew it was the right thing, the only thing that I could do."

That is the way Mme. Lalla Vandervelde, wife of the Belgian minister of state, describes the impulse that led her to come to America to ask the people of this country for $1,000,000 with which to succor the homeless mothers and little children of that war stricken land.

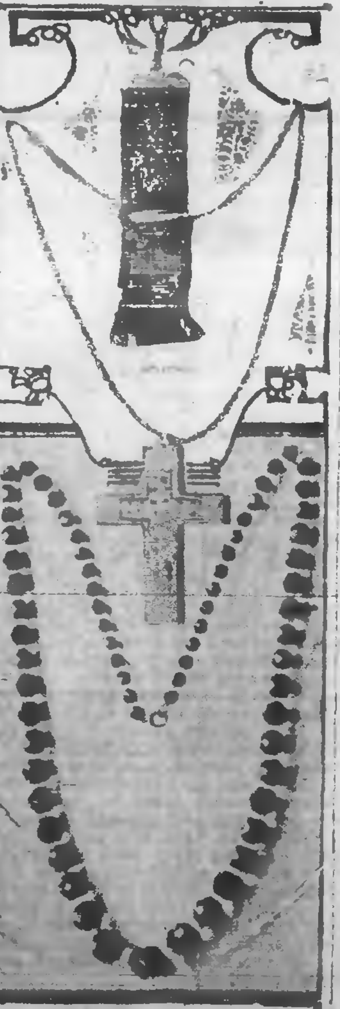
A direct, businesslike young woman she is, brief of speech, with a sincere smile and eyes that look straight into those of the person with whom she is speaking. She might be a young American woman deeply immersed in settlement work. She speaks English perfectly. That is explained by the fact that she was born in England and spent her first sixteen years in that country.

"Then," she says, "I went to Belgium, and later I married a Belgian and, of course, took the nationality of my husband. So I am a Belgian and have a right to speak for those people, though I am English born."

JEWELED ORNAMENTS.

Among These Fancy Crosses Are Again Considered Very Fashionable.

The popularity of ornaments seems to grow. One does not need to be especially wealthy to possess the majority of them. Cut jet, crystal and imitation pearls are combined in the designing of these trinkets.



SMART NEW ORNAMENTS.

Illustrated here are a silk watch fob for wear in the waistcoat pocket, a jeweled cross on a slender chain and a cut jet necklace. Jeweled crosses are coming into fashion again.

Easily Cleaned Saucepan.

A saucepan in which milk has been boiled is often a trouble to clean. Here is a simple but most successful method. After pouring out the boiling milk quickly replace the lid before the steam has time to escape and allow the saucepan to cool before taking it off again. Then put the pan in cold water to soak. It can be cleaned quickly and easily.

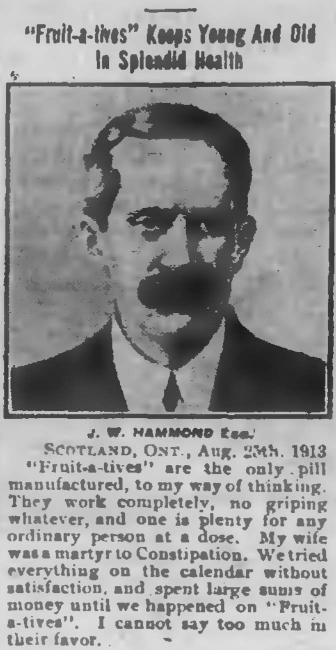
"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old In Splendid Health



J. W. HAMMOND Esq.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th. 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

J. W. HAMMOND.

Those who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are proud and happy to tell a sick or ailing friend about these wonderful tablets made from fruit juices.

BUILDING A LIGHTHOUSE.

Rearing the Bell Rock Tower Was a Perilous Piece of Work.

Right down to the time of John Smeaton, who invented the stone tower, lighthouses were built of wood. It was Smeaton's success in placing a stone edifice on the dreaded Eddystone rocks in the eighteenth century which really gave an impetus to lighthouse building, and since then the sea builder has achieved many notable conquests in all parts of the globe.

The next erected was that built by R. Stevenson on the Bell rock, on the famous Inch cape reef, off the coast of Scotland. The construction of this lighthouse was one long, terrible battle with the angry sea. The securing of the foundations, naturally the most hazardous part of the whole undertaking, proved exceedingly difficult.

It is recorded that the men worked with desperation. Only two could remain on the rock at a time, but they stuck there with the tenacity of leeches, the cold waters of the North sea bearing down every few minutes and sweeping entirely over them. When the first stone was at last swung into position the men, ragged, chilled and worn with the awful struggle, clung to the iron rods which they had erected upon the reef and cheered madly, like soldiers just over the ramparts of an enemy's fort.

Again and again they were absolutely driven from the rock. When the tower began to appear well above the sea terrible storms arose and swamped the works. On several occasions blocks weighing as much as two tons were ruthlessly torn out of their places and swept into the sea despite dovetailed joints and portland cement. In the end the sea builder proved victorious, as he always does, but it cost four years' labor and the expenditure of £60,000 before the lighthouse stood complete.—Wide World Magazine.

Near Laurels.

A certain major in the Philippines, who seemed to be favored with the good will of the powers, managed in some way always to get leave just before trouble with the natives was due. His colonel suspected him of having no stomach for fighting.

"Some day," remarked the colonel, "they'll want to give that fellow a decoration, and I'll suggest one. It will be a wreath of leaves of absence."—New York Post.

Ladies First.

"Some day you may be president of the United States," said the candidate who was out getting next to the hearts of the people.

"You won't make any hit with that kind of talk around here," replied the small boy. "We're a votes for women family. Go tell it to sister."—Washington Star.

This Habit Still Holds.

It was Noah who was voicing the complaint.

"My wife made me get up and shut the windows every night it rained," said he.—New Haven Register.

Doing Good.

He that does good to another man does also good to himself, not only in consequence, but in every act of doing it, for the conscience of well doing is ample reward.—Seneca.

Emerald Isle.

It was Dr. W. Drennan who, on account of its verdure, first called Ireland the Emerald Isle in his poem, "Erin."

Love labor, for if thou dost not want it for food thou mayst for physic.—William Penn.

Good Form

A Progressive Church Supper.

This is an old but ever effectual scheme for making a church supper an interesting occasion. Choose five hostesses with a good chairman for each course. The courses should each be served at the house of one of the hostesses. Make the charge 50 cents, paying 10 cents at each house where a course is served, or a ticket for the whole may be issued, as seems best.

At the first hostess' house serve a canape of raw oysters or fruit, as is most convenient. Have a pretty centerpiece and plenty of waiters, either small tables or long ones, according to how many are to be seated at once.

The second house will have a soup course, with olives and celery.

The meat course comes next, with accessories, and coffee or tea, if desired, with bread and butter or buttered rolls and biscuit.

Salad and wafers with salted nuts make up the fourth course, with dessert at the fifth house. If there is any program to be offered or any amusement scheme it may be at the last stop, or a sixth house added. This is an arrangement to be worked out to suit individual needs.

Autumn Lawn Party.

In the country, where leaves remain much longer on the trees than in the city, a hostess noted for her original ideas conceived the idea of turning the clearing of her large lawn of the autumn leaves into a frolic.

Over the telephone invitations went out to six congenial couples, all good friends, to come the following Saturday attired in warm clothes, with heavy gloves. Partners were chosen by rakes tied with ribbons, two of each color. Then work began. After each couple had a big pile the hostess asked that a specimen of each variety of leaf be brought into the house. Then there was an impromptu contest to see who could name the most varieties. A picnic luncheon was served, and great bonfires of the leaves were built after dark.

Afterward all gathered round the fireplace, told stories, roasted apples and chestnuts and begged to be included in next year's "leaf party." The hostess had made dainty autumn leaf placards, done in wood brown, with gold lettering.

WRIT FOR $603.

A writ has been issued by Solicitor O. A. Langley of Lakefield on behalf of Charles W. S. Dunn of Quebec, against Hon. Laurence H. Graham, of New York. The amount involved is $603, and arose out of a transaction in stock of the Lakefield Canoe Company.

REGISTRATION OF ALIENS

It may be necessary to have only one place of registration in Ontario for aliens of enemy countries. Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, intimated the other day, after a meeting of the Cabinet, that a registration office would be opened in Ottawa, but not at present in Toronto, although, if he found it advisable to do so, one would later be opened there.

The Government is opening offices at Montreal, Ottawa, Sydney, Fort William, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton. Silas H. Carpenter, commissioner of police in the Interior Department, and formerly chief detective of Montreal, will have charge of the Montreal office and district. The others have not yet been selected.

As soon as the approximate number of aliens of enemy countries in Canada is known the Government will proceed with the internment itself. The control and direction of the internment will be under the direction of Maj.-Gen. Otter.

BLACKLIST IS DAMNING.

Germans Had Planned Belgian Oppression Long Ago.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Le Temps states that it has from a sure source "details of Germany's blacklist," containing the names of prominent Belgians against whom especially severe measures are to be taken. Le Temps publishes the list — chiefly Belgian professors and public writers—which it claims proves that the German premeditation of an attack on Belgium must have been in existence for over a year, because it includes the names of Firmin Van Den Bosch, the Ghent magistrate, vice-president of the Societe Culture Francaise, who left Ghent some months before the war to take the presidency of a mixed tribunal at Monzourah, Egypt; Maurice Renard, described as magistrate at Bruges, who has been military auditor at Mons for over a year; Gustave Abel, publicist, Ghent, during the past year secretary of the Liberal party organization at Brussels. Le Temps says that the original list is placed in security abroad, with full details as to how it came into the possession of their informant, who is "a very well-known personality in Belgium"

Dad's Xmas Surprise—

—the long wished for

New Scale Williams Player Piano

With The Meister Touch

The family did not know how big dad's heart was until this Xmas. It was not all dad's fault, though. He did not believe that it was possible for him to buy a player piano on such favorable terms. So when we came to dad and told him that we would let him have a real New Scale Williams Meister-Touch Player for $25.00 down and $15.00 each month until the whole price of $700.00 was paid in full, he said, "I'll take it and it's certainly the best $25 worth I ever got in Xmas presents."

We have other styles of Players for other fathers, at greater or smaller prices. Ask about them.

C.P.R. CANADIAN EXHIBIT

Will Have Series of Moving Pictures at Panama Exposition

Mr. L. O. Armstrong, who is connected with the Department of Natural Resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway as official lecturer, speaks enthusiastically about the forthcoming Panama Exposition. He has been engaged for many months making a collection of moving pictures to be exhibited there next year. The moving picture man, under the supervision of Mr. Armstrong, has covered every inch of the ground in the Dominion that will have the effect of attracting the settler and the tourist to Canada. The pictures will demonstrate land, irrigated and non-irrigated, all the industrial resources, and water power, minerals and forestry. The delightful scenery of the Canadian Rocky Mountains will be one of the principal attractions, and so extensive are the pictures taken that it will be possible to give a complete change every day each week. The performances will be continuous throughout each day and it is scheduled to give at least eight addresses a day. In order to facilitate the work in connection with the exhibition the British Columbia government have promised assistance in the shape of a capable assistant, and it is likely that each of the other provinces throughout the Dominion will do the same, as the pictures cover the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Despite the war conditions Mr. Armstrong states that there is a continuous stream of settlers making their way from the States of Washington and Oregon into Alberta and Saskatchewan, and his extensive travels through the United States lead him to believe that it would be unwise for people who are contemplating migrating to any of the larger cities with the idea of seeking work, to do so, as it would not better their condition. It would be better to stop at home and live cheaply until times take a turn, as he believed they were doing at the moment.

Burlington will elect its first mayor in January, having just been declared a town by the Ontario Railway Board.

About Zutoo Tablets

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost." A. O. NORTON, 286 Congress, St. Boston.

A New Dual Alliance

(Written exclusively for the Review by J. P. Laycock, M. A.)

There are four great world issues today. The European, American, Yellow and Moslem problems command attention. Supremacy in the first field is divided into the warring camps of the Dual Alliance and Triple Entente with their lesser satellites; in the second, it belongs to the United States of America; in the third, it is apportioned particularly among Russia, the United Kingdom and Japan, and, in the fourth, prior to the outbreak of the great war, it was possessed officially by the European Concert. The British problem is to be considered as something apart from these others, as it is concerned with the internal affairs of the British race.

World Influence of These Problems.

These divisions, geographically, racially, politically, are bound to influence the intellectual and constitutional development of the peoples of the world. If the dream of the federation of mankind and the parliament of the world ever comes true, these fields with their separate issues will play an important part. That racially the New World is an attachment of Europe has complicated their common affairs, with the result that the Monroe Doctrine and the Canning policy have been born. The European policy of advance, the resultant resuscitation of the Orient, the territorial proximity of the Mongolian millions, have been asserted as bringing to the fore the need of an alliance of Europe, possibly including Great Britain, and some time ago enabled Sir Mac Waechter, the persistent protagonist of the formation of the United States of Europe, to declare that the Continental sovereigns had privately approved of the idea. The consolidation of the European and Yellow worlds is bound to integrate, eventually awakening Islam, which is pinned between them.

World Federation Hardly Likely on Such Lines.

A world federation of nations guided by international law and divided geographically into such groups each presiding over the nationalities within its territories is hardly likely to be realized, except in the cases of the Orient, and possibly of Islam. To unite the floods of races and nationalities in Europe is almost as difficult of realization as the task of uniting the peoples and nations of the world; and is ever likely to form the pretext under which some despotic kaiser or czar seeks to construct through paths of blood a continental empire on the pretext that the white world must unite to check or dominate the yellow. The comparative geographical consolidarity of each of the races of mankind and the ease of intercommunication in this age of steam and electricity tend to suggest that race rather than geographical continuity is the natural basis upon which to rest the universal parliament. However, if such were to be realized in the near future the principles of force that interfere with the natural constitutional development of the world and the different degrees of self-government would probably temporarily at least reserve Islam as the junior partner of a larger organization. The European outlook at present suggests the possibility of the Teuton being crushed between the Latin and the Slav, with at best ultimately an inferior position in one or other, unless the victors, which is doubtful, are ready to permit the consolidation of the Germans and allied peoples. The ease of intercommunication between South America and Europe will enable the union of the Latin world. It is to be hoped that the peace settlement after the European struggle will be based upon the principle of autonomous nationalities within racial states. The centralizing tendencies of the related groups of the world compels the closer communion of the remaining British communities.

Need of Anglo-Saxon Unity.

It is a mistake, however, to separate the political puzzles and destinies of the United States of America and the future United States of Great Britain. Similarity of origin, racially, constitutionally, politically, commercially, are drawing their peoples together and healing the wound of 1783. America owes her wondrous development to the descendants of Continental Europeans, guided by those of Anglo-Saxon origin; the British Empire, more and more so.

Disunited, their tasks seem superhuman; united, human. If the task of the United States has been huge in Mexico, how much more huge in the whole of Central and South America? The enormous interests in Europe, commercial or otherwise, of the republic, cannot be adequately protected when she has no naval station in this part of the globe, nor a strong European division of her fleet to make her respected. The lengthy littoral of our southern neighbor, touching two oceans, will raise problems of defence immediately acute, once Asia takes up the policy of the creation and augmentation of armaments. The territorial and commercial interests in eastern waters are even now open to overwhelming attack through the naval strength of Japan. What will be the problem there, once China and Indo-China join the procession?

On the other hand, there is little satisfaction in the scenery from the point of vision of the British Empire. The need of consolidating her squadrons in the North Sea has left her interests elsewhere largely unprotected, although a successful issue of this war of the nations may leave her free for some time in this field before a new nation is seized with the craze of armaments, unless she is confronted by a European coalition. Her subject empires in India and in Egypt are held by small land armies only when the size of the huge hosts of Turkey and Russia, for example, are taken into account. Australasia, apprehensive of a yellow invasion, has not at present the human foundation essential in modern days to permanent existence. Canada's coast line lies open to the inroads of white or Oriental unless in a war between alliances when the British Empire and its allies together hold the oceans.

The Character of Co-operation.

Already the common interests of these two related groups are recognized and on the increase. Never has there been such a social intermingling of the two peoples, such commercial intercourse and political good feeling as today. The United States had the support of the British people in the war with Spain and in the recent complications in Mexico. The United Kingdom recognized the republic as her representative in the negotiations with this Latin American nation, although Sir Edward Grey retained the British right of protecting British interests if necessary. The United States returns the British sympathy of the past in her present refusal to listen to the underhanded presentation of the German case today and in her prompt hint to Count Bernstorff that in the case of any German invasion of the Dominion of Canada, the application of the Monroe doctrine would be defined in Washington and not in Berlin. The time seems approaching for an entente as a step forward towards a dual alliance for defensive purposes.

Why should there not be a political understanding whereby Britain with her powerful navy would be the official representative of the United States in Europe, and the latter, the British agent in Central and South America? Why should not a British-American alliance in the near future be a better method for protecting British-Imperial interests in the far Pacific than the existing understanding with Japan which is less likely to be permanent? Why should not the Oversea Dominions of the British Crown do their proper share in the ocean of peace once, but pseudo-peace now?

Expediency demands such an alliance. The Anglo-Saxon powers are so situated that they are naval nations, unlike the Teutonic, Latin, Slav, Monoglian and Moslem groups mainly military in organization. The United States and the British empire, as the present conflict has illustrated strikingly in the case of the latter depend upon sea power to convert themselves into military powers when essential, the combination of their naval strength enables this to be more securely carried out. The immediate realization of this proposal would place the British fleet at the disposal of the overseas dominions and the United States in European waters, and the American in protec-

BIG VICTORY FOR ALLIES REPORTED

Record of Day's Fighting is One of Successes For the Allied Arms and Many Gains Are Announced---Daily News Correspondent Predicts Fighting Retreat on Part of Germans and a Long Campaign.

LONDON, Dec. 12. — A despatch from Paris says:—

Reports reaching here yesterday evening tell of a decisive British victory in Belgium. While details are lacking, it is said that the Germans have been repulsed for a considerable distance, losing heavily.

Military circles say that if this is true it will probably prove the turning point of the campaign in the north.

Many notable gains by the allies are reported in despatches from the Franco-Belgian battlefront. In the Ypres region trenches taken by the Germans were soon afterward recaptured. From different sources, too, come news confirming the belief that the German movements of troops in Belgium are complete.

The Daily News has the following despatch from the Belgian frontier: Hints from half a dozen sources leave little doubt that the main movement of the enemy's troops, both in and into Belgium, which we have been hearing so much about lately, are now completed. Germany has her pieces in position. Every straggler over the border enlarges on the extraordinary preparations made for a fighting retreat, but it should never be forgotten that preparations even of this magnitude in a life and death struggle are only part of an obvious game; because the plans are made for retreat it does not follow that a retreat is contemplated immediately.

From what I am able to gather, I believe the German retreat through Belgium will offer the allies one of the toughest problems in the history of the country. They must be ready for a series of terribly costly field sieges, so costly in life that it may possibly be, judging by the recent experiences of this kind of fighting, that we may ultimately be forced to regard three-quarters of the Belgian territory as the citadel before which the army must sit down in the old-fashioned way and wait for nature to complete the work of our arms.

The French official communication issued last night says: —

"In the region of Ypres a very violent German attack has been repulsed.

"In that same region those of our trenches which were reported in the official communication of 3 o'clock yesterday as having been taken by the Germans have been recaptured by us.

"Upon the rest of the front there is nothing important to report."

The official communication as issued yesterday afternoon was as follows:—

"The enemy Thursday showed a certain activity in the region of Ypres. He directed several attacks against our lines, three of which were completely repulsed. At one single point on the front the Germans succeeded in reaching one of our first line trenches. On our side we continued to make progress in the direction of the enemy's lines.

"In the region of Arras and in the vicinity of Juvincourt there have been artillery engagements.

"In the Argonne we have pushed forward several of our trenches and driven back two German attacks.

"In the region of Varennes we have consolidated our gains of the preceding days. The German artillery has been very active, but we suffered no losses. A similar condition has existed on the heights of the Meuse. In the forest of Le Pretre our progress has been continued, and has developed.

"To the south of Thann we have occupied the railroad station of Aspach.

"Along the remainder of the front in the Vosges there have been artillery engagements."

RUSSIANS CREATE SUDDEN ALTERATION IN POLAND

Of Five Austro-German Columns Which Have Been Progressing Steadily, Three Have Been Repulsed---Advance From Mlawa Has Been Stopped and Has Been Forced to Retire at Certain Points.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Of the five Austro-German columns which for some days appeared to be making steady progress in their invasion of Poland, three have suffered checks, according to last night's official report from Russian headquarters.

The statement says, "In the direction of Mlawa the Germans on Dec. 10 kept up a strong offensive throughout the day and night, but we succeeded in repulsing them. Our troops, themselves taking the offensive, gave chase to the German columns, which in some places retreated in disorder.

"In the region to the north of Lowicz the enemy made some fierce attacks on the night of Dec. 9-10, and throughout the whole of the following day. We repulsed these attacks and inflicted enormous losses on the Germans.

"We repelled in all seven attacks during which some of our units permitted the enemy to approach very near, and then put them to flight with a murderous fire.

"In the region to the south of Cracow, on Dec. 10, we were still continuing our offensive with success in spite of the stubborn resistance offered by the Germans.

"We captured several guns and as many as 2,000 prisoners. There has been no important change on the remainder of the front."

The column which was making a downward stroke from Mlawa, on the East Prussian frontier, and which was reported in one despatch from Petrograd yesterday, to be within fifteen miles of Warsaw, after an energetic offensive, was repulsed, and under counter-attacks from the Russians was compelled to retire at some points.

The attacks of the main German column, which had its front on the line between Lodz and Lowicz, and which came down diagonally from Thorn, were delivered with great force, but were, according to the Russian account, repulsed with heavy losses to the invaders. That the Germans laid great store on the success of their attack here is shown by the fact that during the two days they faced the Russian trenches seven times, and were driven back by an effective fire.

The other column which has suffered is that composed of German and Austrian troops, which has been trying to outflank the Russian left south of Cracow. In this case it was the Russians who assumed the offensive, and they claim that after a tenacious resistance they defeated the Germans, taking several guns and 2,000 prisoners.

Of the German columns operating in the region of Piotrkow, and that advancing from Czenstochowa, there is no news except the Russian statement that "on other parts of the front there have been no substantial changes."

A check or repulse of any one of the columns must, however, in the opinion of military critics, affect the whole German plan, which was a formidable conversion movement that had for its objectives the capture of Warsaw and the relief of Cracow. For this large reinforcements were sent from the west and operations were pushed with great resolution against a determined opposition. It will probably take some days to determine, however, whether the checks have upset this plan. The Germans place the utmost importance, it is said, in securing a decisive result in the east before the Russians are able to make their numbers, which military men say must already be superior, so overwhelming that the better means of transportation possessed by the Germans will be discounted.

French Press Bitter.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Thursday evening's newspapers comment bitterly on the Kaiser's illness:—

The Intransigeant says: "We ought to pray that the monster survives to taste the full agony of his downfall and realize the extent of his irremedial defeat."

The Liberte says: "Now begins the twilight of the German gods. The Kaiser's expiation commences. It is not Napoleon, vanquished by his own conquests, it is no eagle-blowing crest, but a wretched vulture with the stomach ache. In his sleepless nights, he must see, like Belshazzar's writing on the wall, the words, 'The despicable army of Gen. French'."

CANADIANS FOR FRONT

Seven Hundred Engineers Will Leave Salisbury Next Week

SALISBURY, Eng., Dec. 12.—Preparations are being made to move the Canadian contingent to the firing line in France or Belgium. Sir John Jackson, the great army contractor, has asked for the assistance in the erection of buildings required at the front. It is expected that the Canadian Engineers, consisting of about 700 men, will leave next week to build a base hospital and otherwise prepare for the arrival of the contingent.

No. 2 Company, Engineers, from Toronto, consisting of 250 men, in command of Captain Irving, four brigades of infantry and the divisional signal company manoeuvred in the rain yesterday.

Twenty-five thousand Canadians were engaged yesterday at manoeuvres in a drenching rain. A divisional tactical scheme is planned for Wednesday next.

The Princess Patricia's will be leaving Winchester any day for France. The whole of the first contingent is still in England, the only Canadians in France being doctors and nurses.

SEVEN MEN KILLED

Four Others Wounded in South Atlantic Battle

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Secretary of the Admiralty has received a cable despatch from Vice-Admiral Sturdee, of the British squadron, stating that in the battle off the Falkland islands, in which the German cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig were sunk, the British casualties totaled seven men killed and four wounded.

No officers, the despatch says, were either killed or wounded.

TENTS ON HILLSIDE

LONDON, Dec. 12.—All four battalions of the First Brigade of the Canadian Contingent have now moved their tents out of the mud on to the hillside, and are so comfortable now that they don't care if they never go into the huts. Rapid progress with the latter has been made lately, the Canadians moving in as the groups are completed. The officers of the First Brigade now enjoy battalion messes managed by themselves, a welcome change from the sorry experiences of catering by private contract.

WHY WE STAND BY BRITAIN

French-Canadian Statesman Shows Why the Empire is United.

"Why We Stand by Great Britain," was the title of an address delivered in Montreal by the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, ex-Postmaster General in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's cabinet. Mr. Lemieux, speaking as a Canadian of French descent, was able to speak on such a topic without reserve, and his address made a great impression. This is in part what he said:

"In my humble judgment—and my view is that of many keen observers—the cause of the great war which now rages in Europe, is the Armed Peace which preceded it—the peace of guns, of Dreadnoughts, and sabre-rattlers. The huge armaments of that armed peace were made for war. Though foiled time after time, the war makers and war traders had their way at last.

"If you ask me why I stand by Great Britain, I answer, "Because Great Britain stands for the rule of the Law, while Germany stands for the rule of the Soldier. In Germany the soldier is the master of the people, but in Great Britain, and Thank God in Greater Britain, the soldier is the servant of the people.

"Germany is a derelict on the international sea. It is a danger to its neighbors, and a greater danger to itself. Of all the many issues, good or bad, which may come from this war, none is more important than that the German people should take possession of Germany.

"The fact cannot be gainsaid that Great Britain, who does not begin to be as logical as Germany or as systematic as France, in matters of government, has nevertheless the knack of making men step out of their own free will to die in her defence. She has the gift of keeping alive, across tumbling seas, round half the world, the undying bond that unites the hearts to home. She has shown herself indifferent to the possessing of taxing power over her colonies, but those colonies willingly tax themselves to send warships, and their sons seize their rifles in time of strife to go to her aid. She has the wisdom so to train and guide the swarthy children of alien races, and even the foe of yesterday, that they put their living bodies between Great Britain and Great Britain's enemies.

"Why did Greater Britain rally so spontaneously to Great Britain? Because Great Britain still believes in the sanctity of treaties, that the weak have rights, and that the strong have duties."

Ready To Quit Business.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—The Board of License Commissioners will have no trouble in deciding on at least twenty-one of the seventy licenses they will cut off on May 1 next. The indemnity of $5,000 which the Provincial Government will pay to each of those cut off has proved too big a lure for twenty-one of the 470 present license holders. They have decided the $5,000 is to be preferred to possible profits, and have signified their willingness to go out of the business. Their names have not been made public so far.

CAPITAL IS MOVED BACK

French Public Ledger Coveted by Germans is Safe

PARIS, Dec. 12. — The ledger of the national debt, containing the names of the holders of bonds which are inscribed, as distinguished from those payable to bearer, was brought to Paris again yesterday from Bordeaux. It required ten cars to transport the ledger.

One of the details of the German plan was to seize this vast book and use it to exact indemnity, as, if sequestered, the Government, and also private finances would be thrown into confusion.

All the Government offices in Paris are bustling with the newly-arrived officials and clerks. Thousands of tons of state papers have been arriving daily and nightly from Bordeaux since Dec. 1.

French Cabinet Council Meets.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—A Cabinet Council was held at the palace of the Elysee yesterday, the first to meet here since Sept. 3, on which date the Government left for Bordeaux when the invaders were within 20 miles of the capital. There was the utmost cheerfulness at yesterday's session, a singular contrast to the intense anxiety shown at the last previous meeting in Paris.

tion of the interests of the British empire in the western Atlantic. The question of the Pacific would then remain, easily solvable by the Panama canal and the united action of the western section of the American fleet with the combined squadrons of the oversea states. A diplomatic treaty or understanding rendering such a policy feasible would solve at least expense the naval protection of Anglo-Saxon interests everywhere, and would not interfere with the present strategic consolidation of the British fleet in European waters.

The time has come for the immediate, swift, and scientific drafting of an imperial constitution to integrate the divisions of the British empire to enable more effective guardianship of its share of Anglo-Saxon interests. We like the word, the United States. It is the symbol of political oneness, unity. It is a fit title for the future British amalgam. We rejoice that the United States of America is an accomplished fact. We hail into being the coming of the United States of Slavdom, Germania, or of the Latin word. We grant the right of the United States of the Orient or the United States of Islam to spring into life and action in order to establish a balance of power in Asia, if they so desire it. And we hope that out of all this consolidation, if consolidation does come, there may evolve that ideal of cosmopolitanism, the United States of the World.

PACIFIC FIGHT ENDED.

Winston Churchill Congratulates Japan on Naval Situation.

LONDON, Dec. 12—Replying to his congratulations on the victory of the British squadron over the Germans off the Falkland Islands, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, yesterday cabled the Japanese Minister of Marine as follows:—

"With the sinking of the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Leipzig and Nurnberg, the whole German squadron which had its base at Tsingtau at the break of the war has been destroyed and the base itself reduced and captured.

"This event marks the conclusion of the active operations in which the allied fleets have been engaged in the Pacific for four months. Though it has fallen to a British squadron in the South Atlantic to strike the final blow, it was largely owing to the powerful and untiring assistance rendered by the Japanese fleet that this result has been achieved."

Japanese Squadron Seeks Cruiser.

TOKIO, Dec. 12.—According to reliable information reaching Tokio yesterday, a squadron of Japanese warships is seeking the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friederich off the coast of Chile.

The steamer Prinz Eitel Friederich belongs to the North German Lloyd Co. Early in the war guns were mounted on board her, and she was transferred into an auxiliary cruiser. Recently she has been active off the coast of Chile, and one of her most recent exploits was the sinking, early in December, of the British steamer Charcas off Port Corral, Chile.

STRICTLY FRESH EGGS CALL FOR HIGH PRICE

As High as 50 Cents Asked — Market This Morning Was Well Stocked

Great fluctuations in market prices featured the proceedings on the busy square today. Prices on produce of all kinds except beef and pork were widely different, a circumstance that made it comparatively easy for one to buy cheap.

This helped buyers a lot when it came to purchasing eggs and poultry. At one table a woman would sell eggs at 29 cents while next to her another had them as high as 50 cents, so you had your pick. Of course the cheap price was for eggs not strictly fresh. The same was true with poultry, a nice little brace of chickens could be had for 85 cents, while a more pretentious pair fetched $1.50. Turkeys ran all the way from $2.50 and $3.00 down to $1.35.

One feature that was strikingly brought out on today's market was the increase in the number of farmers who seem to be bringing in their produce to dispose. Possibly the farmer is feeling the financial stress as well as his city brother and going in for produce raising all the stronger in the endeavor to realize more of it. The fact remains however that attendance every Saturday is not falling off even making allowance for the approach of Christmas.

One could tell it was Christmas time however by an imposing array of decorations, trees, ever green wreaths, and rosettes. A small tree could be bought for 25 cents.

By ten o'clock the market was well stocked, and a few minutes later a busy scene of activity was presented. Butter and eggs were most in demand and luckily for the householder who likes to talk of the high cost of living, butter has not gone up.

But if one wanted fresh eggs he had to dig down and pay 45 and 50 cents for those that could be depended upon. There were not a great many offered at that as this is the quiet season for hens.

Plenty of pork and beef were offered on the outer market but buying was slow.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—There was a good enquiry for Manitoba spring wheat for export account, and as cables were stronger at an advance of 3d to 6d per quarter sales of a few odd loads were made by exporters who happened to be long a little ocean freight.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for coarse grains, business being quiet and prices steady. Demand for flour for both export and local account was limited. The trade in millfeed continues active at very firm prices.

Demand for butter is steady for small lots. Cheese is firm and eggs are active. Refined sugar prices were reduced 20c per 100 pounds for all grades.

OLD SANTA CLAUS.

[Author Unknown.]

Old Santa Claus sat all alone in his den
With his leg crossed over his knee,
While a comical look peeped out at his eyes,
For a funny fellow is he.

His queer little cap was tumbled and torn,
And his wig was all awry,
But he sat and mused the whole day long,
While the hours went flying by.

He had been as busy as busy could be
In filling his pack with toys.
He had gathered his nuts and baked his pies
To give to the girls and boys.

There were dolls for the girls and whips for the boys,
With wheelbarrows, horses and drays,
And bureaus and trunks for dolly's new clothes.
All these in his pack he displays.

Of candy, too, both twisted and striped,
He had furnished a plentiful store,
While raisins and figs and prunes and grapes
Hung up on a peg by the door.

"I am almost ready," quoth he, quoth he,
"And Christmas is almost here.
But one thing more—I must write them a book
And give to each one this year."

So he clapped his specs to his little round nose,
And, seizing the stump of a pen,
He wrote more lines in one little hour
Than you ever could read in ten.

He told them stories, all pretty and new,
And wrote them all out in rime,
Then packed them away with his box of toys
To distribute one at a time.

And Christmas eve when all were in bed
Right down the chimney he flew,
And, stretching the stocking leg out at the top,
He clapped in a book for you.

So It May.

She was a beautiful woman—and his wife. But one night, getting home late and having some excited conversation with her in the hall, he said to himself:

"A thing of beauty may be a jaw forever."

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

PETERBOROUGH INTERMEDIATES AND JUNIORS WELL GROUPED

Cobourg out of Intermediate Series and Vacancy is Filled by Picton — Frontenacs in Another Group — Cobourg Juniors May Drop Out

Peterboro, Belleville, Picton, Whitby, Oshawa and Bowmanville, these teams will compose group Number One of the Intermediate O.H.A. series. It will be noticed that there is one change. Cobourg has been replaced by Picton. The Cobourb hockey team has jumped almost in a body to the Kitchener League and as a result the popular little lake shore town will be without an Intermediate team. The strength of Picton is not known but new teams can never be overlooked. J. P. Bond of this city has been appointed convener for this district. Representatives of the six teams will meet in Port Hope in the near future and draw up the schedule.

Group eleven of the same series appears to be one on which much interest will be placed. It embraces Midland, Victoria Harbor, Coldwater, and Orillia.

Juniors Well Grouped.

The Peterboro Juniors are grouped with Cobourg and Port Hope. It is doubtful if the Cobourg team will be in when the curtain is lifted as the residents of that town are putting forth great efforts to have soldiers mobilized in the rink.

The Kingston Frontenacs who opened the season here last year by winning from the Petes are in a group with Belleville and Kingston Collegiate Institute.

Group Number Three should pay as there will be practically no travelling expenses. The teams are Oshawa, Bowmanville and Whitby.

Senior Series.

The following are the two groups in the senior series:—

Group 1—Convener, Ernie Jupp, University of Toronto. Meet at Toronto. University of Toronto, T.R. and A.A. or Victorias of Toronto, Kingston Frontenacs, Riversides of Toronto.

Group 2—Convener, F. J. O'Grady, Toronto. Meet at Toronto. Midland, Argonaut Club of Toronto, Toronto Rowing Club, St. Michael's Club of Toronto.

Ontario Hockey Association Arranges Groups

Toronto, Dec. 12.—The first meeting of the new executive of the Ontario Hockey Association was held last night, the principal business being the grouping of the clubs in the different series for the coming season. An application was received from the Victorias, who represent the playing strength of the T.R. and A.A. senior teams, which was accepted, subject to the club organizing according to the regulations, and it was said that this would be completed today. No withdrawal of the T.R. and A.A. was notified, and the grouping was arranged with the old club in, though it is expected that it will not now be represented in the senior series.

Two sets of officers have been returned for the Whitby Club, and the tangle will be straightened out by the executive of the association.

CRUISER SUNK BY A MINE

German Armored Warship is Reported Lost

PARIS, Dec. 12—The German armored cruiser Friedrich Karl is reported to have been sunk in the Baltic Sea by a mine and most of her crew drowned, according to an official statement issued at the French Ministry of Marine yesterday.

The Friedrich Karl carried 557 officers and men.

The sinking of the cruiser is said to have occurred late in November. The cruiser was a sister ship of the Prinz Adalbert, and was built in 1903.

She carried four 8-inch guns, ten 6-inch guns, twelve 3-inch guns, four machine guns and torpedo tubes.

The vessel was 397 feet long and 64 feet wide, and registered 8,858 tons.

Reports have also been received from Valparaiso to the effect that a merchantship which arrived yesterday at Concepcion reports that it had overheard a wireless that the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich had been sunk by a Jap warship.

There is no confirmation of the report that the German cruiser Dresden has been sunk. She was last reported cornered by the British squadron.

New Zealand Stays Wet.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Dec. 12.—The election returns, though incomplete, indicate that the licensing position is unchanged, and that national prohibition has not been carried. The prohibitionists received a set-back in several places.

The returns give the Government 38 members of Parliament, the Opposition 30, and the Labor-Social Democrats 8. The the latter support the Opposition party, the strength in Parliament is equal, though the votes of the soldiers abroad are yet to be counted, and may affect the result.

MURDER IS FOLLOWED BY SUICIDE

Toronto Man Kills Married Woman and Shoots Himself

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—Mrs. Edith McFarland, 30 years of age, 423 Crawford street, was shot through the head and instantly killed last night by Guy Argle, a boarder in the house, and a disappointed lover. As the other roomers, hearing shots, and the cries of the child, burst open the door, Argle shot himself behind the left ear. At a late hour last night, at the General Hospital, he was still breathing, but was not expected to recover. Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, mother of the dead woman, who was in the room when the shooting took place, lies in the house prostrated.

Argle, who is supposed to be a real estate agent, had boarded with the family for about six months. It is believed that he had fallen in love with Mrs. McFarland, whose husband is at present in Buffalo. After the evening meal last night, Argle went into the kitchen and asked Mrs. Hall and her daughter to come to his room as "he wanted to speak to them." His was the front room upstairs. Once there, Argle locked the door, leaving Mrs. McFarland's four-year-old boy outside. He then demanded that Mrs. McFarland stay in the house that evening. She refused to do so, and he shot her and himself.

Coming Into Her Own.

Woman is certainly coming into her own. Even in tender romance she is exerting an influence.

The young man had just been accepted. In his rapture he exclaimed, "But do you think, my love, I am good enough for you?"

His strong minded fiancee looked sternly at him for a moment and replied: "Good enough for me? You've got to be!"—Judge.

BRITISH RAILWAY PORTERS.

And the Magic of the Sixpence or the Shilling as a Tip.

I never had much fault to find with the British porter and sixpence system for baggage, E. S. Martin writes in Scribner's. You have nothing to show for your trunk when you give it up but the British constitution, and that is not written, but you have to take things as you find them, and under the British system we usually found all the things we took, even our umbrellas.

And the British railway porter is a lovely institution. He is the real father of his country. I was in a perfect frame of mind to appreciate his fatherliness. I wanted him to do all the work, including the necessary thinking, and he did it. I loved to have him hustle in and find us proper seats in trains. In that particular of service I am seldom able to realize Jane's reasonable expectations, but the British porter did and I honored him for it with admiration and shillings.

And isn't a shilling a dear little talisman? I was so pleased with them. They do so much for you and leave you with a cheerful glow and a sense of having parted with a true friend. You can get quite a lot of them for $5, and they are the cheapest thing for the money that you can buy in England. Even their fractions are nice: very desirable and convenient; companionable while they stay with you and remunerative when they leave. I tried to keep always provided with shillings and their silver fractions, and duly also with pennies, which are issued in England in large folio editions.

I can remember when our honorable little cents were of a dignified amplitude like that. Did they buy more then, do you suppose? Certainly they were of more relative importance in the scheme of things than cents are now, and I'm not sure but that it would be an operation worth trying on the high cost of living to make them big again.

Highland English.

English as she is spoke in the remote highlands is not exactly the tongue of the south, which fact is illustrated by a brief conversation which took place between three highland ghillies who had a sup each of the laird's own mountain dew. Says Tougal, "That wass the fery pest whusky her nainsel' nefer tasted in all her porn tays." Assented Tonalt, "So did I neither." And Angus corroborated, "Neither did I too."—London Globe.

NO LIGHT ON MURDER CASE

Many Tramps Have Been Seen Around Whitby

WHITBY, Dec. 12—William Stone, night operator at the Grand Trunk station at Whitby Junction, was shot and killed yesterday morning about 12.30, while on duty in his office. The murderer escaped without being seen. Stone, who is nearly 22 years of age, himself gave the alarm. "Send down the chief of police; I've been shot," he said, when he had rung up the Bell Central.

"Who did it", Central asked.

"I don't know," he replied, "but get the chief."

When Chief McGrotty got to the phone Stone did not answer. The chief, accompanied by Night Watchman John Patterson, immediately hurried to the station, their arrival there being about half an hour after the alarm was given. The station is a mile south of the centre of the town.

They found Stone lying on the floor quite dead. The desk telephone which he had been using was hanging down from the desk as it had fallen from his hands. He lay as if he had fallen right back from where he had been standing at the desk. Everything else was in order in the office. The cash drawer had not been touched.

The door leading to the waiting-room was locked, and the glass drop-window over the ticket counter was down but unlocked. No glass in any of the windows was broken, and the only inference is that the ticket window was dropped by either Stone or the murderer after the shooting. On the side of a drawer cabinet near the desk was found a large bloody handprint. That could not have been made by Stone himself, as his hands had practically no blood on them. There was nothing in Stone's pockets, not even his watch, which would lead to the belief that the murderer had searched the body for money or other valuables, that he had got his hands bloody, and in rising from the floor had placed his hand on the cabinet.

The office was in a twilight condition, the only light being from an electric lamp with green shade, placed so as to show out on the track.

Just about the time that the chief and Patterson arrived at the station a westbound freight train, which had been shunting around in the yard east of the junction, pulled out on its way to Toronto. Word was sent to the city, with the result that at Little York two men were caught stealing a ride and were taken into custody.

The murder has caused a profound sensation in Whitby, as "Billy" Stone was born and brought up here. He was a genial young man and very popular. He lived with his parents, not far from the station, and was one of the main supports of the family. Stone was of a fearless nature, and was accustomed to staying in the station alone without any weapons. It is contrary to the rules to allow persons to stay in the station over night, and Stone always ejected tramps without showing any concern or fear of danger.

It developed later that at 12.40, after telephoning uptown, Stone telephoned to the despatcher at Belleville, saying: "I'm shot; I'm all in."

No search has been made near the station for a revolver, but the murderer would not likely leave such a possible clue nearby. It is probable that the weapon would be thrown into one of the many small creeks in the vicinity. The neighborhood has been particularly bothered with tramps of late, no doubt owing to the time of depression.

DRESDEN GIVEN UP.

German Semi-Official Statement Says Cruiser Cannot Escape.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—(Via Amsterdam and London.)—A German semi-official statement given out here yesterday admits the loss of the cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig in the battle off the Falkland Islands.

Speaking of the Nurnberg (later reported sunk) and the Dresden, the report says:

"In view of the superiority of the enemy's fleet, which consists only of big, fast, well-armed ships, there seems little chance that our two cruisers can long evade pursuit. We must, therefore, also reckon with the loss of both these ships.

"It is hardly to be expected from British sources that accurate information will be given of the course of the conflict or of the composition of the British squadron.

"It should not be forgotten that our squadron was four months on the high seas, and that without being able to make use of cablegrams or other means of communication it assembled and dealt a heavy blow to the enemy's fleet."

Woman Suspected of Causing Death.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—Moses Sigler, aged 67, keeper of a small shop at 46 East Ontario street, this city, died in the General Hospital at noon yesterday from an injury to his head, and last night Mrs. Rose Sizner, aged 35, was arrested on suspicion of having caused the fatal injury. It is alleged that she struck the old man with a bottle in a quarrel yesterday morning.

All the Bank's Fault.

Mrs. Barrows was worried. That fact was evident to her husband, although she endeavored to maintain a cheerful manner. Before the evening meal was over, however, he discovered the cause of her anxiety.

"Will," said she, "I am very much afraid that my bank is in a bad way."

"How foolish, Mabel! Don't let that cause you a moment's worry. Why, it's one of the strongest financial institutions in the state. Whatever got that idea into your head?"

"Well, it's very strange," replied Mrs. Barrows, still unconvinced. "They've just returned a check of mine for $40 marked 'No funds.'"

THE REAL TEST

There is no surer test of the real success of the management of a Life Company than the feeling of its clients, the policyholders, towards it.

How the Canada Life Stands the Test

The Company is constantly receiving letters expressing gratification for increasing policy dividends, appreciation of generous treatment by the management, or grateful thanks for prompt payment of claims.

In Illustration

A CHICAGO BANK PRESIDENT lately wrote: "This dividend is particularly gratifying . . . and reflects great credit on the management of your good Company."

SIR WILLIAM WHYTE'S EXECUTOR wrote: "I have to thank you very cordially for the promptitude with which you settled our claim."

A PHILADELPHIA POLICYHOLDER says: "Your methods seem to make a friend of a policyholder, and I assure you that after dealing with your company fifteen years or more, I feel enthusiastic of your worth and kind treatment."

These letters are not exceptional; they are typical of those being received nearly every day.

Waterproofing a Cloak.

Showers are often heavy in the summer. A heavy coat becomes a nuisance to carry about. If you have a thin favorite cloak you would like to make showerproof here is the method: Dissolve four ounces of alum in one gallon of rain water and four ounces of sugar of lead separately in another gallon; then mix, dip the material into this, well work it about, dry in the air, wash in cold water, dry finally and there you are! Two dippings and two dryings will make it waterproof.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. A. J. Grant is spending a few days in Toronto.

The Misses Gladman gave a most enjoyable thimble tea this afternoon.

Mr. Shirley Denison, of Toronto, spent today in Peterborough.

Rev. H. A. Ben Oliel of Lakefield is registered at the Oriental.

The Misses Rogers of East City, entertained a number of friends at a thimble tea on Wednesday afternoon.

The members of the company presenting "The Chocolate Soldier" at the Grand, are guests at the Oriental.

The twilight musicale held this afternoon in the Conservatory Hall under the auspices of the Woman's Art Association, as usual was very much enjoyed by all those present.

Miss Helen Maclaren, mezzo-soprano, of the Bloor St. Presbyterian Church Choir, Toronto, will sing morning and evening in St. Andrew's Church tomorrow.

MISS H. PIERCE, A.T.C.M.

On Thursday evening at the Toronto College of Music candidates for graduation played piano concertos, with orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Torrington. The following young ladies were passed by the musical director, their work being up to the standard set by the college for this test: Miss Beatrice Collins and Miss Hazel Workman, both of St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, who played the Mendelssohn D minor and Hiller Concertos, respectively; Miss Harriette Pierce, St. Mary's Convent, Peterborough, and Miss Beatrice Bell, Mervin, who gave the Mendelssohn G minor Concerto, and Miss Mabelle Allin, Lucknow, the Caprice Brilliante of Mendelssohn. — Toronto Globe.

Miss Pierce, the local young lady mentioned above, is to be congratulated on her success in securing the title, Associate of Toronto College of Music. She has been a pupil of the music teachers in connection with St. Mary's Convent, and Miss Pierce's success again evinces the efficiency of the teachers at that institution.

The reception which was held through the kindness of Mrs. Fisk in her beautiful home on Friday afternoon and evening proved a great success. Mrs. Fisk received, assisted by Miss Henrietta Peck, and little Miss Helen Fisk also proved a very able assistant. Mrs. Miller was also present. The candy table was in charge of Mrs. Schneider and Miss Miller. The tea table, decorated with a large bowl of crimson carnations, was in charge of Mrs. Clegg and Mrs. Cameron in the afternoon, and Mrs. Travers and Mrs. McLean in the evening. The assistants during the afternoon and evening were Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, the Misses Hatton, the Misses Grieve, Miss Stevenson, the Misses Rogers, Miss Effie Munro, and Miss Pearce. Miss Peck read a short address, outlining the work which it is hoped will be carried on in Peterborough as well as in all other parts of Canada. This work will be the supplying of bandages and all other supplies necessary for the welfare and comfort of our wounded Canadian soldiers in England, and more especially in connection with the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital. This hospital is at Shorncliffe, England, and is under Sir Edmund Osler as physician in charge, and Dr. Armour as surgeon, both these men being distinguished Canadians. The nurses are all Canadians, Miss Squire, of Norwood, being among the number. In addition to the main hospital, which is already crowded, there are ten houses under the same management, to which the patients are transferred when convalescent. The supplies for these have been provided by the Red Cross Society, and latterly by the Queen Mary Needlework Guild. Miss Merritt, of Toronto, while in London recently, had the honor of an interview with Her Majesty and was asked to undertake the work of forming branches of this guild in Canada. It is expected that Miss Merritt will be in Canada early in the New Year and will give an address on this subject. It is hoped that arrangements may be made by which the Canadian wounded may be cared for by Canadian women, and thus relieve the Red Cross Society in England, which is already terribly overtaxed in providing supplies, not only for the wounded English soldiers, but for the Belgians as well. The musical program which was provided by Miss Hurley was exceptionally good and was very much appreciated. Amongst those present were: Mrs. Coulthard, Mrs. Dearie, Mrs. McDermid, the Misses Rubidge, Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. McWilliams, Miss MacPherson, Miss Melville, Mrs. and Miss Robinson, Miss Price, Mrs. and Miss Hay, Mrs. O'Connell, Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. McCarthy, Miss Hurley, Miss Logan, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. and Miss Gladman, Mr. and Mrs. Shook, Mr. B. D. Hall, Mr. Kerr, Mrs. Yeaman, Mr. and Mrs. Madill, Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Miss Burgess and Miss Davis.

Invitations have been issued by the staff and students of the Peterboro Business College for their annual at home to be held in the college rooms on Friday evening, December 18th.

scriptions. The Colonial Weaving Co. hands sent in $30, the superintendent, Mr. Brady, adding $10 to the wad as it passed out of the door. The Calcutt Brewing Co. men reached across the river and deposited $24.50 where it would do the most good. Curtis Bros. employes gave $30.00. A club of young ladies, among them several of the school teachers gave a liberal amount. This is merged in one of the teams' takings.

The Auction Sale.

The auction, at the market hall was fairly successful. It drew a good crowd but not many bidders. Still the assortment was put on sale and brought fair prices. One of the town lots that at Kerrobert, went to Mr H. G. Walker for $100. Mr. H. B. Cowan paid $5 for a Matthew's prime ham, good eating you will understand, but the home authorities will not send Mr. Cowan to market again But Mr. Cowan is one of the finest Mr. A. O. Kidd, carpenter, of 39 Crescent Street, and who is out of work, offered a week's work as his contribution. His service was put up for sale and Mr. Cowan took it on and will pay $20 to the fund for Mr. Kidd. That is the way to swing things.

Gave Red Fox.

Mr. James Telford, of 662 Stewart St., wished to give something and instead of money gave a fine red fox which he had cherished. This came to the knowledge of Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, who was out on the war path, and Fitz hustled a man out to Springville, where he knew of a similar fox in possession of Mr. Baptie. What Fitz says goes, so Mr. Baptie donated the other fox and the pair were offered for sale at the auction, and bought by Mr. Thos. Barrie, who may use them for show purposes. The sale caused considerable laughter. Mr. Barrie regrets that the foxes are not black, and stoutly resently any insinuation that he will send them down to Beach to have them dyed.

Ten pairs of skates from C. R. Banks were clubbed with two dozen brushes from Mr. Gunn and sold in lots. John Knapman has had his confidence in human nature shaken for he laid the brushes down and some one swiped them.

A fine rug from White Bros. is held over and will be sold. It is at the committee room. If you need an office or den rug call and buy this one. No very reasonable offer refused.

Some contributions are to be gratefully acknowledged. Our Chinese friends got together and made collectively the handsome contribution of $51.00. Good. The Brinton Carpet Co. employes sent $65.75, though this may be acknowledged elsewhere The Grand Trunk men in their givings totalled $75. The C.P.R. employes did mighty well, and swelled the fund by $125. Mr. Jas. Edgar handed in the nice fund from the Post Office employes of $150, and the Peter Hamilton Co. men rolled up a very acceptable $75.

Very general satisfaction was expressed on all sides at the magnificent assistance given by the press Without the newspapers and their loyal support the committees would not have been able to do so effective work. The papers were most helpful and of the greatest possible assistance. The columns were opened freely to all good help, and we are sure that the managers of these journals judiciously suppressed many written knocks that might have cast some cold water on the campaign For all of this, gentlemen, thanks.

The executive committee when it meets will give expression to what is above crudely stated in a more formal manner.

PROMENADE AT COLLEGIATE HALL

Last evening the spacious halls and corridors of the Collegiate were the scene of a most enjoyable and brilliant social function, the occasion being the second annual promenade and concert given by the Collegiate athletic association. The corridors and landings were profusely decorated with pennants and bunting and the P. C. I. colors were liberally displayed. The promenades were interspersed between vocal and instrumental selections, and was divided into four parts.

Miss Greaves contributed a piano selection, Miss Telgemann a number on the violin, and Sam Whitehouse a vocal selection, all of which were well applauded. Three promenades were then held, during which the girls in the ice cream, candy, and fancy goods booths did a rushing business. Victrola and piano selections were greatly enjoyed. Miss Greta LeBarr recited, and the Collegiate orchestra played. There were six promenades altogether. The Victrola for the evening was supplied free by Mr. A. W. Cressman and Sons.

Refreshments were served in the basement of the building. Mr. Harold Knapman, president of the athletic association, was the chairman.

The committee in charge is composed of Misses Leah Johnson and Lawra Foley and Messrs. F. E. Logan, W. B. Davis and B. V. Moore.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

Discursive reading is undoubtedly the kind of reading that appeals most to the majority of book-lovers. It is not the way to become a profound scholar, or a brilliant controversialist on any particular topic but, as was remarked in a former article, there are few amongst us who possess the temperament or the leisure for deep reading or quiet thinking, and therefore the literature that provides a man with a fairly varied knowledge of affairs becomes most valuable. Equipped, however, superficially, with such knowledge, one is fairly well guarded against making such an exhibition of himself as a certain person of whom it is creditably stated that, in talking of the war, he wondered what England, Russia and France were about "when they were letting them there Allies do all the fighting." Of course, that man had read absolutely nothing and trusting to hearsay, was promptly wrecked on the reef of impenetrable stupidity or ignorance.

For the purpose of pursuing our tour through the old magazines I have taken this week a volume of the Leisure Hour of 1899. It is filled with far more interesting matter than even the one that we rambled through previously but only one or two outstanding items can be discussed at this time. The first one is entitled The Queen's Clocks at Windsor," and is descriptive of the clocks distributed throughout the 683 rooms and corridors of the famous castle. We are told that these timepieces are wound up to go for periods varying from 48 hours to twelve months and that the local clockmaker's office is no sinecure. The oldest of them is the one that was presented to Anne Boleyn by Henry VIII., on the eve of their unhappy marriage.

The most interesting one, amongst this wonderful collection, is probably the one which was the favourite travelling clock of William III. It rests in the grand corridor and bears on its summit a beautiful crystal and enamel casket which contains the Bible of the late General Gordon. "In the midst of its magnificent surroundings," the writer says, "its casket itself worth some thousands of dollars, lies the unpretending little volume, its own original cost possibly but a shilling or two, its well-thumbed leaves, its war-worn look telling so clearly the story of the man himself and what he fought for."

Going on further we come to a very appreciative reference to two men whose names should be remembered in Canada; William Kingsford, the historian of the Dominion and Mr. Fuller, the designer of the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa.

Then we come to a review of the once well-known book, entitled "The War of the Future." This book was written by Dr. Von Bloch, and created a marked sensation when it appeared. It contains a most striking and accurate forecast of the present tremendous conflict. At the time that Von Bloch wrote (1899) he estimated the armies of Germany, Austria and Italy at 5,135,000 and those of France and Russia at 5,354,000 They have grown materially during the intervening years. Italy even at that time had 200 ton guns on her war vessels which were capable of throwing projectiles 6000 pounds in weight which would pierce armour plate 36 inches thick. There are many details given which cannot be transcribed here but the wonderful forecasts given of the probable strength of the nations in the struggle of the future, coupled with the fact that the publication of the work was the direct cause of the erection of the Peace Palace at the Hague make it well worthy of attention at the present time.

There are a series of really excellent articles dealing with the Port of London which are educational and instructive to a marked degree. We are told that the total customs revenue of London in 1899 was £9,650,000, three times as much as Liverpool, six times as much as Bristol, eight times as much as Glasgow and nine times as much as Belfast. But we are told more than this. We are taken along the docks and shown the wonderful warehouses with their commerce from the four quarters of the globe; of the imports of tea, ivory, spices, opium, quinine, perfumery, shells, tobacco, silk, feathers, grain, oilcake, timber, rum and canes. Finally we are enlightened as to the rise of English shipping, and the growth of England's trade. With these examples before us is it not worth while to look into these old volumes, fusty and musty though they be, and pick out some of the splendid things that they contain?—F. M. D.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS. MANN

The funeral took place on Thursday, December 10, of the late Mrs. James Mann, Sr., from the residence of her son, Mr. G. W. Mann, "The Hawthornes," Smith, and was largely attended by many relatives and friends, who came to pay their last tribute to one who was so widely known and beloved by all for the good works which she did.

With the passing of Mrs. Mann, who before her marriage was Margaret Robinson, the oldest surviving pioneer of Smith township has gone. Mrs. Mann was born in Yorkshire, England, in September, 1818, and when six months old, cam ewith her parents and the other members of her family to Canada. The voyage then was vastly different to now as the ships were all sailing vessels, and they were eleven weeks on the ocean in crossing. Her father settled near Port Hope for a year, and then moved to the farm on the 7th line of Smith, now owned by Mr. Frank Fligg. Those who were privileged to know her best have heard many thrilling stories of those pioneer days — days when hardships were endured with wonderful courage and bravery; days when obstacles were met and surmounted with heroic perseverance, and yet they were days when all the countryside were neighbors and the hardships were lightened by the spirit of love and brotherhood.

On June 2, 1841, she married Mr James Mann, whose family had come from New Jersey in 1820, and were the first white settlers on Chemong Lake. They settled on the farm now owned by Mr. G. W. Mann, and it was here that Mrs. Mann lived from the time of her marriage until her death. Here seven children were born to them, six of whom survive her. Her husband predeceased her by seventeen years, also one son, who died in 1908. The other members of her family are Mrs. James Elliott, Dallas, Ore.; Mrs. Thos. R. Mann, Mr. G. Wm. Mann, Mrs. Wm. Garbutt, and Mrs. T. T. Milburn. Forty-nine grandchildren and fifty-four great-grandchildren also survive her.

Shortly after her marriage Mrs. Mann was baptized by Rev. J. Gilmour in Lake Chemong. A letter written by Mrs. Gilmour to a friend at this time will help us to realize something of the conditions in those times:

"You will likely have heard from Mr. Watt of our little church and chapel in the wilds of Canada. Yesterday (Sabbath) three more were baptized in the Chemong Lake. Mr Gilmour previously preached in an adjoining school house, standing on the threshold, that his audience without as well as within might hear. When he closed, all adjourned to the place of baptizing. The scene was most picturesque and impressive, the afternoon beautiful. Here and there was seen an opening formed by the band of industry in the dark forest, and about five miles further, on the other side, as if peeping over the lake, the Indian village. As the number on the beach was too great for all to witness, many went into canoes, and lay outside the spot; yet all was still and serious, the water calm and transparent, and the hymn of praise and prayer of faith arose from the spot, where not long since no holier sound was heard than the orgies of superstition or the fearful warwhoops. On the countenances of the baptized there was a touching solemnity, and altogether the emotions produced were such as led one to say, 'It is good to be here.' "

Since then Mrs. Mann has been one of the most active and most beloved members of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church, until the last three years failing health and weakness kept her from attending the services, but even then her interest in the work and her prayers for the church continued until the last.

The end came quietly and peacefully on Wednesday morning, when surrounded by the members of her family. "God's finger touched her and she slept," and so she passed to the great Hereafter, where she met her pilot face to face. "And so He bringeth them to their desired haven."

The memory of her beautiful life will linger long in the hearts of her friends and will be an inspiration to higher and nobler service towards God and man.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. R. J. McLaren of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. J. R. Webb of the Murray street Baptist church, and the Rev. J. F. Ireland, of Bridgenorth. The pall-bearers were six grandsons: Mr. Joseph Mann, Mr. Garbutt Mann, Mr. Allan Mann, Mr. Elmer Milburn, Mr. Walter Garbutt and Dr. B. E. Kelly.

"And so she passed
To where, beyond these voices,
There is rest and peace."

BRILLIANT FEAT OF A BRITISH SUBMARINE DESTROYS TURKISH WARSHIP

SUSPECTS ARE FREED, POLICE HAVE NO CLUE

Connor Brothers are Given Liberty on Evidence of Train Crew

WHITBY, Dec. 14.—The two Connor brothers who were being held as suspects for the murder of William Stone, the G. T. R. agent at Whitby, were released on Saturday on the positive evidence of the crew of the freight from which they were captured, that they had been seen at Oshawa at the time Stone must have been shot.

C. A. Macdonald, the man who collected the car orders outside the ticket office in Whitby twenty minutes after the shooting occurred, declares that the ticket office light was out, and it would have been impossible for him to have seen young Stone lying on the floor, which statement was proved at a test held on Friday night.

Leslie Cormack, the Bell telephone night operator, declares that Stone made three telephone calls after being shot. The first time he asked Cormack for Chief MacGrotty, saying: "Get the chief, quick; I've been shot." Stone evidently hung up the receiver, as the connection was broken. Cormack called Chief MacGrotty and called Stone again at the station, asking the question: "Who shot you?" "I don't know," came Stone's reply, and again he hung up the receiver. The last time Chief MacGrotty answered the phone, and Cormack, who had cut in on the line, heard Stone's voice say faintly "hello!"

Detectives and private investigators working on the case seem to be up against a blank wall. The lack of motive and the peculiar evidence in the form of blood smears on the ticket rack only serve to make the case more and more confusing.

FRAME HOUSE LOST BY FIRE

Small Organ and Chair All That Was Saved to Tenants

FAMILY WAS ABSENT

A one-storey frame building owned by Mr. Frank Stothart, Water street north, near the water works plant, was wiped out by fire last night, and everything lost save two pieces of furniture. The house was occupied by Mr. Frank Scott, who is at present in Sudbury. No one was at home when the fire started, its origin being a mystery. The building was insured for about $400.00, about half its value, with the Sun Life, who valued the building at about $1000. The total loss would hinge around $1500, as the furniture loss will amount to about $500 at the least, according to the owners of the house. The furniture was insured for $1000 with the Manufacturers' Life Assurance Co. Only a small organ and a rocking chair were saved. Mrs. Scott and her two children lost all their clothing except that which they wore.

It seems that Mrs. Scott and her two children left their home about one hour before the fire, to visit a neighbor's, not twenty-five years distant. There were no fires left burning or lamps lit when they left the house. About nine o'clock, however, flames were noticed by Mrs. Stothart, the next-door neighbor, who sent over and informed Mrs. Scott.

Two Alarms.

A confusion in the sending in of alarms resulted in the fire apparatus reaching the scene too late to be of much assistance other than preventing the flames from igniting two adjoining buildings, one of which is a fine house and the other a barn.

Had it not been for the gallant work of neighbors in the locality the fire might have been much worse.

Bucket Brigade Formed.

A bucket brigade was formed while the arrival of the brigade was awaited, and these men did valiant work. The house was situated right on the river bank, so that a supply of wa-

DECISIVE VICTORY FOR THE RUSSIANS

Successes Were Made Complete by Wide Swinging Movement and Heavy Cavalry Engagement

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14. — Reports reaching here today from the front state that the operations of the Russian forces north of Warsaw, partial success of which was announced last week, have now resulted in a decisive victory. . After having pierced the German front beyond Cicchanow and Przasnys, Russian success on this front according to these advices has been by a wide swinging movement of the advancing Russian left on the main highway from Plock to Mlawa, concluding in a heavy cavalry engagement at Juromineten, seven miles southeast of Mlawa.

A Russian success of this nature would have three important results. The German threat against railway lines leading east from the city would be answered. Russian troops on the right of the Vistula river would be freed to seek crossing and endanger the positions of the left wing of the German army, in the region of Lodz. It is said here that the Russians will now be able to straighten their entire front running to the Mazurian Lakes.

HON. W. T. WHITE IS GREATLY PLEASED

The following letter is self-explanatory:

Dear Mr. Burnham:

I have your letter and am gratified at the splendid response to the appeal on behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The fine spirit and enthusiasm so evident in Peterborough assured the attainment of the goal which you had set out to reach, but it is certainly a matter of congratulation that it likely to be so greatly exceeded.

With kind regards, believe me,
Yours sincerely,
W. T. WHITE.

PROGRESS IN ALSACE AND IN THE ARGONNE

Positions of the Enemy in Aisne Region Are Demolished— Violent Cannonading on the Heights of the Meuse — Trenches Taken in Forest of Montmare

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 14. — The official communication this afternoon says: "There is nothing important to report between the sea and the River Oise. In artillery engagements in the Aisne region our artillery demolished the enemy's positions, and on the heights of the Meuse there was also violent cannonading.

"We have advanced our position in the Argonne and made progress in Alsace and, in the Woevre district have occupied the enemy's trenches in the forest of Montmare and have repulsed two subsequent violent attacks.

"From the time the Servians resumed the offensive up to December 11 they had captured twenty-eight thousand prisoners, seventy-four cannon and forty-four machine guns."

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14. — Advices from Erzerum describe the position of twenty thousand Christians there as precarious, because of their Russian sympathies. Three hundred thousand Turkish troops are mobilized at Erzerum. Hundreds of Armenians have been imprisoned and many hanged in the streets.

SERVIANS MARCH TOWARD BELGRADE.

LONDON, Dec. 14. — A Reuter despatch from Nish, says the Servians are continuing to sweep the country clear of Austrians and are advancing successfully in the direction of Belgrade.

The Russian official communication says that in the fighting southeast of Erzerum on Friday the Turks were everywhere repulsed with severe losses and driven across the Euphrates.

BERLIN, via London, Dec. 14. — An official communication issued today by the German army headquarters says: "Light attacks by the French on parts of our positions between the River Meuse and the Vosges were repulsed, otherwise nothing important remains to be reported.

From the western theatre of war, from East Prussia and Southern Prussia, there is nothing to report.

In Northern Poland our operations are taking their normal course."

QUITE A SHOCK

An episode occurred in one of the principal churches during evening service on Sunday. The minister was delivering his sermon in his usual vigorous style, when after working up to "full steam ahead" he at last brought his big fist down on the desk with a fearful crash, causing several ladies in the choir to jump about a foot out of their seats and utter exclamations of Oh!!! with more or less disturbance of hats, etc., while a male member sitting immediately below the preacher, put on a look of resignation as if expecting to be buried in the debris of the pulpit. Many in the congregation showed, in a different way, that they also had noticed the shock.

WILL TAKE PARISH AT COBOURG

Rev. F. J. Sawers Has Accepted Invitation to St. Peter's Anglican Church

Rev. F. J. Sawers of St. Luke's Church announced to his congregation Sunday morning that he had accepted the invitation to the rectorship of St. Peter's Anglican Church in Cobourg, and that he would be taking up the duties of the new office February 1st next year.

By severing his connection with the church he has so ably controlled for three years and a half Rev. Mr. Sawers will cause a loss to Peterborough that will be difficult to fill. By sound doctrine and untiring zeal he has built up a flourishing parish and his leaving it for another field when the fruits of his labor are being realized makes his departure keenly felt by his parishioners and hosts of warm friends.

Rev. Mr. Sawers, although a comparatively young rector, is rich in ecclesiastical experience. After graduating from Trinity College, Toronto, he accepted a position as master of Trinity College school, Port Hope, where he remained three years. From there he went to Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, as curate, holding the office for five years. Since then he has been rector of the Lakefield field Anglican Church for one year and a half, and St. Luke's Church, Peterborough, for three and a half.

When he received the call to Cobourg some days ago he asked for time to make a decision with the result that he has since notified them of his acceptance and will assume the rectorship February 1st.

STRANGE CHINAMAN LANDS IN THE COOP

A demented Chinaman was locked up in the police station cell yesterday. He came from Owen Sound about one week ago and has been staying at the Dominion Chinese Cafe. His actions during the past week were most peculiar and his friends here stated that he was not all right in his mind.

The police deemed that he was safer cofined until some arrangements were made to have him looked after and they are endeavoring to have some of his friends in Owen Sound take charge of him.

ACQUIRE AND CULTIVATE GOOD HABITS IN LIFE

Just as Easy as Acquiring Bad Habits Says Pastor

That habits of virtue were just as easy to cultivate and acquire as were habits of vice was the opinion expressed last evening by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist Church. One could start early in life and live a righteous life and be virtuous as easily as they could start the other and learn habits that were sinful. If a person were vicious and sinful it was because they had persisted in habits that were of that kind and once a habit was formed it was the hardest thing to change.

He declared that it was a customary thing to speak of a young man beginning life at twenty-one or a girl commencing life at eighteen. Instead of that however Mr. Wilson declared that thousands were winding up their lives at that age so firmly were they slaves of bad habits.

The singing of Miss Ada Richardson last evening was greatly enjoyed. Her rendition of "Fear Ye Not O Israel" was full of expression and sympathy. Miss Richardson's careful articulation makes her vocalism all the more enjoyable.

Graduate nurses are requested to meet in the public library Tuesday afternoon a. 2.30 for Red Cross work. The meeting is an important one and all interested should be present.

IN AND OUT OF GERMANY

Mr. M. H. Staples M.A., Relates Some Interesting Experiences

A VISITOR HERE

Mr. M. H. Staples, M.A., arrived in the city today from Dresden, Germany, which city he left on Nov. 7th. He has been in Germany since the middle of April studying music, the German language, visiting art galleries and getting a first hand knowledge of Europe. He was in Dresden most of the time and has seen the whole development of the war there. Little was known of the course of events until three days before the war broke out. After the Austrian murder everything was quiet, then came the war. The people expected Japan to declare war and Britain to be neutral. They thought France would be an easy conquest, that they would march quickly to Paris, subdue France and that would leave Germany to carry on the war against Russia on French money.

There is a law for nearly everything in Germany. Everywhere you go you see the sign, "This is forbidden." The newspapers are forbidden to publish false news or reports, hence the people believe their own journals implicitly. They think the English newspapers lie. "During all the time I was there," said Mr. Staples, "I read the report of only one reverse to German arms in the newspapers and that was an unimportant affair on the Russian frontier. I am informed that the whole Russian frontier of Germany is one vast trench strongly fortified. Of course naval battles are reported as well as the English official reports of them.

As to labour conditions, Mr. Staples said that there was no trouble in Germany. As fast as men were out of work who were not in the army, they were shipped off to dig trenches. The German soldiers' pay is about a mark a day (twenty-five cents) with smaller sums for children. As there are really no men in the cities the factories are nearly all closed down.

The men not at the front are in training camp.

Cheered the Declaration.

Mr. Staples was in Dresden the night Britain's declaration of war was announced. The people simply went out of their heads. Everybody

INVASION EXPECTED BY BADEN POWELL

Scout Leader Says Kaiser Will Try to Land in England

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Gen. Baden-Powell shares the opinion of many other British military experts who believe that Germany fully expects to invade England, if possible, and will direct its activities towards the commercial cities in the north of England, rather than toward London and the resort cities of the south. In the opinion of Gen. Baden-Powell the German Emperor will endeavor to land at least 90,000 troops in England.

"I know that the general idea is," says Gen. Baden-Powell, in a recent interview, "that the attempt to invade England will be made on the coast of Norfolk or Suffolk. Personally, I think that the Yorkshire coast is more likely, for the Germans will first desire to invade the industrial centres of the north. They appreciate what effect that would have if they succeeded. Once let them get hold of some of the big manufacturing towns, factories would be smashed up and ruined, and I estimate that they could throw 14,000,000 persons out of employment, rendering them destitute and starving. It is certain that even by a short, sharp raid they could do a tremendous amount of damage."

Gen. Baden-Powell is far less optimistic about the war than many of England's public men. The hero of Mafeking, in discussing the present crisis, said:-

"There are still many persons in country districts, and even in some of our large towns, who do not realise what this great war means—that Britain's fight is one for her very existence. We receive encouraging reports that we are doing well, but we must remember that one side or the other must go under forever. At present it looks as if the wind is blowing in our favor, but there is always the unexpected to consider. You can never tell. The right thing to do is to try to smash the Germans now, which means that every man must put his shoulder to the wheel."

A branch of the Home Guard is being formed at Kinmount, enrollment being made at the post office. The large C. O. F. hall has been offered for drill purposes.

A BRITISH SUBMARINE ENTERS MINE FIELD AND DESTROYS SHIP ON GUARD

Turkish Battleship is Sent to the Bottom by Submarine B. Eleven Which Makes Her Escape in Chase by Cruisers and Destroyers

WAS SUBMERGED NINE HOURS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 14. — A communication issued by the official bureau today announces that the Turkish battleship Messudieh has been torpedoed by a British submarine. The Messudieh was a very old boat built forty years ago and reconstructed twelve years ago. She was about ten thousand tons with seventeen knots' speed.

It was submarine B 11, under Commander Holbrook, which entered the Dardanelles, passing five rows of submarine mines, and torpedoed the Messudieh, which was guarding a mine field.

When last seen the Messudieh was sinking by her stern.

The submarine, chased by cruisers and destroyers, retruned safely, being submerged on one occasion for nine hours.

Lieut. Commander Holbrook of the submarine B 11 is one of five brothers all serving with the colors.

UNANIMOUS CALL EXTENDED BY KNOX PRESBYTERIANS TO REV. MR. McKENZIE OF LACHUTE

Knox Presbyterian Church has extended a call to Rev. Mr. McKenzie, of Lachute, Quebec, who took the services on Sunday, December 7th. Three other ministers were heard by the congregations, and at the meeting held on Sunday, after the morning service, Mr. McKenzie was chosen on the first ballot. When Rev. R. Pogue, the Moderator, announced the result, his suggestion that the call be made unanimous met with a ready response. The salary is $1500.

Rev. Mr. McKenzie is a young man and was recommended to the congregation by Rev. H. J. Keith. He is a graduate of McGill University, a gold medalist, and for some time has been acting as assistant at Lachute.

Rev. Dr. McTavish of Toronto took the services at the church yesterday. Anniversary services next Sunday will be preached by Rev. Principal Jordan, of Queen's University.

CANADA'S TRADE.

THE TRADE RETURNS just received from the Department of Customs show that Canada is in a better position than was anticipated. While the total trade has depreciated fifty-one million dollars for the six months ending September, 1914, as compared with the same period for 1913, yet there is a better balance between the exports and imports of this country. The total trade for the six months in 1913 was $551,602,433, and for 1914 it was $500,634,599. There is still thus a good probability that our total trade for a year will be over the billion mark. The exports for this six months period in 1913 amounted to $211,272,542, as against $220,296,771, so that there has been an increase in our selling of nine million dollars. As to the goods Canada bought which are under the head of imports, in the six months period in 1913, these amounted to $340,729,891, as against $280,337,828, a decrease of $60,392,063, or, roughly, sixty million dollars. Thus, while we have bought sixty million dollars' worth less and have sold nine million dollars' worth more of goods this year than in the period for the previous year, there is a decrease in revenue of nearly sixteen millions. This decrease does not matter so much to a country like Canada, with splendid credit and borrowing facilities in the British market, which is the strongest in the world. The returns indicate a healthy conservatism that ought to have a beneficent effect on the trade and prosperity of the coming year.

PROHIBITION IN NEW ZEALAND.

THE ELECTION RETURNS, though incomplete, indicate that the licensing position is unchanged and that national prohibition has not been carried. The prohibitionists received a setback in several places.

The returns give the Government 38 members of Parliament, the Opposition 30, and the Labour Social Democrats 8. As the latter support the Opposition party, the strength in Parliament is equal, though the votes of the soldiers abroad are yet to be counted and may affect the result.

These returns are hardly full enough for much comment. They seem to indicate that public opinion in New Zealand is pretty evenly divided. That may mean a considerable gain for national prohibition in that loyal and far-away dominion of the British Empire. If the division remains as it is, a new election seems very probable, for the Government will hardly be able to continue with no working majority. What a new election would do for national prohibition there remains to be seen.

NAVAL POLICY.

IN DISCUSSING Naval Policy, the Toronto News has an editorial that is well worth pondering by every patriotic Canadian, in view of the efforts of so many Liberal newspapers to tear up the "scrap of paper," of a truce to party strife, and to deliver under-cuts at the present Conservative Government of Canada.

With one arm, the News says, the Globe holds up "the truce" as a shield against criticism of its own course on the defence question; with the other it slashes away at the Government. It now recalls Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposal of 1913, that, instead of building three Dreadnoughts, Canada should place a fleet unit on the Atlantic and another on the Pacific. The Opposition leader's hurriedly drawn plan might have been taken seriously had his record while in office not been so lamentable.

In twelve years he had done more to block adequate preparations for the present crisis than any other man in the Empire. He it was who killed all projects for joint Imperial defence as they came up at successive Imperial conferences. He persistently trifled with the question and left office without ordering any ships. He went so far as to enunciate the theory of Canadian non-combatancy in time of war. His belated two-fleet unit policy was intended to embarrass the Government and prevent any real participation by the Dominion in Imperial defence arrangements.

In the House of Commons on April 7th, 1913, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "There is no question of an emergency; the alleged emergency is simply a pretense and a make-believe." In the same spirit he said: "Emergency! Who can talk about emergency? The very idea of emergency has been, by the discussion, dissipated just as the mist of the morning is dissipated by the rays of the rising sun." At the opening of Parliament in January of this year he expressed similar opinions. In view of these and like utterances, unfortunately standing to his credit, the Opposition leader is naturally anxious for an everlasting truce on the naval issue.

Having used the Senate to reject the Admiralty's advice while there was yet time to strengthen the Imperial navy against the present war, he and the defeated partizans, who supported him in that unpatriotic course, flee when the subject is mentioned. The record of the Toronto Star, the Toronto Globe, and other Opposition journals, is quite as pitiful on this issue as that of the disappointed politicians whom they support. Their editorial columns for three years past have reeked with ridicule of the German menace, of the Borden-Churchill policy, of Sir John French—in short, of defence preparations on land and sea.

Yet today these journals have not the good sense to follow the example of their party leaders by maintaining a discreet silence in the hope that the public may forget the arrogant pacificism and ill-informed dogmatism of which they were guilty right up to the outbreak of war. It is useless for them to plead that knowledge of German policies was unavailable. The war itself has revealed little new as to Prussian intentions and Prussian methods. The Kaiser's "shining armor" speech is years old, and we long knew how his naval officers regularly drank to "The Day" when they would destroy British sea power.

For years the Will-to-Power philosophy of Treitschke and Bernhardi has been taught in German text-books, in German universities and schools. It has long been evident that the nation had become saturated with aggressive militarism. The children imbibed the doctrine at their parents' knees, the national song became "Germany Over All," an already gigantic army was enlarged and converted into the most powerful military machine. In spite of Great Britain's repeated offers to enter into a mutual lessening of new armaments, the Germans went about their own business of becoming all-powerful on the water as on shore.

The actual conflict, therefore, is only the natural outcome of what went before in Germany and of what was plain to every observer unblinded by wilful ignorance or ingrained partizanship. Now that the awful struggle is upon us the pacificist Opposition papers outdistanced Government journals in demanding defence preparations and expeditionary forces which cannot be equipped without the arms and accoutrements which the Toronto Globe and the Toronto Star were determined should not be purchased. These journals might at least have the grace to make public confession of the stupidity of which they were guilty up to the end of July, 1914. Instead, they rush madly to the front of the procession, shouting maledictions on German heads and demanding impossible expeditionary forces—just as if they were not largely to blame for the Dominion's inability to do more than it is doing against the common enemy.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WHAT WOULD the Publicity Department of the Patriotic Fund have been without Mr. Frank Dobbin? His long experience in newspaper work was a qualification that made him the best man for the position, and his untiring efforts contributed a great deal to the success of the campaign.

M. K. COWAN, K. C., has stated that seven or eight people in Hamilton will be prosecuted as a result of Judge Snider's report on graft investigation in that city. It seems strange to us that so small a number are being sacrificed. If we know anything about Hamilton, there should be a jailful of prosecutions made.

THE CANADIAN'S HOME SONG

(Duncan Campbell Scott.)

There is rain upon the window,
There is wind upon the tree;
The rain is slowly sobbing,
The wind is blowing free:
It bears my weary heart
To my own country.

I hear the white-throat calling,
Hid in the hazel ring;
Deep in the misty hollows
I hear the sparrows sing;
I see the bloodroot starting
All silvered with the spring.

I skirt the buried reed-beds,
In the starry solitude;
My snowshoes creak and whisper,
I have my ready blood;
I hear the lynx-cub yelling
In the gaunt and shaggy wood.

I hear the wolf-tongued rapid
Howl in the rocky break;
Beyond the pines at the portage
I hear the trapper wake
His en roulant ma boule
From the clear gloom of the lake.

Oh! take me back to the homestead,
To the great rooms warm and low,
Where the frost creeps on the casement,
When the year comes in with snow
Give me, give me the old folk
Of the dear long ago.

O land of the dusky balsam
And the darling maple tree,
Where the cedar buds and berries
And the pine grows strong and free!
My heart is weary and weary
For my own country.

The World's Greatest Financier.

(Victoria Colonist.)

Great Britain under normal circumstances invests from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 in foreign countries. This money is now available for the prosecution of the war, and partly explains the excellent financial position in which the Motherland finds herself. A Swedish professor, Gustav Cassel, commenting on these figures, says: "Britain is the capitalist par excellence who can live on the returns of her capital and who, thanks to her resources, can force the whole world to contribute toward her war expenditure."

BERESFORD STORIES

Some Reminiscences of the Famous Admiral

Lord Charles Beresford, as sailor, statesman and sportsman, is one of the most interesting and picturesque figures in our time; and no man living has had more or more varied experience ashore and afloat.

Several of Lord Charles' anecdotes as told in his "Memories" recently published, refer to his friendship with Royal personages, and one of the best concerns the late King Edward, when Prince of Wales.

On one occasion, says "Condor Charlie," when I was driving the Prince of Wales on my coach to a meet of the Four-in-Hand Club at The Magazine, Hyde Park, a man who was quite unknown to me shouted:

"'Ullo, Chawley, 'ow are yer? I see you've got 'Wiles' up alongside of yer."

"Some of your friends seem very familiar," said the Prince, who took the remark with perfect good humor.

The first racehorse owned by King Edward was bought by Lord Charles for him; it was called Stonehenge, and the King and Lord Charles were partners in it.

Lord Charles used to get his officers to write essays on subjects connected with the navy. One of them, a little middy, in his contribution, suggested that the older officers should defer more to the middies, who, "having young and vigorous minds, were naturally better fitted to grapple with problems which baffled the older and slower intellect!"

This particular young gentleman must, I think, have applied his vigorous mind to the problem of how to obtain a generous allowance of leave. I trust I did him no injustice; but whenever the fleet lay off the coasts of Scotland, he was afflicted with a grievous toothache, requiring an immediate visit to the dentist.

When he had been ashore to have a tooth out in every port in Scotland, I sent for him.

"Tell me," I said, "how many teeth you have left? For I make out that you have had forty-six teeth extracted in Scotland alone."

The middy did not reply.

It is not generally known that Lord Charles was once asked—by Isaac Butt—to take up the leadership of the Home Rule party. He declined on the ground that Ireland wanted Land Reform more than Home Rule; and he advocated such reform on lines that adversely affected his own income. His popularity among Irishmen of all classes and creeds and politics is well known. One of his Lordship's sayings is that horses are like Irishmen, you can do anything with them, if you understand them.

A Spy's Message

I was shown a specimen of the cables which the State censorship has prevented being sent, says a London newspaperman. An innocent looking cable it seemed in all conscience as it was handed over the counter of the cable company. I won't give the cable itself, but I will give one on similar lines which will explain its significance:

"Beatrice likes aristocratic countess cinema picture offered.—Olive Lindsay."

Imagine a message like this addressed to a hotel in any city. Would it ever strike one that it was a report from a spy telling a superior the whereabouts at that time of certain English warships? The authorities, however, were suspicious of it, and just as the example I gave, when only the first letters are read, makes the word "Blackpool," so the real cable they found when read in the same way, disclosed the name of a well known port.

Didn't Like Cold Steel

A private in the Cameron Highlanders describes a bayonet charge which routed part of the enemy's forces. The Camerons were a unit in the First Brigade, and the Germans attacked the brigade, which had the Camerons and the Black Watch in the centre, with the Coldstream Guards and the Scots Guards on their flanks. At one time the flanks seemed to be getting into a tight corner, and the Black Watch and the Camerons resorted to the bayonet. "We had to cover about 900 yards or so," he says, "and the German machine-guns were on us, but we kept at it and they scattered. The Prussian Guards were amongst the enemy's force at this point, and they too preferred flight to meeting the bare steel."

Wounded Hearts Sewn Up

A Russian surgeon named Zeidler reported thirty-one patients who recovered from stab wounds of the heart in the hospital at Abuchow. Prompt and rapid operation is the probable reason for this good showing.

The patients were all put under the influence of ether very soon after the injury, part of the chest wall was removed, the heart lifted from its bed and the stitches quickly introduced between pulsations. The bony chest wall over the heart was not put back in place, that organ being left covered only by skin and muscle. This was done to give the heart room to expand and to prevent adhesions from embarrassing the heart's action.

The lazy man who is determined to do nothing is generally sure of a steady job.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I understand that there has been some comment on the fact that the team which canvassed subdivision No. 2 for the Patriotic Fund last September never published a detailed list of subscriptions. It is true that no list was published and none will be. The committee in deference to the expressed wishes of a large number of the subscribers decided that no names would be published.

The complete list of all subscribers was handed to Mr. Adams, the treasurer of the fund, with the total amount collected, $37.50, on Saturday, October 3rd.

These lists are still in the possession of Mr. Adams and can be seen at the city treasurer's office any time during office hours.

I trust that the above explanation will remove any doubts that may have arisen in the minds of those who subscribed to the fund and to its reaching the proper destination.

Yours truly,

W. G. SHINER,

On behalf of the team.

Storming the Heights

Daunted by the pitiless hail of lead from the German machine guns that swept a slope up which they had been told to advance, a certain French company hesitated for a few moments. Suddenly a private named Olivier cried out, "You hesitate! Then I will advance alone," and he made good his word. Encouraged by his example, the section followed him into the zone of fire and dashed up to the crest. Olivier reached the height many yards in front of the others, and in consequence was for some seconds the sole target of the hostile fire. A bullet pierced his head, and the hero's body fell back and rolled down the slope into the ranks of his comrades. But his death was not fruitless, for the height was won.

War Affects Human Race

One of the evils of a war is the lowering of the national physique. In the generation after the Franco-German War there was an appreciable decrease in the stature of Frenchmen through the large number of young men of good physique who were killed.

War makes no distinction between the rights of men and the rights of property.

Many of the most valuable things in the world are utterly useless as security for an advance at your uncle's.

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

The Wooden Soldier

By CAPTAIN F. A. MITCHEL

In Virginia in 1862 a Federal captain was standing on a rise in the ground looking down a turnpike which extended through a depression and, rising again, entered a small town half a mile away. Hearing horses' hoofs behind him, he turned and saw his general, attended by his staff, riding toward him.

"Turn out the guard, the general commanding!" cried the picket.

"Never mind the guard," said the general and, riding to the point where the captain had been standing, looked at the town beyond with wistful eye, then said to his subordinate:

"Captain, how many men are there in your picket post?"

"There are thirty under my command distributed over a quarter of a mile. But right here I have eight men and a sergeant."

"Have you seen any indications of the enemy in the town?"

"None whatever."

The general turned away with evident reluctance.

"I wish you," he said, "to keep a sharp lookout for the Confederates there. The place is of great strategic importance to us in this campaign. By tomorrow morning General D.'s brigade will come up and, provided the enemy has not already done so, will occupy the town. I am hoping that he will be in time, for the fate of this campaign rests with that position. If the enemy comes in there tonight he will fortify it and we shall not be able to drive him out without a hard fight, which in our present condition would not be practicable. Keep a sharp lookout and keep me advised."

"May I not advance my post to the town, general?"

"No; that would involve an advance of the entire picket line."

The general rode away. Private Tom Bixby, who had been standing at attention beside the road and had heard what had been said, dropped the butt of his musket on the ground and resumed the position of a picket on the lookout. The rest of the afternoon his mind was on the town and the question which side would get there first. At sunset he was relieved and ate his supper. Then, lighting his pipe, he sat down on the ridge and smoked and looked for signs of soldiers in the town on the other side of the valley. When it was dark he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, went to his captain and, saluting respectfully, said:

"Captain, it seems to me that, considering we can't see what's going on in the dark, some one should reconnoiter."

"You may go if you choose."

"All right. I'll just walk down the road and up the other side of the valley, near enough to see if there is any stir, and if there is I'll come back and let you know."

Tom sauntered away into the darkness. On reaching the edge of the town he saw citizens moving about, but no soldiers. The people went to bed early, and when everything was quiet Tom made an entry. Passing a shop under a sign "Otto Schmitt, Tobacconist," Tom, thinking it a good opportunity to replenish his stock of tobacco, went inside. After buying what he wanted he fell into conversation with the proprietor, who, being a German, had no especial affiliation with the Confederate cause. Before the shop stood the figure of a man lighting his pipe. Schmitt, who was an ingenious mechanic, had made it himself for a sign. With one hand the figure held the pipe, while in the other was a match. In the pipe bowl was tobacco. A rubber tube led from the pipestem into the store. Schmitt by pulling on a wire could light the match and smoke from the shop. Tom noticed the mechanism near the shop window and asked what it was. Schmitt not only explained it to him, but put it in operation.

An idea popped into Tom's brain. If he had that figure and connections on the side of the town from which the Confederates would approach possibly he might make them believe that the Federals had got ahead of them and had occupied the town. He took Schmitt into his confidence and told him that if he would lend him his sign and help him carry it to a new location he thought the Federal general might pay him very handsomely—that is, if the ruse succeeded.

The German hesitated. Most of the citizens of the place were Confederate sympathizers, and he feared that if his act became known he would suffer for it. But Tom assured him that if the town was unoccupied by the Confederates at daylight the Federals would surely enter it in force, and the hope of profit won him over. He shut up his shop, put out the lights, and an hour later, when not a footstep was to be heard on the street, he and Tom carried the figure to the road by which the Confederates would be likely to advance. Reaching an eminence on which a picket could be seen from a distance, they set up the dummy in the middle of the road. Tom could not take off its Confederate uniform, but he could put his own over it, which he did, and rested his musket in the hollow of the arm holding the pipe.

Schmitt meanwhile was making the attachments, filling the pipe and leading the tube to a convenient place of concealment, behind which he had Tom took position and waited.

It was 11 o'clock when they set up the dummy. A wagon passed into the town a half hour later, but Tom and his assistant heard it coming in time to remove the figure and set it up again as soon as the team was gone. This was the only interruption that occurred. At 1 o'clock Tom heard a distant sound like the rumbling of artillery over a bridge. The wind being from the south, the sound very faint and Tom's hearing acute, he judged that whoever was crossing the bridge was miles away. He wished he could be in two places at once. He would have liked to go back and hurry up the Federals who were coming and remain where he was at the same time.

In another hour the sounds of an approaching force were unmistakable, and not much later the tramp of men was audible. Then down the road Tom heard an officer order skirmishers to deploy, covering the road and each side of it.

"Light up," said Tom to Schmitt.

There was a tiny flash, which rose and fell as Schmitt pulled on the tube, while clouds of tobacco smoke rose from the pipe. There was just light enough to reveal the figure to those advancing without their being able to see that it was a dummy.

There was a crack, and a bullet jarred the wooden soldier.

"Stop smoking," whispered Tom, and, screened by the darkness, he ran to the figure, which still stood bravely on its feet, and, seizing the musket, fired a shot that went singing down the road. Then, drawing his revolver, he fired three shots in quick succession.

"What's that for?" asked Schmitt.

"They'll think it a signal for our troops in the town to warn them that the enemy is coming. They won't dare come on against an unknown force. My opinion is that if our troops come up before the enemy can see that there's no one here except three men, one of them a dummy, we've won. You can't do anything more here. Suppose you go down the road on the other side of the town and hurry up whoever is coming. If this game succeeds you'll be well paid, I'm sure."

Schmitt set off through the town, having little over half a mile to go to reach the Union picket post.

It was now about an hour before dawn. Tom kept his position on the ridge, from which he sent an occasional shot, always changing his position between shots to make the enemy believe that they were fired by different men. The fire was not returned, for the enemy could see no one to fire at. They were very quiet. Tom's fear was that they were moving around to push forward on his flank, where they would not meet with any opposition whatever, and the fact that the town was unoccupied would be apparent.

For the greater part of an hour Tom stood between the Confederates and the town. He was within sound of the troops below and could hear the usual noises made by soldiers on the march, halted while the commanding officer deliberated as to what he should do. That was the longest hour Tom ever spent in his life. Every minute he expected to hear the command "Forward!" given and to see through the darkness a dim mass coming up the road. His imagination served him many a trick. At one time a stump appeared to be a Confederate standing with his musket to his shoulder; at another he was sure that he heard the tramp of men coming nearer and nearer.

But all these proved to be nothing but scares. The Confederate commander was not minded to walk into a death trap that he could not see.

In some twenty minutes after Schmitt left Tom he came near the picket post and made himself known. He was admitted to the lines and rushed to the general, not far distant, who, on hearing his story, ordered a regiment under arms instantly and pushed forward. In this he disobeyed an order of his superior, but took the risk. In less than fifteen minutes the men were marching toward the town and, under Schmitt's guidance, to the point held by Tom Bixby and his wooden support. Silently ranging themselves along the ridge on each side of the road, they waited the dawn and the coming of the brigade that was supposed to be advancing.

As soon as it was light enough to see the enemy he was discerned drawn up in line of battle at the foot of a declivity. An officer on horseback in the middle of the road was looking up through a pair of glasses. But he could see few of the Federals, for their colonel had posted the men where they would be concealed. However, he made himself known to the Confederates, who withdrew out of range.

Before sunrise the tramp of men was heard in the town, and it was evident to those at the front that the expected brigade had arrived. They had no sooner been distributed at the weaker points when the general commanding the Confederates ordered a part of his force to feel them to determine their strength. After some desultory firing, becoming convinced that the town was occupied by a force strong enough to hold it against him, he withdrew his army.

When all was over the Federal general rode out to inspect Tom Bixby's Quaker soldier. Never before was an officer more delighted. The desired result had been accomplished and he had been vindicated in disobeying orders. He asked Tom what he could do for him, and Tom told him whatever he did must be for Schmitt, whose tobacco sign had won.

Tom was given a commission, and Schmitt was appointed to a sutlership, which he found very profitable.

THE BEST CHRISTMAS TREE.

The balsam fir makes the best Christmas tree because of its regular form and beautiful dark green foliage. Spruce is used also, but is not as attractive in form and color as balsam. Hemlock, pine and cedars are used occasionally, but are not considered equal to either the fir or the spruce. Every one interested should try to prevent clear cutting, but should favor thinning of the young forest, leaving the best formed, most rapid growing trees on the ground to form the future forest. The thinnings should be made in the densest young stands only, and no large, open spaces should be left. The state will suffer a great loss if the young spruce and fir forests are clear cut for Christmas trees.

Where the forest is under rational methods of management the Christmas tree is a legitimate byproduct in the development of the forest. Whether the forest is planted or starts naturally from seed there will usually be many more trees on the ground than soil and moisture conditions and the proper development of the trees justify. If the small trees which are crowding others of greater value are not removed nature will do it and that in a less effective way than if the small trees are removed as a thinning from the developing forest. Trees six feet high and two inches in diameter at the butt are most in demand, although larger sizes are frequently sold at good prices. The Christmas tree, provided it is properly cut, is a preliminary crop from the forest which should be taken out on the same principle as vegetable crops are thinned.

How She Escaped.

"Algy fell in love with a girl at the glove counter. He bought gloves every day for a week. To discourage his attentions she became a manicure."

"Then he had his nails manicured every day, I s'pose."

"Just so. However, I don't think he'll follow her any farther."

"Why not?"

"Then she got employment with a dentist."—Houston Post.

Meadow Larks.

In many localities the meadow lark is shot for game. From the farmer's point of view this is a mistake since its value as an insect eater is far greater than any sport it can furnish. The boll weevil and the alfalfa weevil are among the beetles it habitually eats, 25 per cent of its diet being this class of food. It also eats large quantities of caterpillars, cutworms, grasshoppers and army worms.

RESPLENDENT GIRDLES.

Applied In Various Striking Ways to Smart Evening Costumes.

VELVET EVENING DRESS.

Second in effect to the rich material of which the season's smart evening costume is made is the varied yet ever graceful girdle. Girdles are found extending up to the bust and down below the hips. They are wound straight about the figure or are twisted from high to low, crossing and winding and tying in unexpected fashions and places. The girdle which starts at the shoulders and around the arm eyes in front and, crossing, forms the entire front of the bodice, dropping low and tying in back, is a rather familiar manifestation of this erratic sashing.

A gown of gold colored velvet, with overskirt and flaring peplum of white tulle, is pictured here. Braiding and beads trim the overskirt over a band of the velvet. An elaborate girdle of beaded pearls with pendent ropes of pearls and gold colored beads is worn with it.

GIRL'S SCHOOL FROCK.

Quaint Design With Russian Blouse and Kimono Sleeves.

This school frock for the child of ten years is of navy serge combined with roman striped silk. The Russian blouse of serge has inset kimono sleeves of silk with cuffs of serge. A broad belt of striped silk is laced in front with a dark blue silk cord. The accordion plaited skirt is of serge.

GIRL'S SERGE GOWN.

Such a pattern could very well be carried out in heavy cotton fabrics.

LACE TUNICS.

Beautiful Gowns For Afternoon or Evening Embellished With These.

Russian tunics of lace, which hang from bust to ankles, will be the sole trimming of many afternoon and evening gowns. This lace is not plain, but its pattern is worked over with gold or silver bullion.

An extremely beautiful gown of white satin is plaited and overhung by one of these new laces. The mesh of the lace is the popular craquele, and the mistletoe garland holds silver berries and gold leaves along its border.

Can you imagine a gown of pink satin completely covered in a silver trimmed white lace which was bordered by a facing of black tulle? The combination was charming. One odd net displayed a multicolored Chinese house woven into its pattern. Ribbons and tulle flowers will be largely employed in trimming the new evening costumes, and some of the soft draperies will be caught by bunches of velvet fruit.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 12.—The wheat market opened steady on December and May. July was not traded in until late in the day and was ⅝c higher. May oats were 3-8c higher, and flax unchanged to 1-8c higher at opening. Winnipeg followed the advance of American markets, but not quite on a parallel. The enquiry for exports continued active and some sales were made this morning, one firm working 50,000 bushels in the early hours. A sharp advance took place at the close, attributed to heavy export sales in Chicago. Wheat options closed 7-8c to 1c higher; oats 3-8c higher and flax 1¼c to 1 3-8c higher.

Cash trade is now on a winter basis, and practically at a standstill. A few scattered transactions take place, with a view to completing cargoes. Cash wheat closed 7-8c higher.

Inspections Friday were 400 cars, as against 1437 last year and in sight were 230.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—The enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat was good again today, and as cables continue to come strong at higher prices, sales of odd loads are being made for December-January shipment. The tone of the local market for coarse grains is steady, but the volume of business doing is small, the demand being still limited from both local and outside buyers for supplies. There is no change in flour, for which the demand is quiet but the trade in millfeed is active and firm.

Butter is steady, but demand is only for small lots. Receipts for week 1718 packages, as compared with 3098 for the same week last year. Cheese is strong, but the trade is quiet. Receipts for the week were 2934 boxes, as against 1579 a year ago.

Demand for eggs good and prices firm. Receipts for week 554 cases, as compared with 1489 for the corresponding week a year ago.

Cold Feet.

During a marriage ceremony in Scotland recently the bridegroom looked extremely wretched, and he got so fidgety, standing first on one foot and then on the other, that the "best man" decided he would find out what the trouble was.

"What's up, Jack?" he whispered, "Hae ye lost the ring?"

"No," answered the unhappy one, with a woful look, "the ring's safe enough, but, man, I've lost ma enthusiasm."

Solicitude.

"You don't know how I worry about my husband," said the tired looking woman as she leaned on her broom for a moment.

"Why, there's nothing to worry about," answered the neighbor. "He's sitting in a chair on the back porch, fast asleep."

"Yes. But some time when I'm not there to look after him he's going to fall out of that chair and hurt himself."

Worth It All.

The blunders of the newly rich
  May serve to cause a smile,
Their struggling to be correct
  And do the thing in style.
But, though they are the butt of jests
  And much good natured mirth,
Don't worry over them a bit.
  They get their money's worth.

Folks who have had it all the while
  May look on them with scorn
Because they do not always act
  As to the manner born,
But they keep jogging on their way
  And doing very well
Just buying trifles here and there
  That others have to sell.

They may imagine knives were made
  For service and may try
To swallow one at every meal
  To show they are not shy,
But when it comes to sitting down
  And bidding for the gout
They have the best there is to eat
  To round their stomachs out.

Oh, there are compensating things
  For money newly got,
For in the several walks of life
  At times it helps a lot,
And, though on manners they may trip
  At times and almost fall,
They do not dodge the grocer man
  Nor fear the tailor's call.

The Organization Will be Governed by Advisory Board of Fifteen Members

The total abstinence societies of St. Peter's Cathedral, Church of the Sacred Heart and Church of the Immaculate Conception intend amalgamating as one organization. The matter has been under way for some time and in the course of a few weeks all arrangements will be sufficiently matured to hold a meeting of the three societies. Yesterday a deputation from St. Peter's T.A.S. was present at the meeting of the Sacred Heart society and the latter mentioned body passed a resolution heartily endorsing the idea.

It is the intention to have the various societies meet once a month in their own rooms and also hold a meeting of the united societies once a month. The St. Alphonsus Lyceum will be the headquarters. The big organization will be governed by an advisory board of fifteen men, five being selected from each society. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., who has always been closely identified with the cause of temperance in this city will be the spiritual adviser of the main organization.

New Members Received.

Thirty-six new members took the pledge of total abstinence at the meeting of the Sacred Heart Total Abstinence Society yesterday afternoon. In the morning Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the church, made an eloquent plea for the cause of temperance.

The meeting was one of the largest ever held by the society and was further marked by a very interesting address by Solicitor V. J. McElderry on early missionary work in Canada. Nomination of officers for the coming six months was held, the elections will take place next meeting.

Russian Cruisers Take Steamer.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14. — (Via London.)—A Turkish steamer loaded with wheat bound for Constantinople, has been captured near the mouth of the Danube by Russian Black Sea cruisers, which have brought the vessel to Odessa, says a despatch from that port.

Russian torpedo boat destroyers, it is also reported, have sunk several Turkish sail boats loaded with ammunition near the coast of Asia Minor.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS GOT THERE FIRST.

For patronizing paternalism that beats anything in Germany, commend us to the circular recently sent out by the Chicago Herald entitled "How to Get the Trade of Our Next-Door Neighbor."

The neighbor in the case happens to be Canada. The people who are to get it are, of course, the manufacturers of the United States. All the reasons why and the methods how to get this trade are set forth with characteristic cocksurety. We are supposed to be cut clean off from the $150,000,000 worth of goods imported from England, which is no more true than to say that the British navy does not control the sea. The Americans will benevolently supply us with these goods. Thanks awfully! As to the $26,000,000 imported from countries other than England and the United States — why, of course, grab that also. Nothing easier. They say we have nine million people — approximately correct; that we speak a common language—touching affinity; that we deal in dollars and cents—which, of course, we learned from the United States. Our crops this year, while not so big as other years, are more valuable; therefore, grab the farmer's money and send it across the line.

Our credit is said to be good; thanks again, but we are the people who made it so.

These American journalists are the people who, ever since the war began, have been building cloud-castles of the trade they intended to grab from all belligerent countries in all parts of the world. For three months they have been counting up by billions a year what this war will mean to the great neutral nation—the United States.

But the one thing they seem to have overlooked is that it was possible for Canadian manufacturers to be alive to the situation also, and, while they have been planning excursions of American manufacturers into the Canadian field, the Canadian manufacturers and those American manufacturers who have become Canadians by establishing branches in this country, have risen to the opportunity, and with the aid of the press have created a loyal national sentiment throughout the Dominion which will make it exceedingly difficult for these Americans to seize any portion of Canadian trade to which they are not fairly entitled.

GERMAN ADVANCES SUFFER REVERSES

Fighting Day and Night on Lowicz Front, in Poland, is Strongly in Favor of the Russian Arms, Says Petrograd Official Statement--- Strong German Position is Captured.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 14. — A statement from the Russian General Staff says:

"In the Mlawa region we have brought our offensive to a successful conclusion on the whole of the front.

"On the 12th instant we captured a German position in the region of Przasnysz and Tsekhanoff, and chased the retreating enemy towards his frontier.

"In this district also our cavalry made a special charge and inflicted very heavy losses upon the enemy.

"On the front of Lowicz-Llow the Germans, clinging stubbornly to the attack, suffered important losses at the hands of our troops, who captured in this region another position to the north of the Bzura river.

"In the other regions on the left bank of the Vistula nothing has occurred but unimportant encounters.

"To the south of Cracow the situation is unchanged. The battle there continues.

"In the Carpathians our troops and the Austrians continue their manoeuvres."

The following official despatch has been issued: On the 10th and 11th furious German attacks on the front at Lowicz were continued night and day, and were repulsed with enormous losses to the Germans. The Russians counter-attacked with the bayonet. On the left bank of the Vistula there was cross-firing in some places, when the Germans receded from the Russian lines.

In an obstinate battle south of Cracow on the 10th the Russians took four guns and seven machine-guns, and 4,000 prisoners. The battle continued on the 11th. In the Carpathian passes at Donayetz and Balligard considerable Austrian forces are attempting a forward movement.

The Army Messenger, the official organ of the Russian War Office, yesterday, concerning the operations on the southern front, says that the Austrians were heavily reinforced by German troops, it is stated, and directed an energetic attack upon the Russian lines. They were repulsed, and the check was then turned into a hasty and disorderly flight. Five batteries were captured, and an entire column of armored motor cars taken.

After a battle of prime importance south of Cracow, in the Carpathians, the Russians now have a broad solid line pressing towards the southeastern salient of the Kaiser's province of Silesia. The calculations of the German staff, which succeeded the Archduke Frederick in command of the German armies south of Cracow, are now believed to be completely upset.

Supplying some of the details of these operations, the correspondent of The Daily News at Petrograd, telegraphs:

"Gen. von Hindenburg directed the Austrians to form a new army of all the available troops beyond the Carpathians, with the addition of two divisions brought from Servia, and attack the Russian left flank. The Russians, he believed, would be compelled to fight simultaneously on two fronts, the Austrians in the south combined with the Germans and Austrians in the west. But the Russians linked up their columns on the southern slopes of the Carpathians with a corps on the extreme left and turned the left front upon the Austrians, inflicting an irreparable defeat.

"Thus failed, Field Marshal von Hindenburg was thrown upon the only alternative of a heavy positional battle on difficult broken ground.

"The Russians never have lost their grip on Cracow from the northeast. The operations there are developing favorably with diminishing resistance by Gen. Danky's depleted army.

"The Germans have been almost as unsuccessful in their efforts in north Poland, and have been thrown back by the Russians upon the River Harey. A desperate night attack failed partly through the Russians changing their position and delivering an attack on the right flank of the German infantry which, advancing in close masses upon an open space, was trapped by land mines. The Germans also suffered severely from shrapnel in the darkness. The Russians on the following morning shot down and captured a German airship of the "Albatross" type.

MISSIONARIES TO BE HELD?

Turks Threaten to Make Reprisals Against Allies' Subjects

LONDON, Dec. 14. — The Turkish troops and inhabitants have abandoned Beirut, withdrawing inland, fearing the landing of the allies.

In the event of the allies landing the Turks threaten reprisals against the allied subjects who are held as hostages.

An official statement telling of the bombardment by Turkish warships of the Russian fortified port of Batum, in the Black Sea, was issued yesterday at Petrograd by the headquarters of the Caucasian army.

"On Saturday, Dec. 12, toward two o'clock in the afternoon, the former German battle-cruiser Goeben, accompanied by the Turkish torpedo-gunboat Berki Satvet, approached Batum and attempted to bombard the fortress of the city.

"The forts, however, opened fire, and the Goeben, after firing fifteen shots, rapidly withdrew. The damage caused by the fire of the warships was insignificant."

According to information reaching Petrograd, a large Turkish division has attempted in vain to enter Russia through Persian territory. The Turks have been repulsed in spite of assistance rendered by the Kurds.

A Berlin wireless despatch received in London says that an attack on the Dardanelles by the British and French fleet is reported in Berlin. The bombardment of the allied warships was without success, it is declared at the German headquarters.

Germans Cautioned.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—(By wireless to Sayville.)—The German official press bureau cautions against premature expectations of victory on the Polish battle front. It says the Russians are not definitely defeated, the new Russian positions still being intact twelve or thirteen miles east of Lodz. These positions will be untenable, the statement adds, if the Germans succeed in breaking through in the vicinity of Lowicz, northeast of Lodz.

The attacks south of Piotrkow, as well as those by the Austrians further south, it is admitted, have led to no definite result.

FRENCH COMPEL ENEMY TO GIVE UP STRONG POSITIONS

Step in the Operations to Dislodge Kaiser's Troops From St. Mihiel Ends in a Decisive Victory For the Column Now Driving Through to Metz---British Hold Firm Against Attacks at Ypres.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—That the French have won a decisive victory over the German troops in the forest of La Pretre was the news conveyed in an official communique yesterday afternoon. The fighting had been proceeding in that portion of eastern France for a number of days, and on Saturday hurled the full force of their columns against the Kaiser's troops, compelling them to leave their hitherto strong military positions and hasten northwards.

The French movement in the forest of Le Pretre is in accord with their general scheme of causing the isolation of the German army corps at St. Mihiel and the securing of points of vantage for the march on Metz.

It is also reported that the British checked three charges of German infantry southeast of Ypres.

The Germans were ineffective in their attacks upon the French fortified line in the passes leading to German territory.

Both the French and the German official reports refer to Saturday as a quiet day. They contain evidence, however, that the allies' offensive movement is beginning to gather impetus and is meeting with stubborn resistance from the German troops, who have been left to hold the western line while their comrades are battling with the Russians in the east.

Fighting of an exceedingly desperate character, which may prove the early stages of one of the greatest battles of the war, has been taking place during the latter portion of the week along the line east of Ypres and Armentieres.

The allies and the enemy face each other in immense force in this district, for both sides seem to realize the strategic importance of the ground which lies between the Yser and the Lys.

Success has attended both the Germans and the French in turn, but the losses of the enemy have been far greater, and the French, in places, have gained slight advantage.

This is particularly noteworthy when it is considered that the Germans on Thursday attacked in overwhelming force time after time. Their movement was concentrated on the line of trenches not far from the village of Dichebusch, which was not particularly strongly held by the French.

A terrific prelude to the attack was made by the German artillery which concentrated a furious shrapnel fire on the French position. At this point the trenches of the Germans were only seventy yards away, and for fear of hitting their own men the enemy's artillery aimed fairly high, so the Frenchmen in the rear trenches suffered the most heavily. Those in the front trenches were huddled against the sides while the storm raged over them.

The French 75-millimetre guns raked the German batteries in answer, and things were becoming very hot when the German infantrymen became active. From the trenches seventy yards away a shower of hand grenades came bowling over towards the French trench. Many very short, but a few did some damage. Hardly the second plague came to an end when out of the trenches climbed a swarm of Germans rushing furiously towards the Frenchmen.

At last the men in that first trench had something to do. They jumped to the loopholes and blazed a fierce magazine fire into the raging, tearing attack. Every bullet seemed to find a mark. It hardly could have done otherwise at such a range. The advancing tide wavered, stumbled and then swept onward again.

There was no time for the Frenchmen to reload their rifles. They climbed out of the trench and met the Germans with the bayonet. The German guns were still roaring to prevent the arrival of French reinforcements, but the reinforcements quickly came to the relief of the few Frenchmen who still struggle sturdily with the enemy.

Eventually the Germans who survived the attack turned and belted back to their trenches with the Frenchmen at their heels.

The following official communication was issued by the French War Office on Sunday night:

"It is announced that two German attacks at the two extremes of the front have failed. One was to the northeast of Ypres and the other against the railway station at Aspach (Alsace)."

An important advance by the French troops in the forest of La Pretre, in France, and the repulse of three violent German infantry attacks to the southeast of Ypres, Belgium, were the outstanding features of the French official communication issued Sunday afternoon. The text of the statement reads:

"The day of Dec. 12 was particularly quiet. The enemy's activity was shown especially by an intermittent cannonade at different points on the front. In the region to the southeast of Ypres there were ventured, however, three violent infantry attacks, which were repulsed.

"In the woods of La Pretre we have made important progress.

"In the Vosges the enemy has attacked on various occasions the post of La Mere Henri to the northwest of Senones, but was repulsed."

Aviation Corps Abandoned.

SALISBURY, Eng., Dec. 14.—It is probable that the organization of a Canadian aviation corps will be abandoned. Capt. Kanney and Lieuts. Farr and Shayre my be transferred to the royal flying corps.

GERMANS CAUGHT LYING.

Denial of Having Laid Mines in the Baltic Sea Flatly Disproven.

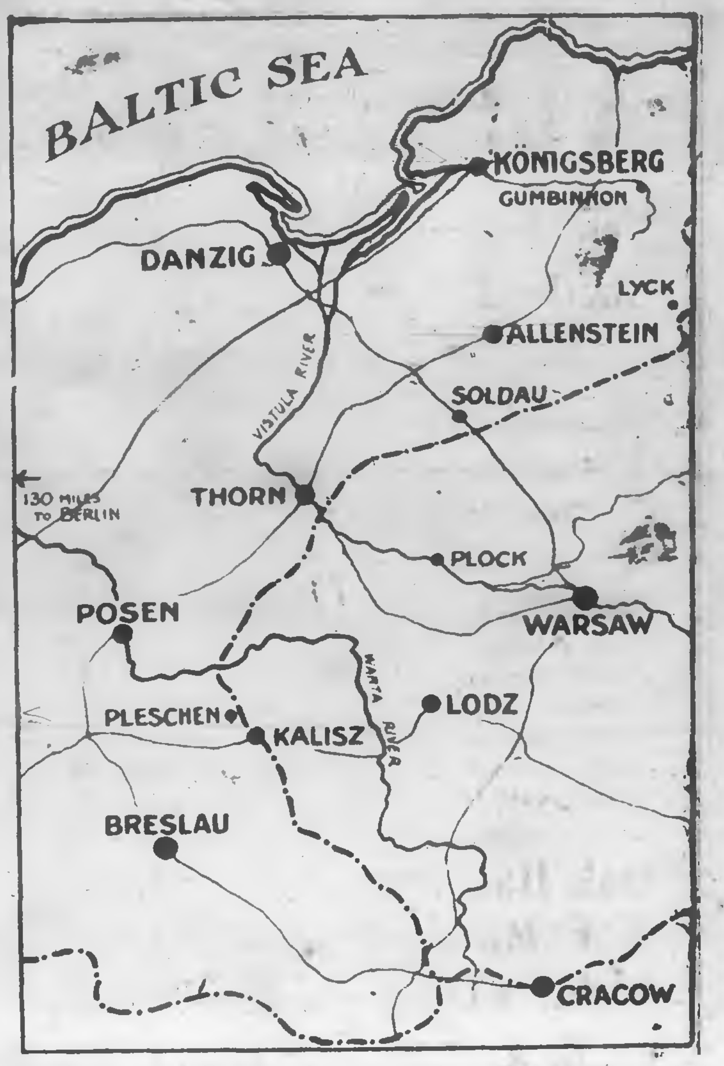
STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 14.—(Via London.)—The Swedish Minister of Foreign Affairs yesterday gave out a statement with regard to the recent sinking of three Swedish steamers as the result of striking mines in the Gulf of Bothnia.

"The Germans," the Foreign Minister says, "declare that the mines were Russian, as no German minelaying had been done up to the time of the disaster. Official investigations made by Finland, disclose that several groups of anchored mines were German and not Russian, and that they had been laid during the war in the Gulf of Bothnia."

No floating mines, it was stated, had been found.

Mutiny in Turkish Fleet.

ATHENS, Dec. 14.—A mutiny has broken out among the sailors of the fleet at Constantinople, owing to brutal treatment of the men by German officers. A revolt of Turkish troops at Stamboul Barracks for the same cause followed. Two German officers were killed.



WHERE THE RUSSIAN AND GERMAN ARMIES ARE BATTLING FOR SUPREMACY.

The dot-and-dash line is the boundary of the German Empire. The district east of the Vistula is East Prussia, and the Russians are at Gumbinnen. The main Russian force is based on Warsaw, having been driven from Lodz, according to recent despatches. In the south the Austro-German army is broken; Cracow is invested, and if it can be taken the way to Breslau will be open.

DRESDEN IS SURROUNDED

Cruiser is at Punta Arenas but Cannot Escape Pursuers

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 14. — The Argentine Government has received word that the German cruiser Dresden has arrived at Punta Arenas, on the Straits of Magellan. A despatch from Puerto Gallegos says that a vessel has been sighted there, surrounded by British ships. Another despatch says the Dresden has taken refuge off the coast of Patagonia.

Another despatch from Buenos Ayres says it is officially announced by the German consul at Punta Arenas that the Dresden arrived there yesterday.

Previous advices from the Argentine capital said that the Dresden had grounded in Rio Gallegos. The grounding of the Dresden in Rio Gallegos is confirmed by new advices from that point, which state that the warship which was beached in the roads there was floated during the day, and sailed for the south.

The report from Punta Arenas indicates that the Dresden was not severely damaged, as it is evident that she proceeded from Gallegos roads to Puna Arenas under her own steam.

KAISER'S HEALTH BETTER.

War Lord is Expected to Undergo an Operation on His Throat.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 14. — (Via London.) — Emperor William has made so much progress towards recovering his health, telegrams received here yesterday from Berlin state, that he will be able to leave the capital this week for the battlefront.

To Undergo Operation.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 14.—A report received at Basel from Berlin said that Emperor William will be obliged to undergo an operation of the throat when he has sufficiently recovered from his present illness, which is not considered serious.

The doctors, however, consider that it would be inadvisable for his majesty to return to the front for several weeks and he probably will spend Christmas at home.

Crown Prince Frederick William, the report from the capital says, has arrived in Berlin.

Montreal Student Held Prisoner.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 14. — Grant Lochead, son of Prof. Lochead, of McDonald College, Montreal, formerly of this city, has been imprisoned in Germany, where he has been studying, according to a cable received here. Lochead was intercepted as he was about to make a break for the Dutch frontier.

Punishment Will Be Severe.

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 14.—It is semi-officially stated that the Government does not intend to go to extremes in the policy of leniency with the leaders of the late Boer rebellion, including Gen. De Wet and Lieut.-Col. Maritz, but that they will be made to realise the full gravity of their offence.

LIEUT. PARKER DIES AT LONDON

Assistant Commissioner of Canadian Red Cross Passes Away

LONDON, Dec. 14.—News of the death of Lieut. E. W. Parker, assistant commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, taking place so soon after the death of Col. Burland, who first came here to direct the Red Cross work, will cause a painful sensation, although the bulletins regarding his condition have prepared his friends for such a contingency. Lieut. Parker passed away at the Hotel Cecil late Saturday afternoon in the presence of his sister, Lady Drummond. The cause of death was congestion of the lungs. Lieut. Parker came over with Col. Hodgetts, who succeeded Col. Burland six weeks ago, and about a fortnight ago went to Liverpool as superintendent of removal of Red Cross supplies and also to meet Lady Drummond. He caught a severe chill and took to bed immediately. Mrs. Parker only recently made arrangements to sail with their children to join her husband in England for the winter.

FOUR WORKMEN ARE KILLED

Riveters on High Tank, Too Heavy for Scaffolding

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—Shooting violently to the earth as the slender scaffolding perched seventy feet high on the tank of the Ontario National Brick Co. gave way beneath their weight, four workmen were dashed to death at noon on Saturday in Cooksville. Death was instantaneous with two of them, but the others lingered long enough to whisper some explanation of the terrible accident. One of them, Andrew Webster, was a mere lad, who had sought the privilege of joining the others in the risky task of riveting seams on the topmost sections of the tank. In his case the experience was heart-rending, for the whole platform not giving away at once, he saw his three companions hurled far below while he still clung to a steel cable. The sag of the planking, however, and the bitterness of the wind loosened the grip of his fingers, and he was hurled violently to the ground.

The dead are: John Bowler, H. McKenna, George Warner, Toronto; Andrew Webster, 19 years of age, Cooksville.

Graft by any other name would probably be found just as widely in the legislature.

There is a difference of opinion between a man and his landlady as to what constitutes a good appetite.

Many a man doesn't mary because it is so difficult for him to decide which is the cheaper.

YEAR'S RECEIPTS FOR ST. PAUL'S W.M.S. AT $1264,50

Progress is Reported in Report of Secretary—Officers Are Elected

The 38th annual meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held on Friday afternoon, Dec. 11th, in the lecture room of the church. There was a large attendance including a number of visitors from the other churches.

Miss Dickson presided and after devotional exercises the various reports were presented all showing satisfactory progress.

The financial statement of the Auxiliary presented by the treasurer, Mrs. McKee, shows the year's total receipts to be $1,264.50.

The "Fraser Mission Band" report was read by Mrs. E. Moore. The year's receipts amount to $226.96 and the "Junior Mission Band" lately re-organized, contributed $25.50.

The president in her annual address emphasized the urgency of the work and gave a strong appeal for more faithful service.

Mrs. Griffith of Honan, who with her husband, Dr. Griffith, has labored in that mission field since 1901, gave a most interesting address, describing the country and reviewing the work in which they had been engaged. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker on motion of Mrs. Roger, seconded by Mrs. W. H. Hill.

The following officers were elected for 1915:—

President—Miss Dickson.
Hon. Vice-President—Mrs. Robt. Innis.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. Roger.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Pogue.
Secretary—Mrs. Harstone.
Treasurer—Mrs. McKee.
Literature Secretary—Miss Laura Davidson.
Strangers' Secretary—Miss Fanny Dixon.
Librarian—Miss Ferguson.
Organist—Mrs. Logan.
Executive: Mrs. Keyes, Mrs. Robt. Hall, Mrs. Shook, Mrs. Munroe, Mrs. Carmichael, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. Connal.

Secretary's Report.

The 38th annual report of St. Paul's W.M.S., 1914:—

To the president and members of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society.

In presenting the 38th annual record of the labors of this auxiliary we desire to express gratitude to the Great King, and Head of the Church for His manifest presence and guidance, enabling us to report that substantial progress characterizes the work of the year just closed.

Meetings have been held regularly throughout the year on the second Friday of each month with the exception of August, the average attendance being 58 about the same as last year.

At our annual meeting held last December Mrs. McClure who had labored in China for more than 25 years, gave a splendid address on the transformation now taking place in that country. Meeting with our missionaries from time to time is a very great benefit, as we are brought into close personal touch with the work as well as the workers.

The day of special prayer for all missionary work was observed at our January meeting. We consider this the most important meeting of the year when all unite in earnest supplication for God's guidance and blessing, helping each one to lay hold of that unseen force or prayer spirit which is the real source of efficient service and the power that prevails.

The literature secretary reports 105 subscribers to the Missionary Messenger, our magazine in its new form. We regret to report a slight decrease and would urge all members to renew their subscriptions as it now contains all of the missionary intelligence given in three separate magazines before the amalgamation.

The Interior was again sent to our missionaries in India and the Missionary Review taken for the use of this auxiliary.

The text book The King's Business formed the basis of study during the first six months.

The April meeting was of a special character on account of being the last time we would meet as an auxiliary of the W.F.M.S. While we realize that the union that has been consummated marks a great advance in Presbyterian mission work, which has outgrown all distinctions and limitations we never come to the last time without a feeling of sadness. A pleasant feature of this meeting was the presentation of a certificate of life membership to Mrs. Pogue by the members. We are pleased to report another life member this year, Mrs. Robt. Hall.

Our total membership remains about the same. This fact completes an earnest consideration, when we consider the magnitude of the work in which we are engaged. The question is often asked Why it is that so many of our women are not interested in missions? May we each strive for a clearer realization of our duty and privilege.

This year we mourn the loss of a beloved fellow worker, the late Mrs. Bickle, and we desire to extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved friends.

At the May meeting reports of the Presbyterian meeting in Port Hope were given by a number of ladies who were in attendance.

At the June meeting Mrs. Robt. Hall gave a report of the 38th and final meeting of the W.F.M.S. held in Toronto from May 12th to 15th, also a report of the amalgamation service which took place during the forenoon of Friday, 15th, in Knox Church. This historic event was most impressive and will long remain with those who were privileged to be present. Owing to the amalgamation it was necessary at this meeting to re-organize our society and elect officers under the new constitution. As there was no home missionary society in connection with St. Paul's Church it was moved, seconded and carried that the officers and executive of the W.F.M.S. be now the officers of the W.M.S. in accordance with the new constitution. The strangers' department has been added to the work and Mrs. Keyes was appointed strangers' secretary.

The request for Northwest supplies met with the usual response and a bale containing clothing for a boy 16 years of age, and other supplies, valued at $39.05 was sent to the Alberni Boarding School, also a cash donation of $6 40.

The thankoffering meeting held in October was addressed my Miss Drummond of Newcastle and Mrs. Keith of Knox Church. Both addresses were full of helpful suggestions and much enjoyed by all present. The contents of envelopes handed in at this meeting amounted to $785.90. We feel this offering to be a tangible expression of the interest taken in the work and desire to express our deep appreciation of the generous loyalty of all who have contributed to this fund, especially at the present time when we in Canada as part of the British Empire are engaged in the saddest of conflicts and irresistible appeals come to each one of us to aid the sick. The suffering and the needy to which we as Christian women must respond.

As we enter a new year and a new era in our work we face serious conditions, owing to the distress of war, financial depression and the call of duty to which the whole Empire has responded, while Christian charity is manifest as never before, but there must be no slackening of missionary interest, the work must be upheld.

Mrs. Steele, our president, says, "That the success of the union will rest most heavily on auxiliaries and mission bands." This means the cooperation of the many, not the planning of the few, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. May we realize that these are days of splendid opportunity when every woman can give of her noblest and best service to Christ and her country.

P. HARSTONE.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Publicity Committee Remains on the Job and Reports That Money is Still Coming in

SOME BARGAINS LEFT

Papers Being Prepared for Incorporation of Company to Distribute the Fund

It is a feather in our cap to be able to state that on Saturday Mayor Buller received from the Duke of Connaught, the Governor General, a telegram of congratulation on the success of the Patriotic Fund campaign. We are the people, only we were not quite sure of it.

The Publicity apologizes for less than justice to the press as a whole. In mentioning the contributions from the local newspapers, that of the Morning Times was omitted. Twenty-five dollars. Sorry, friends. But some things are overlooked in the haste of debate.

On an early date, say the middle of the week, the executive committee of the fund will get together and arrange for a disposition of the contributions. The amount will be formally deposited in a bank and an account opened. There is a lot of work to do, and the affairs of the fund will be most carefully administered.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer has kindly consented to stay at the rooms during parts of each day for a time. He had rendered most valuable help to the movement in preparing the canvassing lists, a day and night work. Mr. Aylmer will be at the rooms from nine to one and from three to five each day. It is likely that the room will be open in the evenings, as members of the teams like to go in and fight their battles over again.

It may be of interest to say that the organization will have to be incorporated under the laws of the Dominion and Province, just as any company. The papers are being prepared and will be forwarded, and the incorporation perfected. Then with duly accredited officials in charge the fund will be administered. The distribution from time to time will no doubt be made through a board, which will see that things are properly done. Due announcement will appear in the press of these matters.

A gift to the resources of the fund is that from Mrs. Amory, of 212 Hunter street, in the form of a beautiful drawing in colors. Such as these, Mrs. Amory creates and prepares for the decorative feature of the front covers of periodicals and magazines. The artist's work is most beautifully done, and the drawing, in many colors, a gem. The committee will make use of it, the amount realized to go to the fund as a contribution from Mrs. Amory. Or it can be sold locally. Can be seen at the rooms.

The executive committee have one acknowledgment to make, and does so with distinct pleasure. To the young lady stenographers, Miss Eva Crane, of the office of Messrs. Peck, Kerr & McElderry, and Miss Amy Rathbone, from the office of Mr. O'Connell. The services of these young ladies were invaluable, and they worked under distracting conditions and kept the work up to the first place. Both have the thanks of the committee, and appreciation, the only regret being that the young ladies would not stay to supper.

The Publicity Committee hastens to correct an unintentional error appearing in last reports, and to extend apologies. From the reading of the paragraph it might be taken that the assortment of brushes that Mr. Kuspman was dispensing at the auction and which it was noted were swiped, were the whole lot. No such thing. The loss is a personal one. John looked after the interests of the committee and sacrificed his own. It was a private pair that he had selected and paid for, and set aside that were swiped. Anyway, the cause is a good one, though the annexing was a heartless thing to do. And still we wonder at the increase in crime.

Money is still coming in. As this department has already stated, there is always money in the country when the proper inducements are offered. Contributions from people who were out of town and many who were not called on. Several ladies expected to be called on, and were not. For such lapses, apologies. Several of the unprotected canvassers hesitated to approach a house full of women, as there was the chance of possible controversy in which the ladies always take the last word. One canvasser was offered a five dollar bill, shaken at him through the glass. Head of the house had locked the front door and gone away with the key. He made way through the back shed, summer kitchen, and right into the reserves, and came away with the money. Such is the reward of presence of mind.

As a result of the devotion of the men of the teams and the captains and officials of the fund movement, there are about two hundred desks that are at the moment of writing littered up with stacks of business that has been held over during the week. The greater number of those engaged had to, and did, let business slide. That was the case with so many that to mention them would mean all. Mr. D O'Connell, as chairman, was the right man in the right place, and at the same salary as last year. He was and is a hustler. Hopeful, energetic and inspiring. The loudest whacks that have been delivered on the walls of the Hall of Fame have been administered by Irishmen, and Mr. O'Connell is no exception to the rule, only more so. It was not a game of follow-my-leader, but an effort to keep up. Never behind, but nicely alongside.

These paragraphs are all advertising, but it can't be helped. The committee must reduce stock. No goods will be carried over. The establishment has no annex. On hand, one fine overcoat. The man who owned it was a misfit for the coat, and he did not have money for the fund, so sent the garment. Would look fine on a clergyman, grace an insurance agent, commendable to a school teacher, irreproachable for a commercial traveller, and superb on any common man. Black with velvet collar. Size about 40; not too big a forty, say a thirty-nine, going up to forty. There is a Grafton label under the collar, which is a guarantee of good living. Who will have the coat? No price, as yet, fixed. Don't drive us to the obliquity of another auction. Stock must go, for we have to vacate the premises. Hurrah. The foreman of the late grand jury regrets that he did not see the coat or he would have presented a slick appearance before Judge Huycke. Appearances count.

The old flag of the Home Guard had a narrow escape. You see, the members of the Publicity Committee, while not of trade, are of commercial mind. They realized that opportunity knocks at the door once. The thing to do is to go around by the back way and catch opportunity on the flank, a sort of strategy. At the auction on Friday night, an enthusiastic Englishman recklessly offered twenty dollars "for that there flag." In so good a cause the minds of the Publicity Committee were as one. So patriotic a desire should be met. They decided to sell for the twenty and then hike down to Turner's and replace the banner with another perfectly good for seven or eight dollars. The transaction appeared to be one that appealed to the committee and looked to be commercially profitable. Patriotically remunerative as well. But the boy who was proudly carrying the banner had gone outside to show off before his less responsible friends, and by the time he could be hunted up the twenty-dollar customer had escaped. So had the flag. That flag is too sacred to steal and much too good to leave outside over night. To convert it into money is quite another thing.

This paragraph is an advertisement, so don't read it. The committee have on hand a fine floor rug, the gift of White Bros. Colors (the rug, not the Whites), pattern of green and brown, a touch of olive, a sprinkling of crimson and a dash of poppy-dun, whatever that is. Quite a fine and comely rug—fit to grace an office of any professional man, but much too good for a mere newspaper office. This rug must be seen to be appreciated. Warranted foot, rubber or German proof. General effect that of a nice brown rug. Exactly the thing to flop down on the floor and roll with the children. Who will have it for the function of Christmas? Going at $20. We have had four nibbles, two pulls and one distinct bite. This rug will have an historic value, and don't you forget it. The provocation under which it is sold will settle that. It is entirely too expensive to present in one lump to any one connected with the movement, for all services were without money and without price. Come on in while the water's fine. Look in the window. Go home and converse with your wife, for once, and the lady of the house will have a shock. But get a sent to send home the rug. Only $20. N. B.—We have a sly, underhand, nefarious sort of bid, but it does not come up to the mark. Don't let the rug be sacrificed

Presently the Patriotic Fund activities will be a thing of the past. The memories of it will live for years. Taken all around, the effect will be far-reaching, in its bringing together of more than a hundred men never so intimately associated before. It has inoculated a fine spirit of comradeship that was wanting. Local movements we have had in the past pursued with a more or less desultory activity. Into these crept something of clique and class. A standing off of one because he had not been asked first. A feeling of indifference on the part of another assumed to have been overlooked. All these were swept aside.

Every one was welcomed. Having a definite plan and definite goal, the end sought was attained. There were not too many bosses, a thing ever fatal to combined activity. Each one did the best he could and did that which he was asked to do, satisfied that some one was of the mind that that thing was the best for the moment to do.

It is true that all men are not approachable by any one at large. That matter received most careful thought and consideration. If any prospective contributor had several immediate friends, these were dispatched to see him and press the claims of the movement. Almost invariably there was success. Men who meant to make contributions in fifties and hundreds, loosened up and doubled the amount. They got another viewpoint, saw the fund from another angle. If at all within means there came a response.

The Publicity Committee hates to admit it, but it is becoming commercialized. Its ideals are being wrenched. It has to leave the realm of heroic effort and descend to the effort to sell a town lot. For goodness sake, help us out.

The lot is one, the gift to the fund from Mr. D. W. Dumble. It is well worth $700, as lots are selected. Up on the top of the rise of Aylmer street, in a most eligible and probably will be very desirable neighborhood. Size 50 x 138 feet. Plenty of room for residence, garage, henhouse and other extras. Backs up on the adjoining Fitzgerald property, long looked for to come into the market. It is there now—and it is our lot. Only we want to get there first. Fitzgerald can wait; will have to.

Think of it! This lot in ten years will have an historic value. It will be pointed out as the Patriotic Fund lot—the only piece of property in the city with such distinction. We are apt to look at such sentiment, just now, with an ideal eye. Historic value is a great asset. No nation reaches the heights of historic esteem and self-respect but through tribulation. Ten years from today, all over the world, when men of international prominence gather to deliberate in the peace congresses of the world, hats will come off first to Belgium, and afterwards to other countries. Belgium has won imperishable fame and historic value. The gates of all cities will fly open in honor to her sons, and the doors of all industries will welcome the men of the little fighting country. So some one should own this lot. Who will it be?

Look up the plan at the rooms. In every way desirable. The fund credits Mr. Dumble with $500 on subscription. Bear that in mind when making bids. If purchaser desires a change for any of the lots in the same block, and available, reasonable choice allowed. Pay for it on easy terms. Conveyances free. There now.

In view of the fact that $200 was the largest individual subscription that team No. 3 secured, their remarkable good work deserves special notice. A few of the best subscriptions secured by this team were Messrs. Davis-Thompson Co., $100, Mr. W. W. Campbell, of Campbell & Best, $50; a friend, $200, one who believes in "Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth. Messrs. Schneider Bros., after donating $50 to one of the other teams; Mr. George F. Schneider, Mr. F. S. Schneider, and Mrs. Charles Rishor, of $200, just to show that while German in name, they are loyal Canadians; Mr. Jno. Hill, an active member of the team, $50. With pleasure we note their collections of $51 from a few of our Chinese citizens.. Mr. Chas. Rishor, of Rishors, Limited, wholesale grocers, $200; Mr. James Edgar and post office staff, $150; Mr. W. J. Oke, the worthy captain of the team, $100; also the employes' subscriptions of the De Laval Co., Brinton Carpet Co., Peter Hamilton Mfg. Co., Peterborough Machine Co. Special mention must be made of their securing, through the kindness of Mr. Dodds, of the C. P. R. and Mr. McNabb, of the G. T. R., assurances that the respective local portions of the employes' patriotic fund will be credited to the local fund.

R. Hall and Son's subscription was reported at $1.50, but the correct figures are $350. The employes also gave $89.50.

INDIAN RUNNER IN POLICE COURT

Albert Smoke and His Pal Held Celebration

Intense love for fire-water landed two band Indians in the police cells Saturday in a hopelessly intoxicated condition. One was Albert Smoke, the same Smoke who has many medals for long distance running and who won the five mile race Thanksgiving Day this year. His companion in disgrace was George Copperwaithe, a married man. Both were charged under the act governing band Indians who receive a grant from the Government, for whom the penalty for being drunk is a $5 fine as a minimum and $50 maximum.

They claimed that Samuel McGee had contributed to their downfall by supplying them with the liquor. Their story sounded rather reasonable until they stated that the said Samuel McGee went away on the train after getting them the whiskey. Both men stayed by their story, however, and denied an insinuation by the chief that they had concocted it between them while locked up since Saturday. Both were fined $10 and ordered to pay forthwith. Neither had the money so it will be the jail until some kind friend comes forward and secures their liberty.

THANKS FOR HELPING.

Adjutant McElhiney wishes to thank the members of his team for efforts put forth during the campaign and also those who by their generosity and kindness helped to swell the funds. Special thanks are extended to Mr. Ackerman.

IN THE NEW ESQUIMALT; CHANGE IN PACIFIC PORT

Romantic Old Town Which Was Once a British Admiralty Station, Fell Upon Evil Days When the Navy Went Away, But Stirring Events of This Autumn Have Restored its Ancient Glory.

Within the memory of the present generation Esquimalt has never until now been symbolical of war, says a writer in The Canadian Courier. Rather has it stood to us as emblematical of romance. Romances begun when H. M. ships sailed through the Straits of Juan de Fuca from distant ports, and pretty Victoria girls watched them gliding in towards Esquimalt harbor; romances carried on in the old sail loft, made over for the occasions with flags and bunting, and crossed swords and other nautical paraphernalia into a ball-room, or on the bright green lawns of the naval yards at cricket or tennis matches, or on the decks of the warships themselves converted for the nonce into dancing pavilions and delightful cosy corners; romances culminating in quiet or brilliant ceremonies at the little garrison church, which has stood ever since Esquimalt was founded, and upon whose walls many a tablet is placed sacred to the memory of the hundreds of brave sailors who have found unknown graves somewhere on the vast Pacific; romances that knit the old world to the new as nothing else could do, and helped to make Victoria so much a part of the mother land that she has been described as "a little bit of England."

Those were gay days, when the British ships were stationed in Esquimalt harbor and the admiral and his lady gave a high social standing to the community, when the little shops and inns and taverns did a thriving business, and the many tiny cottages were trim and neat, their gardens gay with flowers, and the more pretentious quarters of the officers were charmingly inviting and there was always some social function or another taking place to attract Victorians old and young.

Then, years ago, there came a change. The Canadian Government took over the naval station and the British ships, the British sailors and the men of the garrison went away; the barracks, the officers' houses, and all buildings were dismantled. Victorians recall the morning we said "good-bye" to the sailor men. We can see them now as they marched to the boats in Victoria harbor, some of them smiling, some of them sad; we can see the weeping women on the wharf, holding up their laughing babies, it would not be a long separation, but it was the breaking of the home ties that hurt; we can hear the squeal of the fifes and the rattle of the drums, calling a long "good-bye," and writing "finis" on one chapter of British Columbia's history.

After they had gone Esquimalt went to sleep. No more gymkhanas on bright summer afternoons, with the ships in the harbor gay with banners and dozens of small boats coming and going, manned by spick and span sailors, and conveying smiling crowds of visitors; no more games on the green in the navy yards, watched by fashionably dressed throngs of men and women; no more balls in the barracks or the old sail loft. The little shops, the inns and taverns strove bravely to exist for a little while, and then with a final gasp under the auctioneer's hammer went into oblivion. All along the short and narrow streets, every one of which leads to the water, either to the right or left, empty cottages with broken windows, and gardens overgrown, died a slow death under the picturesque hand of Time. And of all places in the world there was not one more silent, more lonely, than the little naval village asleep and dreaming of its former glories.

But there came, swift as the flash of a swallow's wing, a message overseas. Britain was at war with Germany. In a moment all was changed once more. Esquimalt awoke from sleep, and that which had seemed dead, lived again. The old Spirit—not that Romance of her later days—but the Spirit that hovered over her in the days of her foundation, when fighting Britain sent her ships and men into the uncharted waters, and set up lights and beacons and docks and wharves and forts, returned once more to house old forces and new forces into activity, to inspire to deeds of dauntless courage, high hopes and gallant endeavor. The old forts are manned again with men as brave as these who fought in distant British battlefields two generations ago, and the sailors afloat or ashore are the kind that keep alive the heroic traditions of their fathers. France and Britain are fighting again side by side for a common cause, as they did in the village's young days during the Crimean war.

Day by day the grim, grey ships, sureties of the nations' safety, guardians of the nations' freedom, keep stern watch in Esquimalt waters. By night their great search lights are thrown across the sea from Brochy Ledge to Race Rocks, and day and night they are manned and ready for any call. Now and then they ship anchor and slip away, beyond the Straits to the ocean, undertaking some hazardous mission or another, which no one, save those in the Admiralty's secrets knows; and just as quietly they slip back again, silent and unheralded, their mission accomplished. There are times when those in Esquimalt village hear the noise of mighty cheering, and looking out of windows or over gates, they see the countless sailors of the cruisers in port, lining up on deck, waving their caps and giving some home-coming vessel a rousing welcome. And then they know that some deed requiring skill and fortitude has been done.

MR. DOLBY'S WIFE

She Discusses the Merits of Her Possible Successor.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

AFTER supper Mr. Dolby had gone to the store for a whetstone and a paper of carpet tacks, and as he went Mrs. Dolby was singing "The Home Over There" with great feeling. He returned in half an hour, and as he reached the kitchen door the sound of sobbing met his ears. It was Mrs. Dolby.

He didn't inquire what it was, but turned about and sat on the doorstep and in an absent way began sharpening a sickle. It was five minutes before Mrs. Dolby volunteered an explanation.

"Samuel," she said finally, "when you've got that sickle sharpened you might go over to Mrs. Bebee's and tell her that I shall be a dead woman before tomorrow. Tell her right out. She was over here this afternoon, and I said I was liable to git my summons any time."

With calm deliberation Mr. Dolby spat on the whetstone.

"Yes, Samuel, my time has come," sobbed Mrs. Dolby. "A few hours hence and you will be a widower and wearin' a red necktie and canterin' around after a second wife. When you started over town I hadn't the slightest idea of dyin'. Ten minutes later when I went to carry the butter down cellar there came the knocks on that empty cider bar'l, and as I stood there shakin' I heard a whispered voice, 'Hannet Dolby, git ready to be an angel!' It was my summons. What kind of a second wife shall you marry, Samuel?"

Mr. Dolby was looking absently at a robin in a cherry tree.

"You needn't feel at all delikit about talking it over with me," said Mrs. Dolby. "I've allus s'pected you'd git married ag'in if I should die. Now, there's the Widder Lapham. Everybody says she's worth $2,000, but she's too hity-tity for a man of your age. While she was swingin' in a hammock she'd let the bread burn up in the oven. And there's the Widder Davis. She's a good housekeeper, as I'll admit, but they say she gits streaks on. She kin make a pound of tea go as far as I kin, but she told me with her own mouth that she had four pair of stockings last year. Could you put up with sich extravagance as that, Samuel?

"There's Phoebe Smalls—she's an old maid and sot in her ways. If you come into the house and throwed your hat down on the floor or pulled your boots off in the parlor she'd raise the awfulest kind of a row. I guess you'll hev to marry a gal, Samuel. I was thinkin' of Sue Sabins the other day. She's twenty years old and a great hand to work, and mebbe you'll be happy with her. Her mother says Sue likes to be petted. You've never petted me, but mebbe you'll change when I am gone.

"GIT READY TO BE AN ANGEL!"

"I—I don't complain," said Mrs. Dolby when she could control her voice again. "When I saw that you was no hand to pet I let it go. It will be different with a gal. But I ain't goin' to pick out nobody fur you nor find fault with your choice. I've got jest one favor to ask."

The lump in her throat and the tears in her eyes choked her speech for half a minute.

"It's only this, Samuel. You needn't try to look all broke up over my loss. You kin go right to playin' checkers as soon as the funeral is over, but remember I had my good p'ints. I want you to remember that I used a clothes b'iler with seven holes in the bottom fur nine year without mendin' and that I hain't had a new skirt fur 'leven years."

She retreated into the house, but Mr. Dolby knew nothing of it. He hung the sickle on a nail near the door, put the whetstone and tacks on a shelf in the woodshed and walked down the path and closed the henhouse door and cast a look into the pigpen. When he returned to the house Mrs. Dolby was humming the air of "I Want to Be An Angel." She had had her lamentation and gotten over it. It would be three or four days before she would break out again.

AUSTRIA IS HUMBLED

She Has Twice Sought Peace With Servia

LONDON, Dec. 14. — The marvellous recovery of the Servians and their defeat of four Austrian army corps, which had penetrated half way across Servia, remains the wonder of military men. The Crown Prince, in an address to his troops, told them that they had "beaten and pursued the enemy with a rapidity unheard of in military history."

The shattered Austrian right wing crossed the Drina into Bosnia, where it was attacked by the Montenegrins near Vishegrad, and had to leave another toll of prisoners, killed and wounded, and war material. The pursuing Servians also picked up another 5,000 prisoners and some guns and munitions.

The Austrian army from Belgrade has again essayed attacks against the Servian right wing, but, meeting with no success, retired. It is unofficially reported that the Austrians are preparing to leave Belgrade.

A despatch from Paris says:—

Georges Clemenceau, former Premier of France, stated yesterday:

"I learned that Austria has twice asked Servia to agree to peace. The source of my information is such that I defy anyone to contradict it.

"A shuddering apprehension for the near future must have seized upon Berlin and Vienna for that proud empire to supplicate little Servia for peace."

The French War Office official statement says regarding the Servian campaign:—

"The extreme Servian left wing pursuing the enemy has forced him to recross the Drina near Baina Basta. On the remainder of the front the Servian armies continue to drive back the Austrians to the north and northwest."

Vienna Admits Defeat.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 14—(Via London.)—A semi-official statement issued in Vienna yesterday, deprecates the reports of extensive Servian victories, explaining that strong Servian forces made necessary "the regrouping of our Balkan army and the retirement of our right wing."

"The Servian telegrams," this statement adds, "also exaggerate considerably our losses."

No Chance of That.

The beggar accepted gratefully a nickel from the professional humorist.

"Thank you, sir," he said, his voice vibrant with deep feeling. "Oh, thank you, sir, and may you live to be as old as your jokes."

THE FIANCES OF PRUE

SHE promised Sid, she promised Ned,
She promised Sam and Jim,
She promised Harry, Tom and Ted,
Each one she'd marry him.
She promised Marmaduke and Bill,
She promised George and Paul,
She'd wed him with a right good will
When came the days of fall.

The happy swains in ecstasy,
When each the truth he knew,
Got up a Prudence company
To see the matter through,
And 'stead of an engagement ring
These heroes of my rimes
Gave her of whom my verses sing
A set of golden chimes—

Which rung for each and rung for all
Against the coming of the fall.

—John Kendrick Bangs in Judge.

The Wallop.

The west wind howled in the branches, but they heard it not, for they were in the Swiffleworth parlor and plate glass windows were down.

"I admit there is a certain fascination about your stickpins," she said, "but I cannot marry you. There are reasons."

"Name them!" he cried, and it was beautiful to see the way his square jaw set and his No. 40 chest expanded.

"Father hates you."

"I'll ruin his business and bring him to terms."

"Mother despises you."

"I'll come out for woman suffrage."

"You have a terribly shady past."

"We'll surround the house with shade trees."

"And, besides, I was married to Jack Billencoo last Wednesday."

For a moment he was quite at a loss for a reply.—Detroit Free Press.

Luggage.

Jenkins had ceased to complain, but one evening his troubles as a straphanger in the tram got so bad that he felt bound to expostulate.

"Excuse me, sir," he said to the man sitting by him, "but would you mind moving your portmanteau from the gangway? I really can hardly find room to stand."

"Move my portmanteau!" gasped the stranger. "Those, sir, are my feet!"

"Is that so?" said Jenkins. "Then perhaps you would pile them one above the other."—London Tit-Bits.

Mean Thing!

"Life is brief."

"Yes."

"And youth evanescent."

"Indeed!"

"Don't you think so?"

"Seems to me you have been youthful for ever so long."

To Improve His Speed.

"How fast can that horse go?"

"That depends."

"On how you feed him?"

"No; on whether you hitch him to a cart or load him in a box car."

REMARKABLE INSECTS.

Faculty of Smell Is the Most Highly Developed.

The most valuable faculty possessed by insects is their sense of smell. Most insects hear very poorly, and ants in particular are absolutely deaf. With all their batteries of eyes bulging in every direction these creatures do not seem to enjoy very good eyesight. Some of the flying insects cannot see well enough to avoid obstacles which to them should look as big as a barn.

But when it comes to the sense of smell the insect world is far ahead of any animal. Fabre, the great French entomologist, confined some female butterflies in a steel cage far from the natural haunts of the insects. To his surprise males of the species came from miles away and lit on the screen.

He then confined the females in hermetically-sealed jars and placed them near places frequented by the males. Not one paid any attention, though the females were visible through the glass.

To make sure that the sense of smell was the guiding force, Prof. Fabre brought out some bits of paper and twigs on which the females had rested. Males soon appeared, and, ignoring the females in their glass jars, circled about the twigs and paper.

If a strange ant of the same species is placed in an ant-hill he is violently ejected. Every insect he meets recognizes him instantly as an intruder and helps in the ejection.

If a small mouse dies in a field certain undertaker insects known as sylphs and necrophers will journey from distances of more than a mile to lay eggs in the body.

The house-fly acts solely on the sense of smell. In his flying about he is perpetually trying to head in the direction of each breath of food odor he meets, and dodges and turns with each eddy of air until he locates the source of the smell.

Mosquitoes find you in the dark rather more easily than in the day. They smell their victims outside the house. Their sense of smell leads them to windows, doors, or chimneys. In they go, and soon you hear their song about your ears.

A Bed of Bayonets.

A most remarkable feat was performed before the rajah of Manipur by a Mussulman, one of a company of acrobats, who reclined at full length upon the points of seven bayonets fixed in the orthodox method in as many muskets. Four of the performer's assistants lifted him up on to his bed of spikes, where he carefully adjusted himself and distributed his weight so that the bayonet points did not pierce his flesh. The back of his head rested on one point, his shoulder blades on two others, his elbows on two more, while the hollows behind his knees engaged the remaining two. The acrobat declared after it was all over that he had felt as comfortable as if lying on a bed.

The Dogs of Turkey.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing muzzles.

Hamlet In South Africa.

It can hardly be expected that "post impressionism" will be confined to pictures in the future. A friend of mine writes me from South Africa that some genius out there has done "Hamlet" in the Taal and quotes the following example, which seems to me extremely post impressionistic. Here it is:

Hamlet—Wie is u?
Ghost—Ik is enn spook.
Hamlet—Wies spook is u?
Ghost—Ik is yu papa's spook.

A Comparison.

"Why is a clock like a pretty and vain young lady?"

"I fail to see any resemblance. Why?"

"Because it is all face and figure, has no head to speak of, is hard to stop when once it is wound up and has a striking way of calling attention to itself every hour of the day."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

TO get the disagreeable truth about yourself listen to the undercurrent that goes with the compliments of your friends.

A wise man makes good while the making is good.

The idiot who prefers to bear the consequences of his idiocy is not all a fool.

It takes a lot of nerve to go to a dentist, and much nerve is left there.

To err is human, and so also is it human to get even with the erring one.

A joke is a good thing, but, like all good things, apt to be overlooked.

It takes a lot of nerve to go to a dentist, and much nerve is left there.

A stingy man suffers a dollar's worth every time he thinks about giving a nickel.

Some persons can get more fun out of a dollar than others can out of a fortune.

It doesn't advance the matrimonial game any to have mamma around when she is fat and frivolous and the daughter, though never so slim, resembles her.

To err is human, and so also is it human to get even with the erring one.

It is commendable to do one's duty, and also it is dull, monotonous and uninteresting.

Naturally.

"It didn't happen."

"No?"

"Not at all. Somebody deliberately filled him full of hot air."

"I think so. At any rate, I notice that the police seem to prefer it."

WAR FUND OF $80,000

Barrow's Scheme to Insure Finishing 1915 Season

New York, Dec. 14. — In order to guarantee the followers of International League ball that the league will go through the 1915 season, regardless of what happens, each club in the league will be compelled to deposit $10,000 with President Barrow at a special meeting to be held on January 10th, it was announced Saturday night.

The $80,000 collected in this way will be used as an "emergency fund," which will be used to bolster up any weak spots which may develop.

Manager Miller Huggins and Chas. Herzog, of the St. Louis and Cincinnati Nationals, respectively, have made a joint bid for the Buffalo club, and, according to Barrow, their offer was a good one, considering existing conditions. However, the Huggins-Herzog proposition, it is stated, is only one of seven which have been made to President Stein of Buffalo, who will accept the offer of the highest bidder.

Perhaps some birds blush ecause of the kind of husbands they have ran to cover.

Poverty is no disgrace, but it is a disappointment when you expect to get a loan from him.

DREAD NOTS LIVED UP TO THE NAME

Had Seven Point Win Over the Pirates

The Dreadnots again showed the significance of their name on Saturday night when they attacked and succeeded in sinking tho Pirates to the tune of 18-11. The game was anybody's for fully three-quarters of the time, then the Dreadnots got a lead which was too great for their opponents to overcome. Both teams played a good defensive game, thus making many long shots necessary, and many of these vere converted in baskets adding much to the interest and excitement of the spectators.

The first half finished with the score 12-9 in favor of the Dreadnots. In the second half both teams seemed to take a new lease on life and the half was very fast, but the Pirates only succeeded in scoring two points while their opponents rolled up six. Referee, Dobbin ; scorer, W. J. Todd.

Sweet Solicitude.

"Why have prices advanced again?" asked the man with the market basket.

"My dear sir," replied the food magnate, "have you not heard how the price of drugs has gone up?"

"Of course."

"We are trying to save you money. We don't want you t. overeat and get sick."—Washington Star.

PUCKERINGS

University of Toronto juniors have their usual large squad of candidates, and Manager Whaley will have a hard task choosing his regulars.

Glen Smith of Woodstock, selected for the all-star junior O.H.A. team, is out with the Riverside seniors. Smith is still eligible to play junior.

"Glad" Murphy has a mild attack of blood-poisoning in one of his arms as the result of a slight football injury. He will not play hockey for a week or more, if at all this season.

Ken Crane, the former Peterboro boy, now with Argonauts, is a clever stock-handler. If he settles down to hard work and gets into condition he should prove a valuable man for the Oarsmen.—Globe.

Hamilton Tigers have decided to confine their intentions to the O.H.A. Intermediate team only, and, therefore, will not have a junior seven. Hamilton Rowing Club will look after the youngsters.

Bob Dibble, the Diamond Sculls candidate, is now trying his hand at hockey. The big fellow has been playing football all fall, and was out with the Argonaut hockey squad at the Toronto Arena.

Reynolds, the Toronto Rowing Club's new defence man from North Bay, looks like a find. He has weight and speed, and, in addition, is a clever stick-handler. He is working very hard to get into condition.

Tom Phillips, the former Kingston star, who is now residing in Hamilton, will coach the Hamilton Rowing Club juniors this season. At present Phillips is not in Hamilton, but will return after Christmas.

St. Michael's will have two candidates for the goalkeeper's job. Addison and Bricker have offered their services. The former is out of town a good deal and the responsibility of defending the little citadel of iron and twine may be divided.

There is likelihood of Dr. Laflamme being used on the St. Michael's defence this season. The Saints will miss the goal-getting ability of the great centre player should he be placed on the rear guard. Frank Rankin is heavier and stronger than for years and ought to materially strengthen the Irish attack.

Toronto O.H.A. senior players are reticent about announcing their club affiliations. They prefer to size up the various teams in an effort to land with a championship seven if possible. With half a dozen teams on the ice, all of whose make-ups are problematical, it is not an easy matter for the players to decide what kind of jersey they will wear.

Jerry Coughlin should shine of the big Gotham Arena. The former local player showed 'em up in Toronto ice on several occasions.

PERT PERSONALS.

The rush of hot air that you hear from a man occasionally may explain the emptiness of his head.

A high salary and a low bank account often are nearly related.

A woman regards a man as a desirable adjunct to the house, although, like the lawn mower and the garden rake, it is often difficult to keep him there.

The man who believes in luck generally contrives to help it all he can in ways other than observing the signs.

COMMENT

As You Like it

Eddie Lamy, the speediest individual who ever wore a pair of blades and also the centre fielder for London's Canadian League Club, made an announcement last summer to the effect that he intended turning his mind to pro hockey. He selected Ottawa as the scene of his efforts and a Capital exchange refers to him as follows:—

"Eddie Lamy will be in shape in a few days and Coach Smith will then have an opportunity of reaching a verdict. Lamy, of course, has a long way to go before he classes with any of the other regulars, but he has everything in his favor and may be worth carrying. He is anxious to become a big league hockey star and is willing to remain. A couple of months under the watchful eyes of Coach Smith should help Lamy to a great extent."

That's about the strain of the dope we handed out last July when Lamy made his announcement. He's a speed skater and all that but put a hockey stick in his hand and other players not nearly so speedy will make him look like a goal post.

Fred Denison's bursts of speed will be missed when the blue and white alight on the ice this winter but it is pleasing to note that "Old Dennie" is showin' 'em up on the Toronto Arena. All the big boy wanted was a chance and now he is having that chance. That he will make good is beyond all question and we miss our guess if he does not split honors with Hefferuan.

Port Hope Juniors have organized with the following men at the helm: Honorary Presidents, H. T. Bush, E. H. Thurber, Dr. L. B. Powers; President, F. H. Brown, Vice-President, R. Chalk; Manager, J. Rowden; Secretary-Treasurer, B. Lowe; Executive Committee, F. L. Curtis, S. Lockington, J. Henderson.

Stratford still leads when it comes to hockey. A senior team will represent Rankinville in the Northern League while two O.H.A. teams will be entered as usual.

Man's mission in life is to pay for what woman wants.

Mr. T. Harry Adams has returned to the city.

Rev. Father Galvin of Norwood was in the city today.

Mr. Thomas Record of Winnipeg, Man., is home visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Record, 417 Rogers Street.

Mr. Joseph Wearing was in Port Hope over Sunday and addressed the congregation of the Baptist church morning and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Elliot, Madoc, Ontario, announce the engagement of their daughter, Edythe Candace, to Mr. William Frederick Leader, of Ottawa. The marriage to take place early in the New Year.

Mr. C. L. Howse, who has resigned as manager and chief engineer of the Utilities Commission, will leave tomorrow for his home at Beamsville, Ont. He could not state definitely where be will locate. The duties will be assumed tomorrow morning by Mr. H. O. Fisk.

The proceeds from the "At home" which was held at Mrs. Fisk's residence under the auspices of the Peterborough Progressive Club for the benefit of the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, amounted to twenty-seven dollars and fifty-six cents; seven dollars and ten cents of this amount was taken in at the candy table. The Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, Shorncliffe, England, was formerly the country seat of Sir Arthur Markham. The house has been turned into an up-to-date hospital, and Sir Arthur has provided an X-ray equipment. In connection with the hospital are convalescent homes. The doctors and nurses attached to the hospital are Canadians, with Sir William Osler as physician in chief and Dr. Donald Armour chief surgeon. The hospital at present is filled with Belgian soldiers, injured in the defence of Antwerp. When the Canadian contingent is sent to the front, this hospital will be held in readiness for the Canadian wounded. The expenses in connection with the hospital are very great, and there are many urgent needs. The president of the Peterborough Progressive Club, Miss H. Peck, received a letter from Dr. Armour asking for the help of the Peterborough women, and stating that "anything that can be done on behalf of the hospital will be deeply appreciated." It has been found that the best way to work for this hospital is through the Queen's Needlework Guild. Queen Mary, who takes a deep interest in the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, has appointed Miss Merritt, of St. Catharines, to establish throughout Canada branches of the Queen's Needlework Guild, and the Queen desires that these branches work for the hospital. A committee has been formed in London to work in conjunction with the Canadian branches of the guild, and this committee, which includes among others Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, Lady Strathcona and Lady Osler, will from month to month post the Canadian workers as to the requirements of the hospital. The Peterborough Progressive Club contemplates asking Miss Merritt to come to Peterborough early in January to address the Peterborough women with the object of establishing a branch of the Queen's Needlework Guild here.

G. N. GORDON TO RUN FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

The cloud that has enveloped the municipal pot has lifted. The fact was made known today that G. N. Gordon, city solicitor, will be a candidate for the Board of Education. The Review surmised that something was going to be doing and secured an interview with Mr. Gordon. He stated emphatically that he is coming out and has a few reasons for his advent into educational circles.

Mr. Gordon claims that he is going to see if the rate of 9.74 mills which is going toward the upkeep of public schools and the collegiate institute cannot be cut down a trifle. He also is of the opinion that the Board of Education is in error when they grant an increase in a teacher's salary every year when there is a possibility of the teacher becoming less competent year by year.

There is nothing to prevent Mr. Gordon from acting in the capacity of City Solicitor and also member of the Board of Education.

Yours truly,

THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER.

The Whitney Opera Company presented "The Chocolate Soldier" at the Opera House Saturday night. It is an opera bouffe based on George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The Chocolate Soldier in itself has great drawing power, the arias being exceedingly attractive as is practically all of Oscar Straus' music. The humor and satire of the piece is also good, there being much depth of meaning behind the satirical depiction of war and its heroes. After all, the uniform and the telling of battles, gives most of the glamour to arms. The subject is thus exceptionally well chosen.

As to the presentation of the opera bouffe there may be two opinions, one that the company did not present it very well because, on the whole, lacking a stage attractiveness that dazzles its audience, what some might call appearance. Others would praise the presentation just because it lacked to a certain extent that very quality. We would feel like praising the presentation as it was, because at no time were mannerisms of the stage overemphasized. No two plays require the same emphasis and what would be ostentatious and ridiculous in one would be quite the reverse in another. This play had its drawing power in the subject, the humor, satire and music. For that reason the acting should be in harmony with or subject to the play, characterized by reserve, and this was done by the company.

Tena Rasband as Nadina Popoff, and John R. Phillips as the Chocolate Soldier, took the leading roles well. George Tallman as Major Alexius Spiridoff, acted well but did not have his voice under as good control as it might have been. Some in the chorus were apparently new to it, not singing well and were not very familiar with the drill and salutes. In the chorus there were one or two leaders and one tenor that deserves mention. Madison Smith, Detinar Poppin, and Vilty Burke also played well. On the whole, the company made a good presentation but a stronger company would have offered the play with greater range and power.

TWILIGHT MUSICALE.

Another large and appreciative audience attended the second W. A. A. Musicale given on Saturday afternoon in the Conservatory of Music hall. A delightful program was contributed by Mr. M. Weller, Dr. Park, Mrs. Middleton and Mr. Tom Smith. The Conservatory orchestra as usual rendered several selections in customary enjoyable style their work winning hearty applause each time.

The vocalism of Mr. Weller proved most acceptable, his rich baritone showing splendid range and control. Dr. Park, as was expected, played in his invariably pleasing style and received a good measure of the applause.

Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton in two soprano solos, pleased everyone and was also cordially applauded.

Mr. Tom Smith in a violin-cello part showed his complete understanding and mastery of all the delightful possibilities within his instrument.

These monthly musicales are gaining in popularity and drawing large audiences of the city's music loving people.

The program:

Overture in B Flat—Verdi—Orchestra.

Baritone Solo, "The Recessional"—Mr. M. Weller.

Delibes, "Pizzicato Polka" — Orchestra.

Cello Solo, "Nazareth" — Mr. T. Smith.

Soprano Solo, "The Gift" — Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton.

Baritone Solo, "A Farewell"—Mr M. Weller.

Violin Solo, "Scene de Ballet" — Dr. Park.

Soprano Solo, "The Birthday of the King"—Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton.

Tebani, "Round the Christmas Tree"—Orchestra.

Miss Dean was the accompanist.

IN AND OUT OF GERMANY

cheered for the Kaiser. They smashed all English signs and did considerable damage to the British embassy.

"I was in the crowd and had to go with the tide. As soon as I could I got into a side street and got home."

Referring to Belgium, Mr. Staples said that the truth was that the frontier from Belfort to Verdun was very short, and that Germany simply could not use her men on it. She had to use either Belgium or Switzerland, and Belgium was the better. The Germans felt they were bound to win any way. They said the socialists are in power in France and that they won't fight.

The prisoners in the concentration camps are very well cared for, if they behave themselves.

There seems to be a want of confidence in Austria.

As to Germany's resources in men, there were piles of them that had not yet been drawn upon. They were in training camps getting in shape for service. Dresden was full of wounded, as are practically all the cities that have any accommodation for such cases. There was hardly a family that had not lost a relative in some form or another.

Many stores and businesses that depended on foreign trade are doing really nothing. Student life has practically ceased. All who are able-bodied are under arms, both students and professors. In Dresden there is one of the largest technical schools in Germany, having possibly under normal conditions 2000 students. There were when Mr. Staples left possibly 213 or 230, mostly foreigners or cripples who could not be utilized in the army. All foreign students were interned, although Mr. Staples was not. He had to report twice a week to the authorities, but any who behaved and kept quiet were not molested. Arrests were, however, made on very slight provocation. The war did not make any difference in the way his German friends treated him. There is plenty of food in Germany. Dresden alone has supplies sufficient for one year, and most places are similarly stocked.

Are in the Dark.

The people do not know what is going on at the battle front. There is no detailed information in the newspapers, only the brief official reports, save for an occasional letter from the front telling about church services there.

"How did you get out?" was one of the first questions we asked.

"Well it was really through the kindness of the head of the Foreign Department of the Dresden Police and I think he was sick of his job. Through some friends I got an introduction to him and explained that I had studied theology but was not ordained, that I would return to my studies and that there could be nothing gained by keeping me in Germany. So, when the order came to allow all medical men and ministers to go free he gave me the necessary papers. His word carried, although it could have been contradicted higher up. I had a long wait in Amsterdam for my luggage. You see I didn't dare ship it on the same train, for no one knew when a train would be commandeered. For two weeks there were absolutely no trains. They were all taken to carry troops. When I got to Liverpool, I was delayed eleven days by a strike of the seamen. Finally they got up a crew of men who were not regular seaman, but who agreed not to strike and we put to sea in the Allan steamship Hesperian. Then we encountered frightful weather as soon as we started, the men all got sick, and the stokers couldn't shovel coal, so we only made about half the regular speed and were 11 days going to St. John."

Mr. Staples graduated from Toronto University in 1911 with the degree of B.A. and in 1912 won the degree of M.A. taking two courses, Philosophy and Modern History. He is now in his final year in the theological course at Knox College having taken his second year in theology at Edinburgh University, Scotland. He is a nephew of Mr. Robert Fair of this city and expects to complete his course for the ministry this coming spring.

"Are you able to make both ends meet?"

"I should say not. It's been so long since the cost of living has met my salary that if they should come together now they'd meet as strangers." —Detroit Free Press.

SPORT AND TRAVEL IN CENTRAL AFRICA AT THE EMPIRE

The famous Pathe film "Sport and Travel in Central Africa" will be shown at the Empire Theatre today, tomorrow and Wednesday. This film, which is produced in five reels, is marked by some of the most beautiful scenery ever brought to America by camera men penetrating the wilds of the African contingent. Leopards, monkeys, lions and other wild animals peculiar to the region unknowingly posed before the camera.

One of the features of the film is the spot, marked by monuments, where Lord Kitchener met the Marchand expedition in 1898. Citizens at all intimate with the South African war story will relish this picture beyond anticipations.

FRAME HOUSE LOST BY FIRE

ter was available to fight the flames. About two dozen men "dug in" and carried water, but the flames burned so quickly and spread with such rapidity that their fight was not of great account.

Had the alarm been properly turned in and the department not been sent on a wild goose chase into East City, it is possible the loss would not have been nearly so great. As it was, the department was given one of the hardest runs in its history, leaving one of the horses in bad condition today.

Miss Bertha M. Mowry, superintendent of the Isolation Hospital, noticed the reflection from the burning house first, and it appeared to her to be near the water works plant. She promptly telephoned to Chief Howard, who set out in the motor chemical engine with the driver and the Toronto man in charge of it, and two firemen. Immediately afterward an alarm was rung in from box 57, which is near Auburn in East City. The remainder of the department responded to this box, only to find the fire was not there, but on the other side of the river. Another alarm from box 48 was then turned in, which was near the fire. They had to lose valuable time racing back before they reached the scene, and by that time it was too late. Chief Howard in the chemical engine, however, went direct to the fire, but by the time they reached there, despite their speed, the flames were so far advanced that the house was practically destroyed, so chemicals were not used. The chief and his men, however, materially assisted in saving both of the adjoining buildings from being touched. The hour being early, a great number of people congregated at the scene.

Vigorous Counter Attacks Fail to Dislodge Allied Stand Along Yser Canal---English Troops Win Forest---German Infantrymen Gained a Foothold Before Steinbach.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 15. — The official information bureau today gave out the following statement:

"A combined attack by the Allies was made yesterday on the line from Hollebeke to Wyteschaete in Belgium. Several German trenches and a number of prisoners were captured. Substantial progress was made."

PARIS, Dec. 15. — The official announcement this afternoon says:

"Between the sea and the Lys the English have occupied the little forest to the west of Wyteschaete. The ground gained yesterday by our troops along the Ypres Canal and to the west of Hollebeke has been retained in spite of a vigorous counter attack on the part of the enemy.

"From the Belgian frontier to the Somme there is nothing to report.

"From the Somme to the Argonne there has been intermittent cannonading.

"In the Argonne we have made some progress and retained advances made by us on preceding days.

"In the Vosges, the railroad station of St. Leonard, to the south of St. Die, has been violently bombarded by the Germans from a considerable distance.

"In Alsace there has been much activity on the part of the enemy's artillery with the exception of that before Steinbach, where an attack by German infantrymen coming from Uffholtz was successful in gaining a foothold.

"We have everywhere retained positions won previously by us."

BERLIN'S MAYOR ASKS FOR HELP

Wants Legislature to Pass Bill Dealing With Civic Business

No less a person than the mayor of Berlin had his name at the bottom of a letter read last night at the meeting of the finance committee. The name of the gentleman was Euler—quite Germanic—but the date line read, Berlin, Ont. The request was for assistance in urging the Provincial Parliament to pass a bill governing business transactions between city councils and public utilities' commissions. The communication was left on the fyle, to be dealt with later.

Had Majority of Over 5000 Over His Opponent

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

EDMONTON, Dec. 15. — W. T. Henry defeated Joseph Adair yesterday in the mayoralty election by 5,500 majority. James Ramsay, Jos. Pickard, S. W. Williamson, H. A. Calder, W. C. McArthur and R. N. Frith were elected aldermen by 3,000 to 4,000 majority.

Henry was also elected to fill the office for the balance of this year by 6,000 majority over Mayor McNamara, who was unseated.

The successful ticket was nominated in consequence of police investigation revelations, and stood for a clean city policy with respect to the social evil.

GERMANY DOOMED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 15. — The New York Times this morning says that Germany is bankrupt in statesmanship, over-matched in arms, condemned by the world, and befriended only by two dying nations, Austria and Turkey, and is doomed to sure defeat. If Russia, France and Britain cannot soon accomplish it, then Italy, Holland, Denmark, Switzerland and the Balkans will pitch in and make sure for their own safety that the work is finished.

Swedish Ships Cannot Enter the Baltic by North Sea

BRITISH PUBLIC CONVINCED BY DARING EXPLOIT OF B 11

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Dec. 15. — A London cable to the Herald says even greater than the rejoicing which followed the victory of Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick E. Sturdee in the South Atlantic last week was the spirit throughout the United Kingdom, which greeted the official declaration of the daring exploit of the British submarine B11. With the stealth of a panther and daring which surpasses everything hitherto recorded in British naval history, he braved destruction by five special chains of mines, laid in the most treacherous of currents and sent the Turkish battleship Messudish to the bottom of the Dardanelles.

As a just reward for such intrepidity, Lieut.-Commander Holbrook and his crew escaped in the submerged craft, running the gauntlet of heavy gun fire from other warships of the Turkish fleet and the shore and finally escaping unharmed from the guns of the pursuing destroyers.

The feat of the B11 has served to convince the British public of one fact which there might have been a lingering doubt. It is that the efficiency of the British submarine is as great as that of the German and that when opportunity presents itself British commanders may be relied upon to dare as great difficulties as have hitherto been dreamed of.

WATCHMAN SAVED BY TRAIN CREW

Oil Warehouse Underneath His Tower Took Fire

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, ONT., Dec. 15. — Wm. Everett, Grand Trunk watchman at a crossing here, had a narrow escape from death this morning at 3 o'clock. A train of cars was shunted into an oil warehouse and 1,000 gallons of oil took fire directly underneath Everett's watch tower.

The train crew effected his rescue by sliding down a plank through the flames.

ALD. DUNCAN NOTES COMPLAINTS AGAINST THE CHARGES FOR HOUSE LIGHTING, BUT NO ACTION IS TAKEN

After a few matters relative to the expropriating of the Peterborough Light and Power Company were dealt with at the power committee meeting last evening, Ald. Duncan brought up a short discussion on the numerous complaints against the charges of the Utilities Commission for house lighting. He thought a recommendation should be sent to the Commission urging them to take steps immediately to overcome the trouble.

The other members of the committee thought that it would hardly be proper for the committee to send such a recommendation, and on the assurance of Ald. Johnston that the Commission is getting things running a little more smoothly of late, no action was taken.

COLD WEATHER IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Extremely sudden cold weather last night sent the mercury down to 12 degrees with zero expected tonight. At Pittsburgh, official 3 below, and unofficial 10 below, were reported.

Northern New York has been under from two to five feet of snow, and several trains on the New York Central have been stuck.

DR. GORDON IN HOT WATER BECAUSE OF STATEMENT

Police Magistrate of Woodstock Says he Doesn't Know What He's Talking About and That His Statement is Ridiculous

Woodstock, Dec. 15.—That Dr. J. L. Gordon didn't know what he was talking about and that his statement that Woodstock was the most drunken city he had ever been in, was not founded on facts was the reply made by Police Magistrate Ball to the statements made at Sunday's Christian citizenship meetings by the doctor. Magistrate Ball was most indignant regarding the utterances of Dr. Gordon and his belief was that the statements were simply ridiculous.

The statements of His Worship were seconded by Chief Killing who thought that Dr. Gordon's remarks were very far fetched indeed. The chief, while refusing to discuss the matter at any length, stated that he had seen more drunks in one block in a certain Western city than he had seen in Woodstock in months.

HERE'S HOPING WE ARE DODGING SOME "JACK JOHNSONS" WHEN YOU RECEIVE THIS

The following letter has been received from a Peterboro soldier at Salisbury Plain:—

Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plain, Nov. 27.—Raining torrents as usual. Sunshine here is like Xmas, it comes but once a year.

Today had that population of Canada been here they would have witnessed one of the most spectacular manoeuvres of the present day. The entire contingent consisting of nearly 33,000 men, took part in what promises to be our last big military performance on old Salisbury Plain. The various brigades assembled about ten o'clock this morning at a point some three miles from camp. Here we were received by General Alderson and headquarters staff, also Gen. Cameron of the famous London Scottish. Several other persons of note also were present.

After the few preliminaries were completed the contingent advanced for a couple of miles and halted for dinner. Here the artillery was brought into position. It was certainly a wonderful, inspiring sight, almost thrilling in fact. The horses dashed around the valley and covered the sky line. During luncheon they moved toward our objective about five miles distant. Several regiments were then swung into position to bring up the attacking party. The divisional mounted scouts patrolled the field. These were followed by the telephone corps and main body. Our battalion constituted part of the main body and halted at a considerable distance from the objective. The plan being so entirely successful it was deemed wholly unnecessary to advance the troops any farther. Everything was carried out with such energy and practical understanding on all sides that the movement was that of a huge machine. In all probability this will be our farewell here. From rumors and reports we are due for a move. We have been organized again to the old A. Company system and the 57th is A. Co. again instead of having the Ottawa Guards with them as in the platoon system. Major Bennett is in charge with Lieuts. Kidd, McLellan and Whalen next in rank. Lt. C. H. Ackerman has been transferred as Sr. Lieut. in G. Company.

It's some life and one could hardly recognize the fellows who once meandered around the old town in the earnest, clean, healthy looking khaki clad figures who spend six and seven hours in military tactics every day. The English papers speak of them as the right true breed.

Reveille sounds long before sunrise and we have to crawl out of blankets in the nipping air. There is no grumbling no matter what the result is. Recently we have had nothing except field manoeuvres in battalions, in battle formation.

Speaking of trench digging, Heber Rogers, Bill Gibson and myself were unfortunate enough one might say to be put on a railroad fatigue a few days ago. We were handed picks and shovels and along with 200 others constructed about two miles of railroad from 9 o'clock in the morning till 4 in the afternoon.

"Scottie" Chalmers who was plucked at the final medical examination at Val Cartier is here. He enlisted with the Borden Beauties.

Here's hoping we are dodging some "Jack Johnsons" when you receive this letter.

FINANCE CHAIRMAN IS PLANNING TO DROP TAXES TO TWENTY-FIVE MILLS

Rate is Possible Unless Unforeseen Circumstances Come to Light — With This Rate the Amount of Taxes Would be $22,967 in Excess of This Year

Nobody tries to save money during the Christmas tide, but many good resolutions for 1915 are taken. The making of resolutions is not confined to citizens, but has reached the guardian of the city's gold. Alderman Johnston, chairman of the finance committee. The movement for which Ald. Johnston is making the plans is to be a downward one, and many will be pleased to learn that the said downward glide is due to occur in the tax rate.

Of course, the matter will have to be threshed out by the council of next year, but the finance minister is preparing his speech for the meeting when the discussion will be opened. As many citizens, particularly the retail merchants, are aware, there was a decided increase in the assessment for 1915, and the assessment for 1914. The exact figures are: $10,196,364 for this year, and $11,522,905 for next year, an increase of $1,326,541. The taxes of this year at the rate of 26 mills amounted to $265,105.46, and should the same rate be in force next year, the result of Tax Collector Green's efforts will be $299,595.53, due to the increase of assessment. The increase, therefore, will be something like $34,490.

Looking over the prospective expenditures, one naturally feels that the interest on the sinking fund of the debentures for street paving and ordinary sewers and sidewalks will be large. As a matter of fact, expenditure along that line, which did not take place in 1914, and will occur in 1915, will be about $6,500, according to information secured from City Treasurer Frank Adams. The board of works' appropriation is slightly under $30,000, and the chairman of the finance committee thinks that can be pulled down a little. The fire, water and light asks in the neighborhood of $17,000. Chief Howard informs the Review that he intends keeping his demand down as low as possible, as the Chief remarked, "This year we'll all have to use common sense." If the appropriations are kept well pared—by that the idea of leaving necessary work undone is not endorsed—Ald. Johnston believes that the rate can be dropped to 25 mills. "You see," he remarked, "if we drop the rate to 25 mills our taxes will amount to $22,967 more than they did for 1914, and that ought to carry us by."

"Allowing for the $10,000 to the Patriotic Fund?" asked the Review man

"Yes, allowing for the $10,000 for the Patriotic Fund."

Look After Home Guard.

"What about the Home Guard?"

"We'll take care of the Home Guard, too. There is a movement on foot to have all the municipal elections go by acclamation, and if such is the case the one thousand dollars used for election purposes can be given to the Home Guard."

Board of Trade Meets Tonight

Ways and means for keeping money circulated this winter instead of having it hoarded up will be one of the matters for discussion at the Board of Trade meeting tonight that is bound to be interesting. The arrangements regarding C. P. R. passenger train service for Peterborough will also be reported upon, showing the action taken by the Board of Trade in the matter.

Every member is asked to make a determined effort to be at this meeting, as the discussion slated is said to be of a character helpful to merchants, business men, in fact all who attend.

SCHEME IS NOW WELL UNDERWAY

To Bring About Wider and More General Use of the Flag

COMMITTEE SELECTED

To Bring in Report for Another Meeting to be Held Friday Night

No definite action was taken last evening by the meeting which took place in the city council chamber called to discuss a more general use of the flag in Peterborough, but a strong committee was selected to cooperate in bringing in a report for another public meeting scheduled for next Friday evening at the same place. Some of the most representative men in the community are on this committee and they are expected to prepare and formulate a definite plan whereby a wider and more general display of the flag will be required.

The meeting while comparatively small in the matter of attendance was big in enthusiasm which seemed to increase as it progressed. Prominent citizens like Daniel O'Connell, F. D. Kerr, J. A. Aylmer, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Major Walker, Vincent Eastwood, Canon Davidson, Colonel Miller and W. R. Travers have thrown themselves heart and soul into the proposal and intend staying by it until some of the plans first suggested by Canon Davidson are carried to a successful issue.

DEMOCRATIC ARMY.

H. E. Gresham, British consul in Cleveland, said the other day:

"In the British volunteer army a democratic spirit prevails. Yes, this spirit prevails even among the most aristocratic regiments.

"It is said that a company of the sportsmen's regiment was being drilled at New Forest. The sergeant, an elderly stableman, said to one of the young recruits, who happened to be the brother of an earl:

"'Head up Montaig!' (So he pronounced the name.) 'Head up.

"'My name isn't Montaig — it's Monta-gue,'' said the young man.

A THEORY APPLIED TOO GENERALLY.

THE MEDICAL FRATERNITY have many methods of treating cases that are based on theory, and one of these methods is called vaccination. There is evidence both for and against the practical application of the theory, but the limited knowledge of what some diseases are, and a want of some other method of combatting them, have led to confidence being placed in the theory. The weight of evidence is, we believe, in favour of the practice recommended by medical men. Still, the cases in which the theory has failed when applied call for some consideration, and condemn unhesitatingly the policy that a general rule for treatment should be made for all persons.

In many instances, where vaccination has failed, the failure has been due not so much to the method or process, but to the unsuitability of the patient to stand the treatment. To make a rule that all persons should be vaccinated for a certain disease, say in an outbreak of smallpox or typhoid, is to assume that all such persons have the physical stamina to undergo safely the treatment recommended. That this is not the case is borne out by long sicknesses and deaths, due to vaccination alone, and not to an attack of the disease for which they were treated.

The same criticism applies to the army. All who volunteer for the Overseas Expeditionary Forces and are accepted are not of the same degree of physical fitness. The British Government recognizes some such principle as this when it ordered that vaccination for typhoid for the British Expeditionary Forces be optional. A medical man should be able to judge fairly well of a person's fitness for such treatment, but there should be some regulations for his guidance. The evidence indicates that the treatment should not be made obligatory on every person, and the public has not yet recognized the principle that the unfit or unhealthy must be killed off for the prevention of disease or for the protection of the strong. It seems that there should be a change in the regulations regarding Canadian Overseas soldiers, making vaccination optional. It is reasonable to suppose that all capable of being vaccinated would be so treated, for men desire to be fortified against disease as much as against an enemy. The following paragraph from the Ottawa Citizen is pertinent to this question and shows in what way the theory of vaccination, however good, should not be applied:

> "Several more deaths are recorded from pneumonia and other diseases among the Canadian Expeditionary Force at Salisbury Plain. The explanation is that the typhoid inoculation to which the men were subjected prevents typhoid, but, of course, doesn't guarantee immunity from any other disease which may develop either as a result of the inoculation or otherwise. In other words, the patient, when he dies, doesn't officially die of typhoid."

SELF-REFUTED.

WHEN THE GERMAN Crown Prince, comments the Hamilton Herald. In the interview which he granted to an American newspaper correspondent, discussed the cause of the war, he appears to have forgotten what he wrote in a recent magazine article. In the interview he is reported to have mentioned the "iron ring" of Germany's enemies gradually closing in upon her. "We foresaw," he said, "and as far as possible forestalled the attempt to crush us within this ring." Thus he tried to make it appear that Germany and Austria are engaged in a defensive war against their will.

But the New York Evening Post quotes against the Crown Prince an extract from an article contributed by him to the leading Austrian magazine, the Oesterrichische Rundschan, no longer ago than last July. In this article he glorified war and advocated it for its own sake as the only means by which Germany could maintain its traditions and its influence. "The German Empire," he wrote, "has, more than any other of the peoples of our old earth, the sacred duty to maintain her army and her navy always at the highest point of readiness to strike. Only so, relying on our good sword, can we obtain the place in the sun which is our due, but is not voluntarily conceded to us."

The whole article is a justification of war as a deliberate policy—not defensive, but aggressive war.

However, it is hardly fair to blame the young man for his inconsistency. It is quite probable that when he talked to the American correspondent he had forgotten the magazine article for the reason that someone else had written it for him.

THE INDIAN OFFICE reports that 1,100 Turkish prisoners, exclusive of wounded, and nine guns were captured at Kurna, on the Persian Gulf, which was occupied recently. That's another thing Germany didn't expect.

A LOSING FIGHT.

IN A VERY appropriate manner, the Montreal Mail says editorially, the illness of the Kaiser seems to come at this time as symbolical of Germany's failing plans on land and sea. On the ocean, Germany has just suffered the greatest defeat of the war. The elusive strategy with which she has challenged with considerable immunity the superior British sea power has broken down. The grim realization of their inevitable defeat at sea may bring home to the German people a distressing anticipation of their inevitable defeat on land.

The German war policy demands progress and success. The whole warlike philosophy which has intoxicated the Germans is founded upon confidence in the superiority of German arms. The German appetite for efficiency must be fed on triumph, otherwise efficiency becomes inefficiency. The Germans dislike that. It means a readjustment of their mental and moral attitude to face a new situation created by events.

The Kaiser is a sick man, and Germany, like Turkey, is a "sick man." Her armies in the West are being forced back. Her successes in the East have been over-capitalized. Her navy is shattered, or out of action.

Germany will fight on, but, these days, her cause is marching back. President Wilson's refusal to increase the national armament is not born of confidence in Germany's success. This world war has entered on a new phase, which seems to give us a moral advantage, as well as a material gain.

ABUSING THE LAW.

THERE IS WARNING for the Ontario Legislature, says the Toronto News editorially, in the alleged abuse of the Manitoba moratorium. The act was designed for the protection of the poor man against merciless mortgagees who might take advantage of monetary conditions in war-time to obtain possession of his property by foreclosure. It is being used by well-to-do and unscrupulous speculators to increase their own profits at the expense of unoffending creditors.

Though well able to meet all their obligations promptly, they are refusing to pay their debts as these fall due unless they are granted extravagant discounts. In one instance mentioned by the Winnipeg Free Press the debtor calmly admits that he is in default, that he is quite able to pay, but prefers hanging on to his creditor's money, and speculating with it, as long as beneficial legislation will enable him to do so. He adds a threat that the moratorium is to be extended another eight months, and thus hopes to swindle his creditor out of 15 per cent. or 20 per cent. discount, as a condition of payment.

This sharper plainly informs his helpless creditor that, as the moratorium releases him from the obligation of making payments on principle during war-time, he can meantime loan the money at a high rate of interest to his own great advantage. This he means to do unless the mortgagee forgives him a great part of the debt. It is not probable that any absolute moratorium will be established in Ontario. The Legislature is likely to give debtors the right to a hearing by judges before they can be dispossessed of their property. If judges are granted discretionary powers of this character, the relief measure should result in the maximum of good with a minimum of evil.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

DENIAL of the charges made by Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador to the United States, that the Union Metallic Cartridge Company has shipped to Canada since October 8,000,000 soft-nosed or "mushroom" bullets, for use in the British army, is contained in a letter sent to Count Von Bernstorff by S. F. Pryor, vice-president and general manager of the Remington Arms-Union Metallic Cartridge Company, and thus another lie is nailed.

Service in Life and Wealth.

(London Clarion.)

In this great adventure we are equal. In this struggle for national life we return to basic conditions. The nation is all of us. The strength and life of each is the treasure of all. Who only gives his superfluity must deem himself a mean and insufficient payer as compared with him who gives the country his life. The least we can give to the men who face the terror of the enemy's shrapnel is generous maintenance for their wives, children and dependents; lifelong maintenance for those who in the country's service lose limbs or the means of livelihood; and such little consolation as security of subsistence can afford to the bereaved widows and orphans of our heroes fallen in battle.

If we are the great and magnanimous nation we claim and believe ourselves to be, these compensations will be granted without discussion. If our ruling classes demur to these vital conditions of national greatness, our defeat will show that we deserve it.

Bernstorff, America's Vaudeville Star.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Whenever Dr. Dernburg and other German apologists at work in the United States begin to hope that public opinion will turn their way, Count Von Bernstorff comes forward and spoils their game. The count's latest bit of folly is his formal protest to the Washington Government against the acceptance by American firms of large orders for dum-dum bullets from the British Government. It has been promptly proved that no such orders have been given or received, and the count has once more contributed to the gaiety of a nation.

Sir Robert Borden's Calm Statement.

(Montreal News.)

Sir Robert Borden's calm statement of what Canada will do in this world war is as comforting as it is necessary. Some politicians would have made a "speech"; Mr. Borden did better; he justified our participation in the war without perfervid periods. War is a serious business; and the Prime Minister emphasized the seriousness of it by the way in which he handled his subject.

An Impending Calamity.

(Toronto Telegram.)

German universities are said to have cancelled the credentials of every Britisher heretofore entitled to wear a Teutonic degree of Ph.D. The disappearance of so many Ph.D.'s will leave this country with nothing to rely on but K.C.'s, LL.D.'s and Vets.

Unreasonable Man.

(Buffalo Courier.)

"Men are always late. I have waited here since six o'clock for my husband to come, and it is now seven-thirty."

"At what hour were you to meet him?" asked the woman who had joined her.

"At five o'clock."

MUNSTERBERG IS SHOWN UP

Apologist for Germany Called Harsh Names by One Who Knows Him.

"German-American defenders of the Teutonic phase of the European war were mercilessly criticized by Prof. J. G. Hume, Ph.D., head of the Department of Philosophy and Psychology at the University of Toronto, when he delivered an address in Toronto on "The War, Its Causes, and the Defence by the German Professors."

Professor Hume delivered himself of a speech full of passion and almost fiery zeal. So intense were his feelings when referring to the "truculency of Germany and its chief defender in America"—Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University—that he seemed to be consumed with passion, and at times the audience hardly knew whether applause was opportune or not. More significance is added to the remarks of Dr. Hume when it is known that he holds a German degree, and studied under Munsterberg in Germany.

"Professor Munsterberg," said the speaker, "is very versatile, and is always breaking out in new places in the American press. He is soliciting American support for Germany, by endeavoring to embroil her in a war with the Orient by dragging in the yellow peril, which is nothing but a nightmare.

"Other audacious falsehoods have also been permitted to be published in America, and the evasion of the real truth by Mr. Samuel Blythe of The Saturday Evening Post is none the less important. He has only told half the truth, and by so doing he tells the blackest of lies. This man is a notorious liar when he says that there was a cast-iron agreement between France and Britain to keep Germany out of Belgium, and omits to state that Great Britain had signed a similar pact with Germany. If he was totally ignorant of the situation he could be forgiven. If he is possessed of the real truth, then he is guilty of audacious falsehoods.

"Munsterberg and Blythe have charged that Great Britain is jealous of her commercial competitors. If everybody were aware of the facts, it could be passed over as rubbish and balderdash. Thinking people know that the commercial policy of Great Britain is diametrically opposed to any such attitude. The principles of free trade are that her prosperity is her customers' prosperity. Instead of lying in wait to strangle her rival she has opened her markets to the world, and under these circumstances I am here to refute such vile slanders, and Munsterberg's actions in endeavoring to foment trouble in America and the Orient are both calamitous and wicked."

SHARING THE BURDENS

The great thing is to bear your cares in the strength of God day by day. You have only got to bear them one day at a time. God promises strength for the day. Make the law of Day by Day one of the laws of your life. If you carry nothing away from this sermon but the law of Day by Day, you will have carried away a most precious truth which will help you all through life—one day at a time, with daily prayer and daily strength given.

Then, again, if you want to have your own burden lightened, be very ready to help with the burdens of others. The person who finds his burden intolerable is the self-absorbed person. It is extraordinary, when anyone will go out and lend a hand with somebody else's burden, how his own burden seems lighter in a moment. It only shows that we were never meant to live selfish, self-absorbed lives.

"Bear ye one another's burdens"—you may also so change the sentence—"and you will be able to bear your own load."

Therefore, look around to see whether you are living a self-centred life.

Cannot you lend a hand to somebody with a burden?

You will then find yours becomes half as heavy. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and you will be able to bear your own load." —From a sermon by the Bishop of London.

Veils of Horsehair

A real novelty in veils hails from Paris. It is a horsehair veil. While made of hair of the same variety as the coverings of the Victorian sofa, it is quite lacy and open.

Building a Dreadnought

The Admiralty estimates that it takes 600 working days to complete a warship costing $10,000,000. In this time the warship has not only to be built, launched, armored, fitted out with machinery, armament, and so on, but tested by speed, gun and torpedo trials.

Riches of Galicia

Vast stores of undeveloped riches await Russia in Galicia. There are not only the world-famed rock-salt mines at Bokhno and Velitchko, but oil lands and mineral wax deposits at Gorlitsa, iron ore at Piok and Khrjanoff, fire-clay at Monkia, and coal in Lemberg.

Thrown from an auto, a New York policeman is dying, as a result of a silver plate which he had in his skull being driven inward.

LIQUID FUEL ON WARSHIPS

For some time the Admiralty have been considering the advisability of equipping the British Dreadnoughts with oil to replace coal for propelling purposes. A number of warships are driven by liquid fuel, amongst others the famous Undaunted, and that these experiments have proved a success is shown by the fact that the First Sea Lord has been working on a plan to place oil tanks along the British coast for naval use.

Liquid fuel is burned by battleships by means of spraying oil through burners so placed that the flame jets impinge on fire-bricks in the boiler furnaces. In this way great heat can be obtained and steam can be got up in a few minutes by turning on a number of taps.

One of the great advantages of oil fuel is that it is cheaper than coal. About sixteen tons of oil generates as much heating power as twenty-five tons of coal. Also liquid fuel can be transferred from one ship to another even in the roughest sea.

The oil can be pumped through a pipe from the supply boat to the ship requiring the fuel. Coaling in the ordinary way in mid-ocean is a very dangerous undertaking, except in very calm weather. With oil fuel fewer hands are required in the stokehold.

Queer Privilege Crops Up

A coffee-stall opened in the Bank of England for the refreshment of the refugees recalls a little-known privilege of the Bank—no less than the right to sell beer without a license, by the Charter of Incorporation, dated This privilege was allowed the Bank July 27th, 1694, and the directors, if they chose, could open a public-house in Threadneedle Street.

Tommy's Blanket

Lord Kitchener places great stress upon the quality of the soldier's blanket. Sleep to the men in the trenches is almost as important as food—is food, in another sense. It is essential that every fighting man shall have his blanket and that that blanket shall give a sufficient amount of warmth to enable him to sleep.

A DIAMOND RING

By M. QUAD.

If any one had told my friends that I was possessed of the slightest spark of romance at the age of forty-five the information would have been received as a base canard. A bachelor of that age, who has drifted about with all sorts of people and bumped up against all sorts of adventures, is pretty sure to have had all romance knocked out of him.

On a certain Tuesday I took a train at Elmer Junction for London, and as there were but few passengers I had a compartment to myself. I had been busy with a newspaper for half an hour when I noticed a small package lying under the opposite seat. I found it a plain pasteboard box and was prepared to find a specimen of free chewing gum or a new brand of troches inside. It was something different, however. It was a lady's diamond ring, made up of five stones of the purest water, and on the inside were the initials "B. P." The ring was a double hoop of gold and had probably been made to order. It was lying closely in the box, and the box had once contained steel pens. I argued that it must have been some careless person who carried a valuable ring in that fashion.

I am only a fairly honest man. My first idea was to keep the ring to my own profit, but I remembered that I was known to the railway porter and that the property might be traced to me.

If not strictly honest I am prudent, and I therefore gave up the idea of converting the ring. I would hold it for a reward, however. Half an hour later I felt a curious sensation stealing over me. I began to feel sentimental. I began to connect that dear little ring with a dear little blond haired, blue eyed girl. I got up and kicked myself three times and called myself a fool, but the feeling did not go away. To my astonishment and indignation I found it growing stronger, and before I knew it the grip of romance had got me by the neck.

I was a man of leisure, though I had no great amount of money to my credit. I would hunt up the owner of that ring, and if all things went well I would marry her. For a week I watched all the newspapers, but the ring was not advertised. This seemed to prove to me that the owner was either rich and indifferent to her loss or that for some reason the loss had not yet been discovered. Romance made me anxious, and I therefore went to the expense of advertising in five different papers. I simply stated that a diamond ring had been found on a railroad train and asked the loser to correspond.

Inside of three days I received about 150 letters in reply. The 150 writers were fakers and liars, and the true loser had not answered me. I was a bit nettled at this neglect on her part.

I advertised again. This time I asked "B. P." to communicate with me in case she had lost anything. There were just 107 "B. P." answers, but among them I selected one which appeared to be genuine. This "B. P." had lost a double hoop diamond ring containing five stones. It had been lost on a railroad train and was a birthday gift from a dead mother. I was asked to call at the chambers of a certain solicitor to have the ring further identified. I was on hand at the appointed hour. So was a stern faced and aggressive looking householder, together with a slick looking villain whom I had once spotted for a detective and a young woman whose hair was red instead of blond. The ring was speedily identified by the stern faced man and red headed girl. "B. P." was Bertha Perkins, and her father and her maid were before me. Perkins was a country squire, and on the night previous to my finding the ring his daughter's jewels had been stolen. The hoop ring was part of the plunder.

Of course I was ready to hand over the ring, but it wasn't to stop there. The red headed maid was sure she recognized me as the man who was hanging about the grounds a few hours before the robbery, and that villain of a detective was only too glad to snap the handcuffs on my wrists and hurry me off to jail.

It took me three days to prove myself respectable and to establish an alibi. They had to give me my liberty, but it was grudgingly done, and the detective said he'd have an eye on me all the rest of my days. The romance had departed when I was locked up. I came out of jail determined to secure reparation. Old Perkins had helped the red headed girl to conclude that I was the robber, and I went down to his country seat to receive an abject apology or pull his nose. He not only refused an apology, but threatened to kick me off the grounds, and the red headed girl declared I had a cast in my left eye, and by that cast she would swear me in any court as a man who would not stop at murder. There was one more thing to be cleared up. I wanted to find out about "B. P." herself. Was she the blond haired, blue eyed girl of my dreams, and was she worthy of my love? I had not long to wait. I was walking from the country seat to the village when a dogcart knocked me down and rolled me all over the road, and the driver halted to call me a tramp and threaten me with the law. The driver was "B. P." Her hair was bleached, her eyebrows colored and her nose turned up. She had a big mouth, bad teeth and milky eyes, and when she drove on she whistled like a man.

KEEP A BABY BOOK

How a Diary of Baby's First Few Months May Prove Valuable

I started mine when baby was a week old, a young mother wrote in an English periodical. On the first page I wrote the hour and date of his arrival in the world, his weight and height, the color of his hair, and the names of my doctor and nurse.

As the days went by I noted down anything which might be of special interest or use later on. Particulars as to his diet and hours of sleep, nurse's method of managing him, little "tips" she gave me about his health, how much he gained when we weighed him at the end of each week, the date of his first outing, and how he got over his vaccination—all about little illnesses and accidents.

Just past his second birthday he got ill, a mysterious malady which called for a specialist.

Already nearly frantic with anxiety, I listened as one dazed to the avalanche of questions the great man hurled at me, concerning baby's birth, his infantile maladies, symptoms during teething, any shock or bad fall he might have had.

How could I possibly remember, in detail, things that had happened two years before?

Suddenly the baby book flashed into my mind. There, in black and white, were the very particulars the specialist wanted, and which helped him more than anything else to diagnose the case.

When Baby the Second arrived on the scene, various difficulties arose. She couldn't digest her food, was dreadfully restless at night, and suffered with inflamed eyes. I looked in the book, and found we had had practically the same bother with Baby the First!

Our anxieties were lessened by half, for there, in minutest detail, were particulars of his diet. So once more my baby book came to the rescue, and ever since then I have urged every mother to keep one.

SOCIETY FAVORITES OF INDIAN DESCENT

LUCILLE (AT TOP) AND GEORGIA PARKER

Two quite unique members of Washington society are the Misses Lucille and Georgia Parker. They are part Choctaw and trace their ancestry, with a great deal of pride, back to the leaders of the tribe when it roamed through the South. The girls are sisters of Mr. Gabe E. Parker, who holds the position of Registrar of the United States Treasury.

Dressing Biscuit

One quart of stale bread crumbs. Soak in cold water. Squeeze dry. Put 2 tablespoons of bacon dripping into skillet. Chop 1 medium-sized onion, drop into fat and cook slightly brown and add soaked crumbs, and stir until all become a smooth paste. Add any bits of cold meat, ham, veal, beef, bacon chopped fine. Drop yolks of 2 eggs into the bread, turn and mix all thoroughly. Allow to cool. Add 1 tablespoon of minced parsley and 1 even teaspoon of baking powder. Mold into biscuit shape and bake in any pan of roasting meat.

This is especially nice with chicken or roast veal.

Glycerine For Coffee Stains

To remove coffee stains, mix equal parts of yolk of egg and glycerine, apply to the stain, and allow to dry on. For a light silk garment the glycerine should be mixed with water instead of yolk of egg.

GOING MAD FROM THE TERRIFIC PAIN

Prominent Merchant Thinks His Life Was Saved By "Fruit-a-tives".

DRYSDALE, ONT., JUNE 15th, 1913.

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to Inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives", and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness".

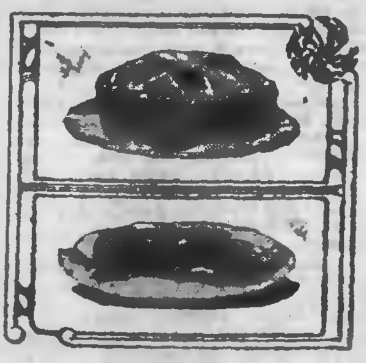
THE FISH COURSE.

Lobster Appropriate to Serve With the Christmas Dinner.

The color of boiled lobster makes it useful at Christmas, when red and green are the seasonable colors. Lobster served whole, dressed with sprigs of holly, is a handsome addition to the table.

Creamed lobster, croquettes or patties are nice, but by far the most popular way of serving it is in a salad. To make this, prepare thick and well seasoned mayonnaise dressing and put it on the ice. Then thrust a clove of garlic in a small cube of bread and put the bread, garlic side down, in the bottom of a cold salad bowl. Mix the sliced meat of a boiled lobster, a hard boiled egg chopped fine, a cupful of chopped celery, salt and pepper and the mayonnaise.



LOBSTER DISHES.

Put the mixture in the salad bowl and arrange a border of crisp, white lettuce leaves. Garnish the dish with the small claws of the lobster. The garlic gives an elusive flavor, but since it is protected from touching the salad by the bread it is in no wise too strong.

Curry of lobster may be prepared with canned lobster. Take between two and three pounds of lobster meat, a small onion, three tablespoonfuls of butter, two of flour, a scant teaspoonful of curry powder, a dash of cayenne, a little salt, a scant pint of water or stock. Let butter get hot; then add onion cut very fine and fry brown. When the onion is cooked add the flour and curry powder and stir all together for two minutes; add stock, cook two more minutes and strain. Add meat of lobster cut into dice and simmer five minutes. Serve with border of boiled rice round the dish.

A Peculiar Worm.

An animal growing between the high and low water marks on the Japanese coasts is a mud worm called sabella. It occupies a hard, limy tube of its own making and gets its food when the high tide comes up over its hiding place by thrusting out a head bushy with tentacles and sucking in currents of water loaded with minute particles of nutriment. Out of this wriggling creature the shore people make soup, which is true vermicelli, not a paste imitation of "little worms," and is said to taste as badly as it smells.

A Busy Man.

Maj.-Gen. the Hon. Sam Hughes is a busy man these times. In a typical day spent at Montreal recently, he not only found time to inspect the 22nd French-Canadians at St. John's, the 23rd and 24th Victoria Rifles, active service regiments for the second Canadian contingent, but also to address the Canadian Club, inspect the barracks at Peel street, hold a conference on divisional military matters with the officers at the headquarters on Union avenue, review the McGill regiment after the parade, but to wind up the day by attending a dinner given in his honor in the evening at the St. James' Club by Dean Adams. Gen. Hughes then took the train for Ottawa.

Used Glass as Razor.

A waif strolled into Agnes street police station for a night's lodging in Toronto recently. Wishing to go forth into the morning air with a clean face he obtained a piece of glass and a cup of cold water. He had no mirror. Still with the quickness and accuracy of a professional barber he shaved himself clean and without a mishap. Patrol Sergeant Hans Majury was startled at first when he paid a visit to the cells and found the man with a piece of glass in his hand. He thought the man was going to cut his throat with the glass but was soon reassured. He was allowed to go with the discharged prisoners and was not taken to court.

Ex-War Prisoners Marry.

Two Germans, who were recently arrested at Gananoque and placed in Fort Henry, were released, and a few days later they were wedded to Gananoque girls.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 14.—An advance of 1½d on the Liverpool market caused a fairly strong opening in the market here today. Prices were ½c to 1c higher, and exporters were good buyers, speculators being the principal sellers.

Oats opened ⅜c higher, but weakened later. Flax opened ⅝c higher for May and advanced 1c later. Previous to closing a sharp break occurred on the big increase in the U. S. visible and the kaiser's state of health. Wheat closed ⅛c to ⅜c lower, oats ⅛c lower, and flax 1½c to 1⅝c higher.

The cash market was quiet in all grains, No. 1 northern and lower grades being the only ones wanted. Cash wheat closed ⅛c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—There was a good demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and as cables were stronger at a further advance of 7½d to 10½d per quarter, the sales of 15 loads were made for December-January and January shipment. There was also some enquiry for barley, but owing to the difficulty of buying any quantity in the west exporters are not in a position to make offers. The local market for coarse grains continues quiet, the demand being only for odd car lots at steady prices. Demand for flour is quiet, and the market is without any new feature. The trade in millfeed is active and the undertone to the market is strong.

There is no change in the condition of the market for butter or cheese, business in both being rather quiet.

Eggs are active and firm.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, this was Christmas market, in that the supply of cattle was much larger than usual, the number of head offered being 1300 in excess of this day week. There was a heavy fall of snow Sunday night, but the weather today was mild, and this, coupled with the general quiet condition of trade here, tended to curtail operations to some extent; consequently the market was void of its usual activity at this season of the year, but on the whole a fair amount of business was done.

Don't expect all the men to wait on you.

Don't argue about the game.

Don't laugh at the bad play of beginners. You yourself were once a novice.

Don't dress in a way that will necessitate your paying more attention to your toilet than to your game.

Don't think that your partner will appreciate you if you leave him to do your share as well as his own.

Don't lose badly. If you are disappointed conceal it bravely and try to rejoice with your victor rather than condole with yourself.

Mutual Service.

A hostess has a right to expect each guest to do his or her share toward contributing to the pleasure of all other guests, this in the first place. Then she also has a right to expect a guest to conform as far as possible to rules concerning meal hours, etc., that are adopted by the family; otherwise there is apt to be a great deal of discomfort, and the result very few if any invitations to "come again."

A Music Room Convenience.

The latest addition to music room equipment is a combination piano bench and music cabinet, recently invented. The top of the bench is in three hinged sections, covering three separate compartments arranged for keeping sheet music in orderly array, says Popular Mechanics. The end pieces are also hinged and swing away from the bench, allowing ready access to any piece of music desired. It is not even necessary to arise from the bench in order to take out or replace a selection from either of the end compartments, which are equipped for vertical filing.

Furniture For Small Rooms.

Massive heavy furniture has gone out of date with the vogue of small rooms, and now the modern housewife tries to give her apartment a bigger, airier appearance with the aid of dainty draperies and light furniture instead of the former dark hangings and plush pieces.

The young housekeeper can turn out a charming room with very little expenditure if she is content to stick to wicker and chintz.

ASK POWERS FOR SALVATION ARMY

Quebec, Dec. 15. — The Salvation Army will ask the next Legislature of the Province of Quebec for a law giving it power to allok its ministers and officers to officiate at marriages, baptisms and funerals and to keep civil records.

The initial steps for the passing of this law have been taken by the organization through their counsel, Messrs. Lighthall and Harwood, attorneys of Montreal, and the last number of the Quebec official gazette gave notice of that request of the Salvationists.

The Salvation Army possesses the powers mentioned above in all the provinces except Quebec.

THE RENOVATION OF NEGLECTED ORCHARDS.

Bulletin No. 79 of the Experimental Farm is entitled "Renovation of Neglected Orchards." It has been prepared by M. B. Davis, B. S. A., assistant to the Dominion Horticulturist. Special attention is given to the following practices: Heading back old trees; thinning, scraping, cleaning, and tree surgery; cultivation and cover crops; systems of cultivation; fertilization; spraying and thinning fruit. The bulletin is generously illustrated. It has been prepared with a view of showing how, with a reasonable amount of labor and care, profitless old orchards, which are a menace to the local orchard industry, may be made a remunerative part of the farm and a credit to the neighborhood. Copies of this bulletin are available at the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Strength to Stand It.

Grateful Patient—By the way, I should be glad if you would send in your bill soon.

Eminent Physician — Never mind about that, my dear madam; you must get quite strong first.—Philadelphia Record.

EGYPT MUST BE FREED

Britain Must Relieve Country of Turkish Influence

CROMER'S LETTER

LONDON, Dec. 15.—An interesting letter on the future of Egypt from Lord Cromer, former British Agent-General and the greatest living authority on Egypt, appears in The Times. He says:—

"If, as appears to be the case, the Khedive has unwisely thrown in his lot with the Germans, his defection will probably be of no great political importance. The personal influence of his highness in Egypt is at present slight. Whatever may be the future political status of that country, Abbas Hilmy can no longer be its ruler. The artificial connections between Turkey and Egypt have long been seriously detrimental to the interests of the latter country. Egypt, as a result of the war, must be wholly and irrevocably relieved of the pernicious mortinam of Turkish sovereignty.

HIS IDEA OF WAR

An Austrian General Sought to Use Cholera Against Enemies

LONDON, Dec. 15. — The Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd says:

The Army Messenger, a newspaper issued by the Russian Staff of the armies at the front, has now learned that the use of cholera cultures as a weapon in modern warfare was proposed officially by Gen. von Hetzendorf for use against the Russians and Servians. Gen. von Hetzendorf's formal proposal was presented to the Supreme Military Council of Austria and warmly opposed by Count Berchtold, Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, who threatened, if such measures were formally sanctioned, to resign his official post.

The Army Messenger, by the way, is the official organ of the Russian army during this war. It was created after the armies had got to work, and is circulated practically only at the front. It is a perfectly trustworthy organ.

GERMANS FORCED BACK ALONG WESTERN LINE

Advances Are Recorded in Belgium, on the Lorraine Frontier, and in Alsace—Heavy Pressure by Allies Between Meuse Fortresses and Metz Forces German Artillery to Abandon Positions.

PARIS, Dec. 15. — In Belgium, along the Lorraine frontier in front of Metz, and in Alsace the French forced the Germans back, according to official announcements made last night.

Owing to the constantly increasing pressure which is being exerted by Gen. Joffre's right wing army against the Germans in the Woevre region, where the invading forces are steadily being forced back on the line between the Meuse fortresses and Metz, the developments in this region are the most significant of the day.

A violent cannonade directed against the German artillery positions located on the heights along the Meuse river failed to provoke any considerable response, and air scouts made a reconnaissance which resulted in the discovery that the German batteries had abandoned their positions, the fury of the French fire evidently having forced them to withdraw to the north.

Infantry engagements were fought in the Mortmare forest, in the Woevre region, the French finally taking the German trenches on a front extending for 500 metres along the edge of the wood. Two counter-attacks were directed against the victorious French troops, in an effort to retake the lost positions, but despite the violence of the onslaughts the French were able to maintain their advantage, effectively repelling the attacking forces.

Strassburg and Muhlhausen are still threatened by the French advance in Alsace. Gains have been made daily against the German resistance in this territory, despite the difficult terrain and the superiority of the German defensive positions.

Following a lull of about twelve hours in the fighting in Flanders, the French resumed the offensive with great vigor, utilizing considerable numbers of the recently arrived reinforcements. In several attacks which they directed against the German positions on the east bank of the Yser they drove the invaders from their first line of trenches and occupied the pits, which they immediately strengthened for their own occupancy. The Germans retaliated with a series of violent counter-attacks against the British trenches to the west of Hollebeke, but their attacks were met successfully, and the massed divisions of Germans hurled back.

The following official communication was issued by the French War Office last night:—

"In Belgium several attacks by the French troops have resulted in progress along the Ypres canal and to the west of Hollebeke. Several violent counter attacks have all been repulsed by our troops.

"The railway station of Commercy, Department of Meuse, was bombarded yesterday by batteries firing from a very great distance, but insignificant damage was done.

"In Alsace an offensive movement resumed by the enemy to the northwest of Cernay has been repulsed.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

The following official report was given out in the afternoon:—

"There is nothing important to report between the North Sea and the Oise. In the region of the Aisne to the northwest of Soupir the enemy has violently bombarded our trenches. We have replied and thrown them into disorder. There was no infantry attack from either side in this region.

"Our artillery has destroyed important works on the slope of the Argonne.

"In the forest of Crurie we have advanced slightly by mining. There have been no attacks by the enemy there.

"On the heights of the Meuse there was a violent cannonade, the enemy's batteries seeming to have been forced to withdraw toward the north.

"In the region of the Woevre, after having taken a line of trenches on a front of 500 yards in the forest of Mortmare our troops repulsed two violent counter-attacks.

"In Alsace our advance has carried our front as far as the line of Hill number 425, to the south of Steinbach, the bridge of Ashpach, the bridge of Drinighoffen."

Big Guns Busy In Alsace.

BERLIN, Dec. 15. — (Via The Hague to London.)—Despatches from the southwestern war zone report that a violent artillery duel was in progress Sunday in upper Alsace, arising apparently from an attempt by the French to advance in the direction of Altkirch. The firing lasted from 11 in the morning until late in the afternoon. The result of the fighting has not been reported.

ORDERS MAY MEAN EARLY DEPARTURE

SALISBURY, Eng., Dec. 15.—Orders were issued from the headquarters of the Canadian camp yesterday, that no leave would be granted to the men after the first of January, thus giving rise to the belief that the force will leave for the front next month.

Twelve officers who refused to return to Canada with the remainder of those unattached, in order to get commissions in the second contingent, have been given commissions in the regulars and territorials. Among them are Capt. Fred Dent, of Toronto, to the Royal Fusiliers; Capt. D. Douglas Eppes, of Toronto, and Lieut. Robinson, of London, to the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry; Capt. Mouch, of Kingston, to the Northumberland Fusiliers; Lieut. Watts, of Brantford, to the Royal Warwickshire Regiment; Lieut. Fletcher, of the York Rangers, to the Tenth Devons.

Some To Go To Egypt.

MONTREAL, Dec. 15.—That the Canadian contingent, or at least a portion of it is probably bound for Egypt is the information contained in a communication received here yesterday from a member of the 14th battalion, first Royal Montreal regiment. He says: "Just got word we are to leave for Egypt this week. Some excitement I can tell you."

SOCIETY NURSES INEFFICIENT

Meagre Training Hardly Beneficial to the Wounded

LONDON, Dec. 15.—As a result a protest from the National Council of Trained Nurses, that incompetent women are serving at the front, and in hospitals, Lord Kitchener, the War Secretary, has called on the council for a detailed report.

The press some time ago directed public attention to the fact that many eager young women, either wealthy or socially prominent, were clamoring for positions as nurses. While the motives of these young women are to be commended, it has been said that meagre training was hardly beneficial to the wounded.

Fire In Winchester Camp.

MONTREAL, Dec. 15.—The news that a fire had broken out in the camp of the Princess Patricia Regiment at Winchester, Eng., which had been responsible for the injury of at least one man, came in a cable from Major Hamilton Gault, notifying Mrs. L. J. Papineau, that her son, Lieut. Papineau, would have to undergo treatment in a hospital for a week. The cable added that the lieutenant had been injured in the course of a fire which broke out last Saturday in the Patricias' camp.

NEW SALVATION ARMY HEAD FOR CANADA.

Commissioner W. J. Richards, new leader of the Salvation Army in this country, and Mrs. Richards. The Commissioner has been identified with the Army for 30 years, having been "discovered" by the late General Booth, who heard the young man speak and was impressed with his enthusiasm. He has had charge of the Army in Denmark, South Africa, and New Zealand. The Commissioner and his wife will visit Peterborough Temple February 27th and 28th.

EXTRA TRAIN SERVICE WILL BE GIVEN WHEN CONDITIONS WARRANT

The secretary of the Board of Trade has received the following letter from M. G. Murphy, C.P.R. Passenger Agent,, Toronto:—

Dear Sir,—In order to render first-class train service to the many prosperous towns along our new Lake Ontario Line, and to reduce the cost of train operation, our management has decided that effective Sunday, December 13th, trains 12 and 20, 21 and 22 will be diverted to the new route. I trust that the citizens of Peterborough and other towns along the main line between Toronto and Smith's Falls will appreciate our position, and understand why it is necessary to make the change.

At the same time, our management has carefully considered the necessity of providing a good train service for Peterboro and other towns, along that route, and will continue the operation of day trains No. 35 and 36 between Toronto and Montreal and Nos. 601 and 602 between Toronto and Tweed, and night trains Nos. 33 and 34 between Toronto and Union Depot and Ottawa. In addition to the Ottawa train No. 34, which will leave Toronto Union at 10.50 p.m., there will be an Ottawa sleeper on train No. 24, leaving North Toronto at 10 p.m.

I ask that you kindly refer to our timetable effective December 13th, which will show close connections to and from Peterboro with all trains to and from points, North, West and South of Toronto.

Our management greatly appreciates your past patronage and trusts that you may continue to favor us.

You may rest assured that the train service via Peterboro route will be given careful attention and extra train service will be arranged as soon as conditions will warrant same.

Yours truly,
M. G. MURPHY.

HELPFUL SERMONS AT MILLBROOK CHURCH BY REV. W. T. WICKETT

Millbrook, Dec. 15.—Rev. W. T. Wickett of Frazerville preached eloquent sermons in Millbrook Methodist Church on Sunday, December 13th. Rev. Mr. Brown took the missionary work on Frazerville circuit.

Morning Sermon.

"I wish to speak to you for a little while this morning on the joy of a Godly life. I do not know of any subject that appeals to Christians more than this one. You will find the text in the first Psalm, first, second, third and fourth verses.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, noth sitteth in the seat of the scornful.

But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in His law doth he meditate day and night.

And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

The ungodly are not so; but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away."

The religion of Jesus Christ is one of joy, the joy that is unsurpassed. What is the supreme aim in life? To get out of life the greatest result or the most perfect satisfaction. Some of you will remember when first you sought the Lord as a sinner and you wrestled with God for forgiveness. You came to the mercy-seat with a consciousness of guilt, and there came a time when you were created anew in Christ Jesus. Can you ever forget the joy that came into your life when you passed through that experience.

Not Gloom or Sadness.

When we look at the words of the Psalmist we realise that a life of devotion to Jesus Christ is not one of gloom or sadness.

The godly life is one that is full, pressed down, shaken together, running over with joyous experiences. This joy comes to the heart that is dedicated to Jesus Christ. When Daniel said his delight was in the Lord, he was beginning to realize more and more the fullness of blessing in Jesus Christ.

"What do we mean by a Godly life? There are many conceptions of a Godly life. There are those who believe they are Godly because they hold Abraham their father. It is not all to have your name inscribed on the church register. We may observe certain feasts, but this does not constitute a Christian.

"A Godly man is one whose delight is in the law of the Lord. It is a life lived in harmony with the will of God.

"No one can be living a Godly life until he reaches that point where life is not one of fear or indifference, but one of delight. "We can very well determine this morning, our duty toward God. Many will fear to measure up the will of God. I remember reading of a young woman who was anxious to do the will of God. She intimated this to her pastor, and said, I want to do the will of God, but I am not willing to go to the foreign field. When we begin thus, to compromise with God we are not up to the point where we should be.

"It is an easy matter to follow the Lord in pleasant places, but it is quite another matter when you come to follow Him into slums and prisons, then we have to follow Him by way of sacrifice.

"Experience has taught me that if we would have the greatest joy, we must make the most perfect surrender to Jesus Christ.

David said, the Godly man shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth fruit in his season. This yielding of fruit makes life worth while. An old gentleman when asked by his pastor "Are you afraid to die?" said no, but I am ashamed to die because in all my life I have never tried to lead a soul to Christ.

"The individual who will get the most out of life is the individual who seeks first, the kingdom of God and His righteousness.

The more I labor in the ministry the more I am impressed with the thought that life may be summed up in three virtues, love, fellowship and service. To my mind these are the three ingredients of a Godly life.

Evening Sermon.

Text — 1st chapter Revelation, 17th verse.

"And when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead. And He laid His right hand upon me, saying unto me, 'Fear not, I am the first and the last.'

"One has said that we live in two worlds, the world without and the world within, that we live in the midst of things that are seen and things that are unseen. Of things that are real and things that are ideal.

We divide life into two parts, and speak of a man's physical life, on one side, and his spiritual life on the other.

The artist has put on canvas a vision of what is within. The poet also gives us a vision and while we say these men are great yet we cannot say that the greatest man is the one who has simply had a vision. To my mind it is possible for us to have as a congregation, a vision that will surpass any vision that has come to any artist or poet.

"We look at the Revelation of John, and find that it has in it the true life of John. We regard John as one who has revealed his vision to us. Now as we look at the text for a minute or two we see that it is the means of the man who has the vision. We sometimes speak of men's vission as being narrow. We sometimes say that these individuals will never attain much.

"You remember reading of Wendell, worth thousands and thousands of money, but what was the use of his money, when he simply hoarded it up? I say the measure of a man is the measure of his vision. John was a man of large vision therefore we say he was a large man. The greater a man's vision the more perfectly one can penetrate into his nature. Look at some of the great artists of the world whose vision penetrate into the great recesses of nature. We think of Tennyson and Longfellow, whose vision has brought to our view such beautiful poems. We think of Paul, there came a time in his life when he said, 'I have learned in whatsoever state I am therein to be content.' Paul certainly had a vision of the Lord.

The popular study, today, is the study of Jesus. We study and re-study the humanity of Jesus. We may study Him as we would study any other man. Visions are soul studies. You read the history of Christ's life and you have a vision of Jesus, but you did not see the real Christ. It is not until you see Him as your personal Saviour, that you have a true vision of Jesus.

"I want to emphasize the fact that the measure of the vision depends upon the spirit of the man.

I want to say the wider the vision the more helpful we become. The more a man knows the less he thinks he knows. A boy of fourteen or sixteen, going to school thinks he is a big fellow, but when he goes to school a while longer he begins to realize he has much to learn. The man who is the greatest asset to the community in which he lives is the one who has the widest vision.

"We read of the Publican and Pharisee. They went to the same temple for the same purpose, to pray. The Pharisee says, 'I am thankful I am not as other men,' while the other says 'Lord be merciful to me a sinner.' The man who prays like the Publican will get a vision of his Lord and will be able to say my Lord and my God.

"Not long ago I read of a lawyer in the United States who was passing by a church on his way to a business meeting with two men. While passing he heard the words, "Who's that standing at the door? Let him in." He went on a little way, but had to turn back. He entered the church and gave his heart to God. He then went home and began to relate his experience to his wife. She told him he must be crazy and told him to go into the parlor to see the men who were waiting, but he finished his story first. This was certainly a vision of Christ. He got such a vision of Christ that night that he remembered it to his dying day.

And so I say that through your intellectual development you get a vision of Jesus Christ. Behold him as your Saviour and hear the words that this same Jesus will take you by the hand, and say "Fear not I am the first and the last."

BELGRADE IN HANDS OF THE SERBS AGAIN

Evacuation by Austrians is Reported in Official Statement

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Vienna, Dec. 15.—Abandonment of Belgrade by the Austrians is acknowledged in an official statement given out at army headquarters today. The statement follows:

"In the southern theatre of war the retirement of our right wing involved a change in the military situation which made it advisable for us to abandon Belgrade, which was evacuated without fighting.

"Our troops have fought long and fatiguing battles, but are in the best of spirits."

The Call to Colors

This is a personal call, a personal challenge to every fit and able Canadian. All fit for war should step forward and say, "Here I am send me." It is a hard task to leave home and all friends dear to the human heart but it must be done. This is the testing time of every Canadian to show his goodwill, honour, valour and patriotism. He must be brave first to leave home and friends and then to face the horrors of war. His comrades are dropping around and any moment may be his last breath, but he loves war because he is upholding the honor of his native country. He thinks it a glorious honor to die defending the country and home he loved. Each will be doing his part to aid Britain in this terrible struggle. But still greater sacrifice is that made by the women of all the nations engaged. They say nothing in war but its horrors and ruin and cries of the dying and wounded are ever in their ears. Yet with a strength almost superhuman they urge ones they love to serve their country, they encourage them when fighting on the battlefield and they comfort them when they lay wounded and dying in the hospitals. The mother urges her son, her only support to serve his country and think not of her. Many have responded to this urgent call and many more are awaiting to be called upon to uphold their countries' honor to do or die. To cheer the happy soldiers on their journey to the battlefield they say,

"Great race whose empire of splendour
Has dazzled the wondering world
May the flag that floats o'er thy wide domain
Be long to all winds unfurled.

FITTING HIMSELF TO PREACH TO HIS PEOPLE

deliverance from Mohammedan persecution, and dozens of other kindred descriptions.

Mr. Kochaly courteously chatted with a Review representative in his room at the Y.M.C.A. today. He stated that he was fitting himself to return to Persia soon and preach to his people. He had been attending McMaster for some six and a half years but last winter and this is devoting his time to lecturing on his native land. Mr. Kochaly described conditions brought about by the war in his own land and he is oppressed by a fear that his own people are in imminent danger. Although in possession of no word from them he is cheerfully hoping for the best.

Persia for a long era groaned under the persecution of an absolute monarchy. Less than a decade ago however, Russia and Great Britain came to their rescue and secured for the land a representative government which is working out more or less slowly, but successfully towards an improvement in civil and religious liberty. The Mohammedan yoke meant bitter persecution to Christians but this has been removed and now every sect and creed receives religious liberty. Mr. Kochaly was disappointed at the somewhat slim audience that greeted him last night. He is a modest likeable young man whom one immediately takes to. He may lecture again in the city, but in any event will be here two or three days longer. His lecture last night on Persia was greatly enhanced by beautiful clear lantern slides, and was greatly enjoyed by the young people.

RUSSIAN FORCE ROUTS COLUMN OF TEUTONS

After Several Days of Patient Waiting Until German Army Had Spent its Force the Russians Hurled Themselves Upon Von Hindenberg's Northern Army Inflicting Terrible Loss in Pursuit.

LONDON, Dec. 15. — The Daily Telegraph's special correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs:—

It is expected that the Russian success on the front at Przasnysz and Czenstochowa will soon be reflected in the operations around Lowicz. The fact that the Russian cavalry was able to strike a blow at the retreating enemy as far northwest as Zuromin, only five miles from the frontier of East Prussia, shows that the German retreat has been hurried, and none too orderly. The Russians have taken into their own hands the initiative to the north of the Bzura river. There are grounds for assuming that the further development of the struggle will be to the advantage of the Russians, in spite of the fact that it was necessary for them to fall back a little in order to take up a new line. The general situation on the right flank is quite satisfactory.

The Morning Post's correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs as follows:

The German advance north of the Vistula has now been disposed of. It was not a very large force as matters go nowadays—about two army corps—but its attacks were repeated, stubborn and fiery. The Germans advanced from the direction of Mlawa and and were met and repulsed with heavy losses somewhere in the neighborhood of Przasnysz and Ziechanow—that is astride of the railways from Danzig to Warsaw. They went to ground, establishing themselves on the line of Przasnysz-Ziechanow, and from this position delivered an endless series of attacks. During the next six days the Russians quietly accepted the attacks and repulsed them with loss every time, until the ardor of the Germans somewhat cooled, which was on the 8th, when an official bulletin reported that fighting here "has acquired a less strenuous character."

Subsequent attacks were only partial, and obviously directed towards the forestalling of expected Russian attacks, or possibly to draw the Russians. Three days later the official bulletin simply noted the fact that the conflict was developing on normal lines, which is one of the Grand Duke's modest expressions to describe what often passes elsewhere than in Russia for victory.

On the 12th the moment came which had been waited and prepared for by the Russians.

They delivered their attack and captured the enemy's fortified positions and drove him back towards the political frontier, nearly 30 miles away, but as battle was arranged by the Russian commanders the Germans have been compelled to cover a great deal more than 30 miles without yet reaching home and comparative safety.

It appears the Russians directed their attacks mainly upon the German left, and by a successful flanking movement drove the Germans out from their fortified position. Pressing still heavily upon the left, the Russians flung the Germans back from the line of railway and roads leading directly towards the German frontier. The Germans, therefore, were compelled to retreat due west until they reached a point at the village of Bogban, where the roads fork north and northwest. The main body appears to have taken the shortest road home, and Russian horse charged into the thick of them at Zuromin, doing fearful execution.

The General Staff of the Russian army has given out the following communication under date of Sunday, Dec. 13:

"There has been no engagement of importance on any of the fronts. In the region of Mlawa we continue to force back the German troops, who are in retreat.

"On the left wing of the River Vistula there has been no change.

"In the region of Mount Duekla Austrian columns are coming down the northern slope of the Carpathians."

More than 500 Polish towns have been ruined, according to various accounts from the correspondents. Both armies accuse the other of looting and cruelty. The flight of the civilians from Lodz was one of the most tragic episodes of the war, while one correspondent pictured the fate of Kalies as a repetition of Louvain, with the slaughter of 400 civilians and the sacking of the city.

A distressing feature of the fighting in Poland is the blood kindred pitted against each other. There are several hundred thousand Poles in the Russian ranks and several hundred thousand more in the ranks of the Germans and Austrians.

The Germans claim a distinct gain in their position in northern Poland, although they are not believed to be as near to Warsaw as the report last week indicated. On the other hand, the Russians announce a strategic re-alignment of their forces in that field, which strengthens their position.

In a late report last night the Austrians announce that they have re-occupied the important point of Duekla, to the north of the Carpathians, on a line south of Przemysl and Cracow, but nearer to the former, with the capture of 9,000 prisoners.

Zeppelin Forced Back.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 15.—A Zeppelin, proceeding in the direction of Dunkirk from Nieuport, Sunday was compelled to return, by the heavy gun fire of the allies, says a despatch from Ghent.

SCHEME IS NOW WELL UNDERWAY

Last night's meeting was not without some humorous phases although intense seriousness characterized the speeches delivered. For instance one lady present brought her knitting needles with her and managed to accomplish two things at the one time. The gentler sex was represented by four members, Miss Peck, Miss L. Pearce, Mrs. Young, and Mrs. A. P. McLean.

Mr. W. R. Travers presided. After explaining the purpose of the meeting he called on Canon Davidson who hurriedly went over the ground that has been covered before but emphasizing the desirable benefits that would accrue to the city as a whole were more attention devoted to the flag particularly at this trying time in the world's history. Several suggestions were volunteered all tending towards urging a more frequent and generous use of the union jack. One idea that will in all likelihood be carried out will be to have flags float from all public buildings and public institutions at least one day a week and on all public holidays. This it is thought will be a step in the direction of the objects sought. Seven institutions in the city have already fallen in line nearly all of them passing resolutions of endorsation which were advanced last night. Representatives of nearly all were present. They consisted of the Daughters of the Empire, the Women's War Fund committee, the Sons of England, the Ministerial Association, the executives of the home guard, the I.O.O.F. and the Trades and Labor Council.

Mayor Buller also lent his hearty support to the movement and stated that if the committee can formulate any definite plan he would endeavor to assist it as far as lay in the power of the council.

Speeches were made by Mr. Kerr, Mr. Aylmer, Mr. Gillespie, Col. Miller and several other prominent citizens present. The idea is to enlist the co-operation of the citizens as a body in the movement and once this has been secured the committee to anticipate no difficulty in seeing the good old Union Jack widely and proudly displayed throughout the city.

The committee appointed were Canon Davidson, Col. Miller, J. J. Hartley, Mrs. A. P. McLean, Mrs. Dr. Young, Daniel O'Connell, Major Walker, Vincent Eastwood, W. R. Travers, and S. A. Oke.

Smith Council Passes By-law

The Smith ciuncil is in session today in the county council chamber. Those present are Reeve Garbutt, Clerk Kelly, and Councillors McKee, Telford, Jobe and Northey. Ald. J. J. Duffus and Ald. G. W. Green, representing the city, waited upon the council at the morning session and urged that they pass a bylaw permitting the C. G. E. to operate the test track recently secured from the G. T. R. Mr. E. G. Patterson and Solicitor E. H. D. Hall were representing the C. G. E., while E. A. Peck was present as solicitor for the council.

Mr. Peck had a bylaw prepared, and at this afternoon's sitting it was passed.

POOL ROOM TAXES, LICENSEE WANTS TIME

M. Pappas opened a pool room on November 1st, and through his solicitor made application last night to the finance committee to have the payment of the license ($520.00) left over till January 15th. Pappas claimed that he will raise the money immediately after the New Year. The aldermen didn't take very kindly to giving credit, and considerable discussion followed.

Pappas offered to pay $200 (license for five tables) on Thursday, December 24th, and to pay the balance for the remaining eight tables on January 16th. It was decided to accept this offer, and if Pappas does not carry out his part of the agreement the Chief of Police will be given authority to take action.

Grant of $75.

It was decided that the usual grant of $75 be made to the Peterborough Poultry Association.

PLANTIN'S SHOP IN ANTWERP ESCAPES DISASTERS OF WAR

Celebrated Establishment from Which Gems of Sixteenth Century Printing Were Issued is To-day as it Was in 1576 — Type Cases Like Modern Ones Are Intact After 400 Years.

The muddy-booted soldiery of Germany, tramping through the Low Countries, the ruins that have been battered by their thundering artillery, the very fogs and mists through which the red blaze of battle glares, all stir up memories of that time, four centuries ago, when all Europe was waking from the sleep of ages to a new life, the time that is called, convenience's sake, the renaissance.

It was in the closing years of the 15th and the opening years of the 16th centuries, when, from the morasses of the Low Countries, sprang the new learning as in spring the tulips blossom from the mud. All Europe had felt the magic touch. It was as when the genial warmth of the April sun sends the sap to the tree tips and warms the dead brown earth to new verdure. In the very joy of newly found faculties literature blossomed with a race of writers whose work have not been surpassed; artists laid on colors whose warmth has been the despair of artists ever since; artisans produced cathedrals, composers produced music and all the earth seemed to find itself.

In the midst of such an awakening came printing. The laborious copying of monkish hands, which illuminated many a missal and saved for humanity the learning of the dim classic past, was too slow for an age in whose veins leaped the blood of reawakened Europe. Such impulses could no more be restrained than can the throbbing sap in the trees be stopped from putting forth buds. The demand for words and books was too great, and ingenious minds in the Low Countries, in Italy and England were racking their resources to make reading a common possession. Aldus in Venice, Caxton in London and Plantin in Antwerp were giving the world its first books.

It was about the print shop of Plantin in Antwerp that the devastation of war has raged. Works of art more pretentious than this have been rared, but the mediaeval printery seems to have escaped destruction. It is one of Antwerp's greatest joys.

If war's deadly hand has not laid it low, you may yet walk through it, you may still see the type cases as they have stood there 400 years in all essentials like the type cases of to-day, you may still take hold of the levers of the old hand presses, the presses that ground out all the books of the world even up to modern days, presses the like of which Ben Franklin, the apprentice printer in Philadelphia, toiled over and whose counterpart may be found in many even of the most modern print shops. To this day, when etchers want a particularly good proof of their work, they have recourse to an old hand press, the same in all its principles as you may find in the print shop of Plantin in Antwerp.

For, until the type-setting machine and the cylinder press came, the art of printing remained in all its essentials the same art that Plantin and Aldus and Caxton developed, with movable types, slowly assembled by hand, locked in a chase and inked and paper pressed down by a screw press arrangement worked by hand or power.

This man Plantin was one of the most interesting men of his day, as old Antwerp, of antiquity passing written history, was one of the most interesting cities. Rubens lived there and was a friend of Plantin and his son-in-law, Moretus, Rubens whose colors we may not excel. Painter and printer, the art decorative and the art preservative, two of the great agencies for the uplifting of mankind, for the diffusion of those crafts and graces that lifted men from the bogs of savagery to the light of humanity, toiled side by side, each intent on his own work. And when Moretus died his friend Rubens painted one of his masterpieces, his Resurrection, for the tomb of his friend and placed it in one of the chapels of the wonderful cathedral at Antwerp.

Christopherus Plantinus was the learned name of the early printer of Antwerp. Latin was the tongue of learning and men's names, as well as tomes of knowledge, were inscribed in its characters. Up to 1865 the printing house he founded had a continuous existence from the day he started it in 1576. It stands to-day, the accretions of ages, simply having added building after building to the original, until the whole has been bought by Antwerp and made into the Plantin-Moretus museum. Travelers to Antwerp have seen in the ancient bookshops ushers attired in 16th century costumes, clothes that were in fashion when Columbus discovered America, and have felt the magic of that age, just emerging from the reign of copyists, when folios were printed from blackfaced type of crude design.

Plantin, as his name is generally spelled, was born near Tours, France. He set up his first print shop in Antwerp in 1549 in the midst of the era that was marked by much religious discussion. At a time when doctrine and dogma were matters of moment equaling questions of state, books on religious topics were in great demand and the most noted of the publications that he turned out was a polyglot Bible in five languages and eight volumes, a prodigious work that occupied four years. Plantin was a patron of learning, if not actually learned himself. He was the first publisher to employ men of erudition at high salaries to produce copy for his 20 presses. Men of the profound learning corrected his proof sheets. So highly did he prize accuracy that he offered prizes for the discovery of errors in his books.

Mittens Hurt Their Hands.

The woollen mittens knitted in Canada for the Canadian troops on Salisbury Plain are much appreciated by the soldiers. Letters received from the soldiers say they are just the thing, but they also say that the bands should be made about half an inch longer. As they are made the butt of the rifle strikes a portion of the naked hand and a portion of the mitten, which raises sores on the soldiers' hands. The wrists of the mittens are just the right length.

French Priest Says Prisoners In Germany Are Terribly Ill-Treated.

ROME, Dec. 15.—A French priest, who has returned from Minden, where a number of British prisoners were confined, has given a friend of mine an appalling account of cruelties practiced upon our captured countrymen by their German jailers. While the French prisoners were very well treated and the Russians were not so bady, the British were singled out for ill-treatment. "German soldiers," said the French priest, "kick the British prisoners in the stomach and break guns over their backs. They force them to sleep out in marshy places, so that many are now consumptive. The British are almost starved, and such have been their tortures that thirty of them have asked to be shot."

MAYOR OF BIRD LAND.

How the Beautiful Lizard Canary Got Its Unique Name.

The lizard canary is one of the most unique varieties in the cage bird world. Its beautiful ground color, so nicely ticked, and pretty little "cap" make it a thing of beauty and a joy forever. It is, however, the only variety that moults out its plumage at the end of the first season. By this it is meant that, although the bird possesses so beautiful a coat for the first year, the plumage disappears altogether at the second moult.

Thus it is a show bird for only one—i. e., the first—season, and this is considered a drawback to its popularity. On account of its wearing such gay apparel for one year and then putting it aside the lizard has been aptly termed "mayor of Birdie Land."

The little story connected with the lizard and a mayor is well worth repeating. It was at a well known cage bird show being opened by Sir William Treloar, then lord mayor of London, that this celebrity in a few well chosen words likened himself unto the lizard canary, many grand specimens of which were on view at the show. The stately robes he then wore were only for a season. Such is the case with the lizard.—Boston Herald.

HOW TO KILL A CHOIR

When a church choir is a failure, either partial or complete, the blame should not be laid wholly at the door of the choir and the leader. As a rule, both congregation and minister are also potent factors in causing its failure. Generally speaking, the choir receives the poorest support and the amplest criticism of any organization connected with the church. The following rules will be found entirely satisfactory in cases where it is desired to make the choir a failure.

1.—If you are a member of the choir attend practice just when you have no other place to go. Let any other engagement, no matter how trivial, come before the choir practice.

If you come to practice be sure to arrive anywhere from an half hour to an hour late, or leave before the practice is over.

While you are there annoy everyone with your inattention and incessant chattering.

Don't pay any attention to the instructions of the conductor, and then, on Sunday, spoil his best anthem by warbling out in the wrong place.

If there is some special feature on in one of the other churches never mind your own, go to the other one. Of course, the choirmaster had on some special music, but the rest will get along all right.

Don't bother about the Sunday services unless you feel like it; you have no personal responsibility.

Take offence if you are not asked to take important parts, whether you are capable or not.

Stay away for several weeks or months without any specific reason; come back when the notion takes you; and when you find your chair occupied by some one else go away in a huff.

Set up as the choir critic. Call the attention of the conductor to what you consider mistakes (made by the others, of course) in the rendering of the music.

Expect all the other members to give in to your whims, and move around to suit you.

When things don't go to please you absent yourself from the choir, expecting the conductor, the minister, and the most influential choristers to wait upon you to ascertain your reasons, and humbly beg you to reconsider the matter. If you do this nicely, give in with the air of conferring a favor on the church in general, and on them in particular, although all the time you were reproaching yourself for having left.

II.—If you are one of the congregation make the most of every little mistake or failure in the singing, call the attention of every person you happen to be speaking with to it. Supposing you have a good voice and time at your disposal, don't offer your services to the choirmaster, even when the minister asks for volunteers.

Be sure when you are speaking to either leader or choir members, to tell them what a fine choir you were used to where you came from. It helps to keep down their pride.

If you hear some one say some spiteful, unkind thing about the choir or the music, take particular pains to repeat it to some of the singers or the master. Be careful not to let it lose anything in the telling.

If the congregation appears to be falling off be sure it is the poor singing that is to blame for the lack of interest. People come to church to be entertained; not to worship God.

III.—If you happen to be the minister, take note of every complaint that is made to you about the conductor or the choir members, no matter how unreasonable. Don't try to find out the other side before you pass judgment.

Don't select the hymns in time for the choir to practice them, and if the leader selects them, change several of them before service. This is a good way to prevent the choir from singing with spirit and confidence, and it will also assure spasmodic attendance.

When any change in that department are necessary consult the fault-finders, with the session (which is perfectly right), with the managers, or the Ladies' Aid, but never with the choir.

IV.—If you happen to be choirmaster don't bother to get to the practice on time, a half hour or so can make no difference to anybody.

Never have anything thought out before you come to practice, but exhaust the patience of the choir, waiting for you to hunt up a suitable anthem. They have all sorts of time to waste.

Don't arrange definitely for the Sunday services before you separate, but send whispered instructions all through the choir during the service.

When you first take charge of a choir make as many changes as you can possibly get around to the first night. Don't fail to speak disparagingly of the methods of the previous leader, and point out the superiority of those you intend to follow. It gives the members such an opinion of you and they, of course, will pass it out to their friends.

Take the opportunity every few weeks at least, to put on something that has been practised once, or twice at the most, and of which nobody is sure. It gives the choir such a delightful feeling of making themselves a laughing-stock. Those who can read music readily can get through by keeping their eyes diligently glued to the book. Those who do not read as well can follow their lead; but none of them can really sing. Music must get possession of any soul before it can be sung in the true sense.

The above rules, if persistently applied, either in whole or in part, will be found very effective in accomplishing their end.

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all those were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

DEVILED SHIRTS.

When Dumas Really Thought He Had Started a New Fashion.

Alexandre Dumas, the famous French romancist, was as recklessly extravagant as he was abnormally stout, and more than once found himself in awkward straits. Indeed, he was often enough without the commonest necessities, even of dress, as when anxious to attend an ambassador's reception he discovered he was without a single clean shirt among his linen. A friend who chanced to be with him at the time volunteered to go and buy one, only to find that none of the shops had in stock a garment sufficiently large to encircle the novelist's generous girth of neck and chest.

At last, when on the point of relinquishing his search, Dumas' friend came upon a shop where a shirt called "the hercules" was advertised. The name struck him as being one of good omen, and he entered. But, alas, they had nothing approaching the size required, unless, indeed, their customer would care to take one made to order of a very corpulent Quartier Latin student, by whom it had been left on their hands. Although covered with little red devils careering about in red flames, it was a case of Hobson's choice, so the shirt was purchased and taken home to Dumas, who, doubtless entering into the humor of the situation, resolved to wear it at the reception.

"You would hardly believe it," he said afterward, "but my costume was an immense success, and I really think I have started a fashion of deviled shirts for evening wear."—London Tit-Bits.

Kick of the Mule.

A wise man, in his own estimation, announces that a mule kicks because it doesn't know any better. This will greatly surprise many students of contemporaneous mule life. If ever there was an animal with low cunning expressed in its eye and its twitching nostril, that animal is the mule. Its ability to place a kick where it will give the greatest offense to its victim is something marvelous.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Element of Difficulty.

"Is it hard to learn the use of a telescope?" asked the student.

"Not very," replied the candid professor. "The hardest thing about astronomy is guessing what something is after you manage to see it."—Washington Star.

BEST IN THE WORLD

Ross Rifle Can be Fired Faster Than Others and Aims Better.

Canada's expeditionary force now in England, is equipped with rifles that, in every way, are undeniably the finest possessed by any modern army. What is still more remarkable, is that this arm was devised and manufactured in Canada, says Lieut. R. K. Hall in a recent article in Toronto Star Weekly.

During the last fifty years, the science of musketry has made enormous strides. The erratic, unwieldy musket that repelled the Fenian Raiders at Ridgeway, with its stubby, blunt-nosed, lead bullet, would cut but a poor figure alongside of the Mark III. Ross rifle, which, in point of deadly power, range, and rapidity of action, makes the former look hopelessly antiquated.

As compared with the Enfield, which is the service weapon of the British army, the newest Ross — in fact, every type of Ross—has at least one advantage; the pull of its bolt is straight, while that of its English cousin is rotary. In other words, the cartridge case in the Ross can be ejected by a single pull, whereas, in the Enfield, the bolt must first be turned upward, before being drawn back. Thus, the Canadian arm outdistances the other in rapidity of fire. Also, the Ross is equipped with only the aperture sight, even the base of the open sight having been omitted in the latest type—a certain indication that the open sight has passed.

For many years military authorities were slow to recognize the superior qualities of the aperture, or more familiarly known "peep" sight. It was claimed that, with it, one could not aim as quickly, that it was too delicate for service conditions, and that the tiny aperture would become clogged with dust or mud. Now, however, it is admitted that all of these objections are rather mythical. More, it is a certainty that when aiming by means of the aperture sight the target appears to the eye more clear-cut and that men who, with open sights, do but indifferent shooting, owing to slightly defective eye-sight, are enabled, by means of the newer sight to achieve a really creditable score.

Th Ross rifle is of .303 calibre, which means that the diameter of the bore or circular opening in the barrel is .303 inches, and, in this respect, is uniform with the Enfield. Its weight is slightly over eight pounds. It is termed a rifle because the barrel is rifled; i.e., it is grooved in concentric fashion, with one complete turn every ten inches. One of the first errors into which the raw recruit falls is that of calling his weapon a "gun."

The service cartridge, the latest type of which is pointed, consists of a brass cartridge case containing a powerful charge of cordite, and a cupro-nickel bullet with a lead-antimony core. When this cartridge is fired, the bullet is forced into the grooves of the bore, and attains a tremendously rapid rotary motion about its longer axis. This gyroscopic action keeps it on an even keel, and prevents it from diverging from the path in which it started. The moment that it leaves the barrel, it is acted on by three forces; the impetus of the explosion driving it forward, the resistance of the air holding it back, and the force of gravity pulling it downward.

Although the muzzle velocity is 2,500 feet per second, the bullet begins to drop immediately. True, in the first 100 yards it falls only a fraction of an inch, but, as it travels farther and its velocity decreases, its path becomes more and more curved. In the olden times, when ranges were much shorter, marksmen adopted the rough method of shooting above the target, in order to allow for the fall of the bullet. In these modern days, however, the backsight of the rifle is so arranged that it can be raised, so that while the soldier is apparently aiming straight at the target, the axis of the barrel is, in reality pointing varying distances above it.

Lobster Market Fails.

The canned lobster industry of Newfoundland and Canada has been hard hit by the European war. As Germany is the largest consumer of this product, the principal market has been cut off. A case of forty-eight tins which brought $25 in Newfoundland before the war now cannot be sold for more than eight or ten dollars. As one merchant put it:

"Canned lobsters are as great a drug on the market in Canada and Newfoundland as bales of cotton in the United States."

Ordinarily the returns from the industry amount to about three million dollars a year in Canada and half a million dollars in Newfoundland.

Many of those interested favor the enforcing of a close season on lobsters during the whole of next year, thus taking advantage of the opportunity to replenish the fisheries, which have been greatly depleted by extravagant methods of lobster taking.

Potatoes Wanted In France.

Canadian potatoes are wanted in France. Hon. Philip Roy, Canadian Commissioner-General in Paris, has informed the Department of Trade and Commerce that French potato dealers are anxious to get into touch with Canadian exporters. There is a shortage of potatoes in many parts of France.

In order to encourage Canadian exporters, the French Government has removed both the duty and the storage surtax on potatoes.

The Spanish Flag.

The red and yellow of the Spanish flag is said to be derived from this occurrence: In 1378 Charles the Bold dipped his fingers in the blood of Geoffrey, count of Barcelona, and drew them down the count's golden shield in token of his appreciation of the latter's bravery. The shield, so marked, became the arms of Barcelona, which became part of Aragon, and its arms were taken by that kingdom.

BRANTFORD'S TWO TEAMS READY FOR OPENING

Eddie Gould to Manage Brants — Waterloo Will Play in Berlin This Season — Northern Clubs Apply to O.H.A.

Brantford, Dec. 15. — O. H. A. intermediate and junior teams will represent Brantford. Enthusiasm was shown at the reorganization meeting of the Brantford hockey club held last evening. Plenty of material is at hand for intermediates and juniors with Eddie Gould as manager, assisted by Billy Ness. It is expected that the Red and Black will put Brantford back on the hockey map.

The officers elected are: President, Dr. Wiley; vice-presidents, J. N. Dixon, J. J. Kelly, G. H. Rofer; secretary-treasurer, J. Woolman; manager, Ed. Gould; assistant manager, W. Ness; executive: Harold Preston, Jas. Hanley, A. T. Whittaker, Reg. Robbins, Harold Gould. The latter will go to Woodstock today as the local delegate to the schedule meeting.

Waterloo at Berlin.

Berlin, Dec. 15.—The management of the Waterloo O. H. A. intermediate team yesterday signed an agreement with the management of the Berlin Auditorium Company to play their championship games in Berlin, permission having been secured from Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O. H. A.

The Waterloo hockey management was unable to make suitable financial arrangements with the management of the Waterloo rink, and decided to enter into negotiations with the local rink company.

Waterloo's team held its first practice at the auditorium last night, and has excellent material for a fast seven. Three O. H. A. teams and tow Northern League teams will play their games in Berlin's large rink this season.

Apply to O. H. A.

Toronto, Dec. 15—The sub-committee appointed this year by the O. H. A. executive is the same as last year: J. Ross Robertson, Dwight J. Turner and W. A. Hewitt.

North Bay, Sturgeon Falls and Sudbury have applied for admission to the O. H. A. intermediate series as a district. The application came late, but the sub-committee will consider it.

BRANTFORD PARK VISITED BY FIRE

Brantford, Dec. 15.—Fire of unknown origin, breaking out at ten o'clock last night, gutted the grandstand and bleachers at the Canadian League baseball park. Only a small portion of the bleachers was saved. The stands were owned by T. J. Nelson, who is out of the city.

'ACK" HUNTER TO STAY WITH SIMON PURES

"Ack" Hunter, last year with Rowing Club, now at Peterboro, dropped into town this morning. He denies emphatically rumors tot he effect that he will turn professional. Hunter will play with the Peterboro O. H. A. team, and says they have a good-looking bunch of stickhandlers.

Ontarios tried out another goaltender this morning in Howard Nesson, of the Canadian Soo. He looked good on his first appearance. —Toronto Telegram.

Veterans Again Were Victors

The old reliables, under Captain Dobbin, again proved that the old supposedly "has beens" can come back. In the game last night at the Y. M. C. A. between the Veterans and Pirates, the old boys had everything their own way from the sound of the whistle till the end of the game. The youngsters under Bill Rew put up a hard and plucky fight, but the Vets were too fast for them. Every man of the Veteran team scored at least one basket, and Best and Dobbin scored almost at will. The final score stood 14 to 12, with Best high man for the winners and Rew and English dividing the honors for the Pirates.

Wednesday night, Creasmans, who have lost only one game, clash with the Bankers. This should be a whirlwind game.

The line-up last night was as follows—

VETERANS — Dobbin, Robertson, McCarrell, Best, Richardson.

PIRATES — Rew, Brown, English, Austin, Laing.

STALLINGS SIGNS FOR FIVE YEARS

BOSTON, Dec. 15. — George T. Stallings, who led the Boston Nationals to the world's championship last fall, will continue as manager of the club for at least five years, according to word received here. He has signed a contract extending four years beyond the coming season, when his previous agreement will expire. Neither Stallings nor President Gaffney would announce the salary terms of the new contract.

Mendelssohn Surprised Them.

The church of St. John's, Waterloo road, has an interesting association with Mendelssohn. The late R. J. Horsley, R. A., tells in his reminiscences how the great musician, while staying with a friend on Denmark hill—in the house where he wrote the "Spring Song"—was induced to go to St. John's one Sunday morning and give a recital on the organ. On reaching the organ loft Mendelssohn was annoyed to find himself exposed to the full view of the congregation and vented his displeasure in a thunderous improvisation which greatly startled the worshipers, used as they were to the "subdued" music then in vogue. Not being in the secret, they were still further surprised when the music ceased and the eccentric performer sprang up, clapped on his hat and abruptly left the building.—Westminster Gazette.

Famous Centre Man Has Been Elected Captain of St. Michael's

Dr. W. J. (Jerry) Laflamme has been elected captain of the St. Michael's team in the senior O.H.A. series. Dr. Laflamme broke into the game at Woodstock Collegiate Institute and captained the Woodstock O.H.A. juniors, who reached the final with Port Hope in 1905. Under Laflamme's captaincy the team went into the final with a record of winning all of its group and semi-final games at home and abroad. Upon coming to Toronto to study dentistry he joined St. Michael's juniors. With the "Irish" he helped to win the O.H.A. junior and senior championships as well as the Allan Cup, and the national amateur championship. He has been called the best centre playing the game, and has repeatedly declined tempting offers from N. H. A. teams. Since going to Toronto St. Michael's have had his services with the exception of the season of 1911-12, when the Eatonias, with which he played, won the O.H.A. senior trophy.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The first session of the wrestling class taught by Mr. H. B. Cowan was held last evening, the start being made with eight young men. Mr. Cowan explained the more simple holds and set a number of exercises that would be beneficial to men preparing for the more severe exercise of wrestling. The class will meet each Monday evening through the winter months and as much interest is being manifested in this class of work it is expected that at least twenty-five fellows will enroll themselves.

The schedule has been drawn up for the Collegiate Bowling League which consists of eight teams of three men each. The schedule covers the next two months and the games will be bowled four afternoons a week.

To add a little side interest and arouse the members of the Bible Club to secure new members a contest is being conducted between Mr. Wearing's and Mr. Meserve's classes to see which class will have the best attendance next Monday evening.

The postponed meeting of the Board of Directors will be held this evening at 6.30 o'clock and a special meeting of the Ministerial Association will be held with a lunch at 8 o'clock.

Boys' Department.

The Boys' Department of the Y.M. C.A. will be a real live place when the boys get their Christmas holidays. A fine program has been arranged for the boys consisting of a checker, chess and billiard tournament. Extra games will be secured and everything done to accommodate the large number of boys who will be at the rooms morning, afternoon and evening for twelve days.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 23rd, the boys will have their Christmas tree. This is the one big night in the "Y." for the boys. A large tree is erected in the game room, beautifully decorated and covered with presents sent in by the parents for their boys.

The tennis court has been boarded in for a skating rink and if the cold weather continues we will have the rink in good shape by the first of the week.

A large turnout of the boys' Bible Study Groups is requested for this week as the boys' secretary has business of importance to bring before them.

Tonight Intermediate gymnasium class at 7.30 o'clock.

Last night in the Business Boys' Basketball League the Pontiacs defeated the Tecumsehs by a score of 12 to 3.

Aviator Bonney of New York fell 300 feet in his aeroplane and still lives, although badly hurt.

CLUB IS SOLD TO COL. RUPPERT

Half a Million Dollars Paid for New York Yankees

French Lick, Ind., Dec. 15. — The New York American League club has been sold to Col. Jacob Ruppert. The price is about $450,000. Col. Ruppert will not acquire any interest in the Federal League.

This is the substance of statements made here yesterday by Col. Ruppert and President Jas. A. Gilmore of the Federal League, who conferred on the proposed establishment of a Federal League club in New York. After the conference Col. Ruppert said:

"I have already taken over the Yankees. The price is the only thing that remains to be settled. This probably will be $450,000."

"I am afraid we were too late," said Mr. Gilmore, "as Col. Ruppert already has purchased the Yankees. I shall return to Chicago at once and try to find another backer for the New Yorks."

UNSELFISH SAVAGES.

Generosity of the Semisavage Eskimos of Arctic Siberia.

Probably no more clannish—and unselfish—people exist than the natives of the arctic coast of Siberia, the lowest type of semisavage Eskimos. They are ever thinking of one another's welfare, and if one comes into possession of anything of value he never thinks of keeping it for himself, but calls the other members of the tribe to share with him. If a whale is taken or a polar bear, caribou or walrus is killed the meat is divided among all the igloos. Even during the hard winter, when there is a shortage of food, if a seal is brought in by some fortunate hunter the meat and blubber are equally distributed.

Four men from East Cape, the Siberian side of Bering strait, were taken aboard the whale ship Narwhal to make up the boat crews for whaling in the Arctic. All through the summer season they remained aboard the vessel, doing their share of the perilous and wearisome work. When the vessel returned to East Cape on its way south the captain made a pile of flour, sugar, hard bread, calico, tobacco, cartridges, needles and thread, tea, matches—everything dear to the Eskimo heart. It was their wages, and the Eskimos were proud of their wealth.

The walrus hide canoes came alongside, and the four men were taken ashore with their riches. At the water's edge every article was delivered to waiting hands, and when the men who had worked all summer for these necessaries and luxuries started for their igloos they carried all they kept for themselves in their hands. They were almost as poor as they were when they started on the cruise, but the village was temporarily happy, and so were they.—Exchange.

Seeking Radium Water.

An investigation is being carried on by the mines branch as to the existence of radium in spring water in Ottawa, Montreal, and at various points between the two cities. Slight traces of radium have been found in spring water in Ottawa, but the full results of the investigations have not yet been reported.

The object is not to ascertain if it is feasible to extract radium from the water or to discover the source of the radium, but rather to learn whether there is enough of it in the water to give the latter the healing quality of Carlsbad Springs in Germany.

Less Liquor Consumed.

Inland revenue returns for the Dominion in October totalled $1,726,197. In the same month last year they were $2,041,921. This indicates a decline in consumption of liquor, beer, cigars and tobaccos.

When the Long "S" Was Abolished.

In the latter part of February, 1800, a London publisher instituted a trifling though welcome improvement in printing. His name was Bell, later the founder of the well known Weekly Messenger, and at the date mentioned he caused to be submitted the short for the long "s" in the setting of certain works he produced. His example was generally followed a year or two later. —St. James' Gazette.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

SOLITUDE.

FAR from the busy haunts of men
I like to take a stroll
And in the silent backwoods hold
Communion with my soul
And, as it were, to chew the rag
With nature at first hand,
With bugs that might be edified
Could they but understand.

Grand operatic airs I get
Without a cent to pay
From birds that as they lay their eggs
Make bold to sing their lay.
The little insects on the trees
Speak boldly for their cause
In melody as musical
As made by filing saws.

Anon a rabbit starts afield
Down nature's grassy street
And wigwags with his fluffy tail
That he is not to eat.
A chipmunk wiggles in his hole
And says: "I'll keep my fur.
You cannot take it home with you
To make a muff for her."

All nature seems to be in tune
With my untrammeled mood.
The layout as a feast is there
To give my fancy food.
I eat and drink it in delight,
But soon I have a hunch
That I could stand a good square meal,
At least a man-size lunch.

Over His Head.

"How is it that Wilkins never fell in love?"

"Wilkins?"

"Yes."

"Why, he is deeply in love."

"Indeed! I never saw him pay any attention to any young lady."

"No young lady has anything to do with the case. He is in love with himself."

Looks Queered Him.

"Seen anything of a stray horse around here?"

"What did he look like?"

"He looked like a horse."

"Probably that is the reason we didn't see him. If he had looked like a comet we might be able to tell you something as to his whereabouts."

How He Meant It.

"No limelight for me, please," said the modest lawyer coming into the big political meeting of the year.

"Glad you feel that way about it. We had some nice seats on the platform, but they are all gone. We will have to put you in the back row."

"Then I might as well go home."

The Boss.

"The hand that wields the slipper is the hand that rules the house."

"Yes; that's so when the inmates are small."

"And when they are grown?"

"If they happen to be girls the foot that wears the hobnail is the foot that rules the young men that call."

Liked the Training.

"If you could have your pick what job would you take?"

"Anything I wanted?"

"Pick from the world."

"The after taking sign in a swell restaurant."

As Johnnie Saw It.

"Do you know what happens to bad little boys?"

"Uh-huh."

"What?"

"They run away and go fishin'."

Handy.

"Are you a patron of the drama?"

"Am I? We've got a five cent show right in our block."

Precocious Child.

"Now, my child, said the kind old judge, "which do you prefer to go with?"

"That depends," answered the fashionable child. "Is mother to get large alimony?"

"Yes."

"Large enough to embarrass father financially?"—Kansas City Journal.

Expert Poultry Opinion.

Senator Money of Mississippi asked an old negro what breed of chickens he considered best, and he replied:

"All kinds has merits. De w'ite ones is de easiest to find, but de black ones is de easiest to hide after you gits 'em."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is said that it takes two to make a quarrel, but as a matter of fact one person can make an unlimited number if he chooses to do so.

Some persons do not like an open winter, but with one accord all declare for an open summer.

There are men so busy that we somehow feel certain that they would declare that they had no time to attend their own funerals.

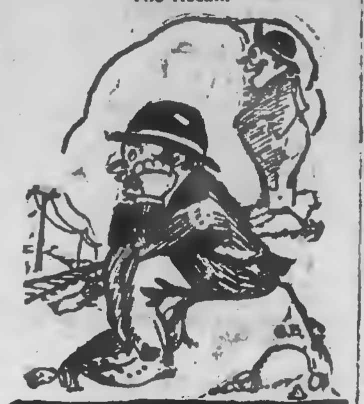
Handsome is as handsome patronizes the beauty doctor.

Hope is a hot brick for the cure of cold feet.

He is a free man, indeed, who is able to preach what he practices.

One of the great advantages of an air castle is that it is nontaxable property.

The Recall.



"I believe de recall 'ud help to reform me."

"What difference would it make to you?"

"Well, I t'ink I'd quit dis roving life an' settle down an' try to git back at some o' de judges dat keeps sendin' me up."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mr. Fred Burnham of Peterboro, visited his parents on Sunday.

Gussie McBride, Fred Deyell and Freddie Budd of the 46th, were home from Kingston for the week end.

Mr. A. D. Browne, of the Canadian-American, of Chicago, spent Sunday in the city.

Invitations have been issued by the bachelors of Norwood for their fifth annual dance to be held in the Norwood town hall on Wednesday, December 30th. The committee in charge are Messrs. A. J. McKenty, F. Kempt, C. I. Puffer, G. B. Richardson, J. A. MacDonald and H. A. Stephenson. The patrons and patronesses are:— Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Pearce, Mr. and Mrs. McRea, Mr. and Mrs. Breault.

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION.

Some time ago Miss Plummer and Miss Arnoldi appealed to the Women's Art Association of Canada to assist them to collect an emergency fund which they require for their work for the Canadian soldiers at Salisbury Plain. In response to this appeal the local branch of the Association sent seventy dollars and fifty cents, the proceeds of Professor Squair's lecture.

The executive of the W.A.A. wish to thank Mr. Graham of the Empress who entertained Professor Squair, and Mr. Vernon Fish who lent and operated the lantern used in connection with the lecture.

Heretofore, lectures under the auspices of the W.A.A. have been free, but the local branch, wishing to raise money for a work which must be dear to the hearts of all Canadians, sold tickets for Professor Squair's lecture.

An audience that almost filled the Collegiate Auditorium listened with a good deal of pleasure to a recital given last evening by the pupils of Mr. J. H. Renwick. His pupils are very numerous and talented and their work last evening was a source of delight to all. Some of his pupils are quite advanced in the world of music and their pianoforte and vocal work has been of such a high class order that great credit has, as a consequence, been given to Mr. Renwick.

The program was very extensive yet not one whit tiresome on that account. It would be difficult to attempt a detailed description of the recital so varied were the efforts of those taking part. The program was given in aid of the Belgian Relief Fund and proceeds amounting to $32.23 were realized.

Consecration Meeting of Epworth League

On Monday night, December 14th, the meeting of the Epworth League of George St. Methodist Church was of a most interesting character. Those present were divided into a number of groups, each with a leader for the purpose of discussing the topic, which was "A Character Sketch of Peter." Then a short time was spent in giving testimony. Just prior to the close of the meeting several matters of business were attended to, including the subject of relief work in connection with Christmas Cheer, and the choosing of delegates for the coming Young Men's Conference. During the evening Miss S. Huycke gave a scripture reading. Considering the very unfavourable weather, there was a fairly good attendance.

SOLDIERS ARE GRATEFUL.

Peterboro soldiers at Kingston appreciate gifts for their comfort, as is shown by the following letter:—

Kingston, Dec. 4th, 1914.
E. Co., 21 Batt., C.E.F.

To the Members of the Canadian Kitchener League:

Dear Mrs. Knox.—On behalf of the Peterboro boys I wish to thank you for your kind thought in sending the cholera belts, etc., which arrived safely yesterday. They have been handed over to me as I am one of the Peterboro boys and will do my best for the distribution of same. I am sure great credit is due to the ladies for their kind thought, and the boys will always remember your league.

In your letter you asked as to what we need the most. I might say the socks the government have issued are very poor material and holes are in them the first day and I think it's socks we are in need of. Once again thanking you for the articles and your good wishes.

I beg to remain
Yours sincerely,
FRANK ROBERTS.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. P. LEAHY.

Elizabeth Hanrahan, wife of Mr. John P. Leahy, Lot 7, Concession 6, Douro, one of its lifelong residents, died last night about eleven-thirty, after an illness of only three days. She was widely and favorably known throughout the whole township, and her death will be felt by all who knew her.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters and four sons, viz.: Mrs. Wm. O'Toole, of Douro; Mrs. Samuel O'Brien, of Otonabee; Mrs. Daniel Kennedy, of this city; Joseph, of Douro; Michael, of Smith; John and David, at home.

Her sisters are: Mrs. M. Kylie, of East City; Mrs. John Sullivan, city; Mrs. James Collins, Douro; Mrs. Mathew Sullivan, Sault Ste. Marie; Mrs. Edward Allen, Douro, and one brother, James Hanrahan, of this city.

The deceased was 58 years of age.

The funeral will be held Thursday morning at 8.30 o'clock from the family residence, Douro, to St. Joseph's Church, and thence to St. Joseph's Cemetery.

MRS. HENRY DAY.

Mrs. Henry Day, aged 85, a resident of Peterboro for fifty years, died this morning at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Arthur Head, 257 Bethune street. She is survived by five daughters and several sisters.

COMMITTEE SEEKS LOCAL ELECTIONS BY ACCLAMATION

It is understood that several committees are endeavoring to have the municipal elections this year go by acclamation and the money set aside for the elections donated to some cause, such as supplying ammunition and rifles for the Home Guard. One party waited on Ald. Duncan in connection with this matter and he gave out the information that he is perfectly willing to return as aldermanic representative for the south ward if all the elections go by acclamation. If there is to be a contest, however, Ald. Duncan says he is in the field for the mayor's chair.

No Money For Funeral.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 15.—Because he had no money to pay the funeral expenses of his child, which it is claimed died without receiving needed medical attention at birth, Mark Woodbury, a blacksmith, of Park avenue, threw the body of the infant in a creek in East London.

He was arrested and in the police court yesterday pleaded guilty. He was remanded a week for sentence.

With Czar's General Staff.

OTTAWA, Dec. 15.—Lt.-Col. Herbert Mackie, of Toronto, and formerly of Pembroke, is now serving as a Staff officer with the Russian forces. Col. Mackie wired the Minister of Militia yesterday from Petrograd to that effect.

PATRIOTIC FUND NOTES

There will be a few straggling notes of the fortunes of the Fund, from time to time, but this about closes the functions of the publicity committee. Sorry, after all, it is over. It was good while it lasted. The newspapers were more than helpful. They boosted, which is several degrees in advance of mere help. It was a good cause and a great success. The great Bonnaparte is accused of uttering the platitude that "one newspaper is more to be feared than a thousand bayonets." But, it will be observed, while he had a passing acquaintance with such implements he certainly had no conception of the class of bayonet and the physical force behind them that now adorn the trenches of the allies and when thrust by British arms perforate the Germans trying to cross the Yser. And so, when another Patriotic or other public effort is to be made the same publicity committee is ready to volunteer and help push things to a final and satisfactory conclusion. That their names may go down to posperity they are mentioned, being Mr. Cowan, Mr. R. M. Glover, Mr. W. Stocker and the chairman. In Hoc Signo Vinces.

Yesterday was a gratifying day from a financial point of view, and a very good one for the Fund. Those who might think that the ability to absorb in the fund money ceased with the activity of Friday night are mistaken. This institution is right on the job. In fact the door of the safety deposit vault where the cash is immured will remain on the jar for some time. While there is life in the organization there is hope for more subscriptions. That this hope is no barren one is easily seen.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn handed in $200, and Mr. Harold Morrow another $100. Mr. James McCurdy, of Waupon, Wis., sends a nice contribution. He is an Old Boy of Peterborough who has prospered in his American home. The gift to the fund will make Mr. McCurdy no less a good American citizen and will help the people of the land of his birth.

Mr. E. J. Waterman, of 213 Hunter St., gives the fund a dresser and stand in oak finish. British bevel glass. Oval, three drawers, such a piece of furniture as he sells for $13. Here is a chance for some housekeeper. Delivered right on the door step.

People have been more than kind. There are a whole lot of real good men who lend a hand. J. E. A. Fitzgerald sends over half a ton of coal and kindling and tells us to charge it to the town pump and take it out in water, which translated means a gift to the fund. Messrs. Adamson & Dobbin, whose business as stove vendors is to make it hot for people have the thanks of all concerned for the use of heating facilities during the campaign. They sent a good stove and men who came and wrestled with lengths of pipe all in good humor. Putting up stove pipes is real test of patience and some control of language.

The Bell Telephone Co. through the local manager, Mr. Doan, communicated the intelligence that the use of the phone at the rooms came as another gift. Good. Phone 50,000 was really overworked most of the time but stood up to the strain in fine style. It was a mighty help in carrying on the activities of the ten days.

All of the features of the campaign, that is the publicity end of the business, such as the big colored placard, the big thermometer, banners and such things have been carefully put away in sweet pickle. These will be kept carefully and will presently have a historic value. On the night of December 11th, 1915, there will be a re-union of all the workers, and such a night as will develop has not been seen. Just you watch, and then trot around hoping and begging for an invitation. The principal decorations, in addition to the chairman of the executive, F. D. Kerr, Adj. McElhiney, and Walter Stocker will be the big banners and placards. Things will hum.

LORDS WILL SIT ALONE

Will Keep Watch on Details of the War Situation

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The determination of the House of Commons not to sit again until Feb. 2 has excited considerable criticism, and the decision of the House of Lords, to reconvene on Jan. 6 is praised by the critics, who maintain that both Houses should sit intermittently for the purpose of keeping an eye on the executive branch of the Government.

Long sittings would not be necessary according to these critics, as there is no question of legislation or finance immediately impending. The sole duty of the House under prevailing conditions would be to keep an eye on the Cabinet, which with the aid of the Defence of the Realm Act, is in a position of almost arbitrary power.

BRITISH AIRMEN ARE RESCUED

Two Picked up by Dutch Steamer in the North Sea

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A telegram to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Flushing says that the Dutch steamer Orange Nassau has picked up two aviators in the North Sea.

The aviators proved to be a British officer and his mechanic, who had been compelled to descend upon the sea on account of the motor of their seaplane becoming disabled.

At first they refused to leave their craft until they were assured they would not be interned in Holland, whither the Orange Nassau was bound. It was reported that the aviators had been flying over Belgium, where they dropped five bombs.

CURLING

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the curling club was held last night in the rooms on Charlotte St. Many new curlers were on hand signifying their intention to break into the "roaring game" this winter. The rooms were illuminated by three fine large chandeliers presented to the club by Mr. Robert Neill, an ardent exponent of the game.

There will be 24 rinks this year, in the schedule as against 28 rinks last year. The skips will meet next Monday night to select rinks for the Ontario Tankard and the District Cup.

LONG SEARCH AT AN END

Police Find Man After Two Years' Efforts

MONTREAL, Dec. 15. — George Tremblay, for whom the local police had been searching for two years, was taken into custody on Saturday when he was located hiding in a trench in the basement of a house on Cadieux street. Tremblay had literally "dug himself in" and was found by accident by detectives under several feet of loose earth.

Tremblay was condemned two years ago by Judge Lafontaine to a fine of $500 or a term in prison for erecting and operating a still for the distilling of whisky. He was on bail at the time and when an effort was made to collect the fine or take Tremblay to Bordeaux, it was found he had left the city.

CASUALTIES IN OFFICERS HEAVY

Britain Has Lost Nearly One Thousand Since Outbreak of Hostilities

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The official officers' casualty list for the week ended Nov. 30 has been made public. It shows that in these seven days the British forces on the continent lost 79 officers killed and 151 wounded and that 33 were reported missing. This gives a total of 253 for the week.

Added to the previous totals, the last report shows that since the outbreak of hostilities Great Britain has had 966 officers killed and 1,918 wounded, while 582 have been reported missing. The total of casualties of officers up to date is, therefore, 3,466 men.

MUST NOT SELL CUBEBS TO MINORS

Chief of Police Thompson called the attention of a reporter today to an act in the revised 1914 Dominion statutes governing the sale of "cubebs" by tobacco stores, which makes it a violation of the law henceforth. The restriction is in the revised statutes under subsection 6 restraining young people from the use of tobacco.

The wording of the act is very sweeping and is as follows:—

"For the purpose of this act the word "cigarette" includes any small cigar, made of tobacco, rolled up in paper, tobacco leaf or any other material."

Better one boil on the stove than two on the neck.

IS AN EVENT OF IMPORTANCE

Appointment of British Envoy to the Holy See

COMMENT IN ITALY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 15. — The correspondent of the Daily Chronicle at Milan telegraphs that Sir Henry Howard's appointment as Great Britain's envoy to the Holy See with consequent re-establishing of formal diplomatic relations between England and the Vatican, after a lapse of nearly 400 years, is commented on in the Italian press as an event of first-rate political importance.

One conviction generally expressed in the organ, as Italy's public opinion, is that Great Britain's action, besides welding firmer than ever to herself the vast Catholic population of the British Empire, will strengthen immensely the moral as well as the material influence of the Allies and the friends of the Triple Entente.

FITTING HIMSELF TO PREACH TO HIS PEOPLE

Seven and a half years ago a young Persian lad landed in the city of Fort William, Ont., friendless, lonesome, but filled with ambition. Conditions in this land were new to him. He wanted to get ahead; to make something of himself and become an educated man, able to return to Persia and teach his people Christianity.

That young man is in the city and before a comparatively slim, but interested audience who attended the B.Y.P.A. gathering in Murray Street Baptist Church last night he gave a lecture that not only pleased, but instructed all present.

A. E. Kochaly, who lectured last night on Persia.

Mr. Kochaly's progress has been an example of what perseverance, pluck and ability can accomplish. In the city of Fort William he confided to Mr. Joseph Wearing some of the desires of his heart, principal of which was to acquire an education. Mr. Wearing at the time was attending McMaster, and he very easily persuaded the ambitious youth to enter the institution, with what splendid results is now apparent. While yet a student he is a graduate in arts and theology, competent to tour the country and tell audiences about his native land, its customs and its history. Mr. Kochaly is of medium height, dark complexioned and a polished fluent conversationalist. One could sit and hear him talk about Persia, its remarkable history, its religious customs, its gradually developing religious liberty, and its

CARE FOR UNEMPLOYED BEFORE MAKING PROMISES TO CUT DOWN TAX RATE

Much Depends on Conditions in the Spring Says the Chief Magistrate — Impossible to Make any Broad Statement he Says

The cutting down of the tax rate of twenty-five mills is receiving considerable attention from Mayor Buller. The Review secured an interview with the Mayor this morning expecting that he would state off hand that the rate would be reduced. Much to the reporter's surprise, however, Mayor Buller refused to allow the possibility of decreasing the tax rate to take a more prominent place in his mind than the problem of providing work for the unemployed.

"It would not be wise," remarked His Worship, "if any promises were made at the present time about dropping a mill off the rate. It will all depend on how spring opens up. If the same conditions, as face us today, are prevalent then it would hardly seem right to cut the rate as much as one mill and be cutting down city work. If the spring finds us with an army of unemployed on our hands, it is my intention to put forth every effort to extend public works. At present we are going on with the outfall sewer, thus alleviating the trouble to a certain extent, and when the snow disappears and perhaps the outfall sewer about completed, we will have to find some other means of giving work."

"If the rate were cut to 25 mills, don't you think the increase in assessment would provide enough surplus money to carry on extra work?"

"That may possibly be so but we are up against a proposition the like of which we have never before faced and it is utterly impossible to make any broad statement like that about the work next year." Concluding Mayor Buller remarked, "My stand in a nutshell is this: I'm going to do everything I can to assist in reducing the rate but before any promises are made I'm going to see that the unemployed are cared for."

KEIR HARDIE NOW IN SEMI-SECLUSION

Keir Hardie

London, England, Dec. 14. — The voice of Keir Hardie, famous labor leader, is heard no more in the land—or at least only rarely compared to his former frequency of eloquent oration.

Keir Hardie has retired to a state of semi-seclusion, for in these unsettled times his anti-belligerant temperament is sorely tried by contact with the world. Hardie was one of those who argued most strongly against war, and the participation in war of the laboring man.

XMAS PRESENTS AS USUAL URGED BY BOARD OF TRADE

Effort Will be Made to Secure More Government Contracts for Peterboro --- Question of Train Service Will Also be Taken up Again

PLENTY OF INTERESTING DISCUSSION

By all means spend your money for Christmas presents this year just the same as ever. The board of trade went on record last night as being unanimously in sympathy with the movement to encourage Christmas buying the same as other years. They also appointed a committee to act with a committee from the city council to look into the matter of better train service for Peterborough and report back to the next board meeting. Lastly they appointed a committee to meet the manufacturers' committee of the city council some night to be arranged, at which local manufacturers will be asked to be present for the purpose of arranging a deputation to Ottawa to secure if possible more local government contracts.

There was no lack of interesting discussion at the gathering which was fairly representative of the business men of the city. Mr. Basil Hall presided.

Mr. J. M. Worth, a vigorous booster for liberality and generous spending engaged in a friendly tilt with Mr. Tomlins, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia which originated from different views held by these two gentlemen on the spending question. Mr. Tomlins said, "Let us "go carefully." Mr. Worth thought that was a wrong view to take, that it savored of pessimism and that people should not curtail when their purses were unaffected by the times. The affair resolved itself into an argument between the two, friendly of course, but nevertheless quite an earnest one. Mr. Worth declared that his firm intended giving a Christmas gift to each of their employes this Christmas. Mr. Worth thought Mr. Tomlins should be made to retract his remarks. The latter however stoutly held out for careful expenditures for a while. There was no telling how long present conditions would last and few people seemed to really grasp how bad conditions were. Mr. Tomlins however was not pessimistic in the least.

Christmas Liberality.

President Basil Hall in broaching the subject of Christmas liberality thought that curtailment would spoil the very spirit of Christmas and even Christianity. If people did without Christmas presents this year they might get away from the idea altogether and Christmas giving would be abolished.

The discussion ended with a strong resolution being filed endorsing Christmas giving.

The Train Service.

Regarding the reduced train service for Peterborough on the C.P.R., strong objection was taken. The lack of adequate Sunday service was greatly deplored, despite the explanations offered by Mr. W. S. Dodd, C. P. R. agent and Mr. Skinner. There was no blame laid at the doors of the local C.P.R. officials and before the meeting ended a hearty vote of appreciation was accorded Mr. Dodd and Mr. Skinner for their invariable activity and zeal in assisting Peterborough in the matter of giving every accommodation to shippers and passengers. Both gentlemen it was thought had done a great deal for the city. One suggestion was that the Grand Trunk be interviewed to see what service they could offer.

Ways and means of bringing more government work to Peterborough was discussed at some length. It was felt by some that the only way to get the business was to go direct to Ottawa for it. To this end the appointment of a committee took place who will meet the manufacturers of the city if possible at a meeting to be arranged shortly. A resolution of appreciation from the board for the generous response of citizens to the Patriotic Fund was also passed, the same to be forwarded to the secretary of the organising committee.

KING PETER ENTERS HIS CAPITAL

Authorities Say no Austrians Remain on Servian Soil

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 16.—King Peter and Crown Prince Alexander and Prince George have entered Belgrade at the head of the victorious Servian army according to a despatch received by Reuters today from Nish. Not a single Austrian now remains on Servian soil according to Servian authorities.

Amsterdam, Dec. 16.—A despatch from Constantinople to the Telegraaf says tribes in Northern Albania have declared war on Servia.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The Austrian army in Servia has not recovered from the surprise which the Servians gave it. Just when they were thought to be beaten the Servians turned on the invaders and drove them westward and northward out of Servian territory. The only part of Servia remaining in Austrian hands comprises a small territory, including the towns of Shabats and Losnitza.

It is now announced on behalf of Servia that the previous retreats were due to a lack of ammunition, and that the stores have been replenished by captures from the Austrians.

The little Montenegrin army is also doing its share, and, according to a Cettinje report, has succeeded in cutting off part of the Austrian right wing, which retreated into Bosnia.

A Copenhagen despatch yesterday afternoon declares that news of the Austrian retreat from Servia created a panic in Berlin.

Announcement of the capture of Belgrade by the Austrians less than two weeks ago was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and resulted in great jubilation.

The suddenness of the reverse suffered by the Austrians consequently came as a complete surprise in Germany.

GERMAN CRUISERS DASH OUT TO NORTH SEA AND BOMBARD COAST TOWNS NOT FORTIFIED

TWO OF THE RAIDERS ARE REPORTED SUNK

Extensive Damage is Reported to Have Been Done by Shelling of Scarborough and Hartelpool Early This Morning — Business Houses and Town Buildings Are Wrecked

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 16. — A statement given out by the official information bureau says German warships which have been bombarding the eastern coast of England have been driven off by the West Hartlepool fortress.

LONDON, Dec. 16. — The official press bureau this afternoon made the following announcement with regard to the German attack on the North Sea coast of England: "The fortress commander at West Hartlepool reports that German war vessels engaged their fortress between eight and nine o'clock this morning. The enemy was driven off. A small German war vessel also opened fire on Scarborough and Whitby."

Scarborough, England, Dec. 16.—Four German cruisers bombarded the town of Scarborough this morning.

Hartlepool, Dec. 16.—Residents of Hartlepool were awakened this morning by heavy gun firing. Great crowds at once assembled on the beach to learn whence the sounds came. Shells from German ships soon began dropping into the city whereupon the crowd on the beach rapidly sought shelter.

Hull, Dec. 16.—Arrival of German raiders off Scarborough took place under cover of a thick veil of fog. Some people declared they saw German cruisers lying off Castle Cliff. The roof of St. Martin's church was struck and one woman is known to have been killed. Another church was damaged and the roofs of several houses were carried away by shells.

London, Dec. 16.—German fleet made a sudden dash into the North Sea today, shelled Scarborough and Hartlepool, English coast towns on the North Sea, and engaged certain units of the British fleet.

Four German cruisers appeared off Scarborough at an early morning hour and began to bombard the town. It is apparent they had no difficulty in dropping shells into the city. Panic seized the people and many of them fled from their homes. Residents of Hartlepool were aroused from their sleep by the sound of heavy gun firing. They flocked to the streets and thence to the beach to learn what was going on. In a few moments shells from German cruisers began dropping into Hartlepool, whereupon the crowd along the shore broke for shelter. Panic also showed itself at this point. Fear took possession of the people and many abandoned their homes and fled inland. News of this naval raid was announced by the British Admiralty shortly before eleven-thirty this morning and it threw London into the greatest state of excitement that has prevailed since the outbreak of war.

A preliminary announcement of the Admiralty made no mention of what damage was done to Scarborough or Hartlepool.

London, 12.35.—Reports are current here that two German cruisers have been sunk in the North Sea.

Considerable Damage Reported From Hartlepool

HULL, Dec. 16. — The bombardment of Hartlepool lasted for twenty-five minutes. The hostile vessels which took part in the operation are estimated from two to six, but never once were they clearly visible from the shore. The forts on the River Tees replied to the fire of the German vessels.

Pieces of small shells have been found all over Hartlepool. The damage inflicted on the town is said to be considerable. One of the shells hit a gas tank and set it afire.

HULL, ENGLAND, Dec. 16. — Fugitives here from Scarborough say the German bombardment of that port was heavy, and that great damage was done to property in Scarborough.

SCARBOROUGH, Dec. 16. (1 p.m.) — The shelling of Scarborough by four German cruisers which took part in the operation began shortly before eight o'clock. Several buildings have been damaged by shell fire.

Germans Fired Fifty Shells Into Scarborough

HULL, ENGLAND, Dec. 16. — A man who has arrived here from Scarborough estimates that the German cruisers fired a total of about fifty shells into Scarborough. He declares he saw only three chimney stacks shattered. He believes, however, that damage nearer shore will prove to be more serious than this.

LONDON, Dec. 16. (12 noon). — The Yorkshire Evening News reports that two German cruisers were sunk in today's engagement and a British flotilla was damaged.

SHOCK FATAL

Four-Year-old Lad Was Burned When he Opened Stove Door

GAVE NO ALARM

Gloom in its darkest form was cast over the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Collins, Brown Street, Brownston, this morning, when their little four-year old son, Ernest Frederick Collins, met his death. About ten o'clock the little lad dressed in his night robes came down stairs where his mother and his sister were engaged in their household duties. While awaiting for his mother to prepare his breakfast, he returned upstairs, where a small box stove was placed, evidently with the intention of securing his shoes and stockings.

In a few moments an older brother, of some ten years of age, went up to assist him in dressing and on reaching the hall he found the little felolw on the floor and his night gown burned from about him. The older boy cried out to his mother who lost no time in reaching the side of her child. His hair was badly burned and but a few patches of the night gown remained. Strange to note, no surrounding furniture or carpet was burned.

Did Not Cry Out.

Dr. Sutton was called but the child's life had passed away. The Review learned from Mrs. Collins, the mother of the unfortunate victim, that she was present in the house all the time and the lad gave no cry of alarm. She did not know that anything unusual was happening until the older boy cried to her. She stated that the little fellow was scalded by drinking hot water when scarcely a year old and the physician in attendance at that time stated that his heart was very weak. Her belief was that the lad opened the door of the stove and when the flames gushed out and caught his night gown, he fainted.

Mr. Collins is employed on the G. T. R. as sectionman and did not know of the fatality till noon. The parents will have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Funeral announcements will be made later.

CONTINUE WORK DURING WINTER

Fortv Men Find Work at Outfall Sewer

SOME DIFFICULTY

Is Being Encountered Because of Presence of Water and Quick Sand

City Engineer Parsons said this morning that work was progressing fairly well on the outfall sewer. A great deal of quick sand and water had been met, which of course meant considerable trouble. Contrary to expectations the hoist and carrier was not being used for the purpose for which it was first intended. It has been rigged up as a pile driver and performs the work without any trouble. At present it is only possible to open twelve feet of the trench at a time because of the sand and the City Engineer doubts if it will be possible to move any faster even when they reach Park Street as the sand and water will also be found there.

Owing to the small portion of the trench being opened at a time, it is possible to have but twenty men working. Mr. Parsons is doing as well as can be expected under the conditions by having the work done by two gangs of men. Each gang works every other week. The work will be pushed forward all winter.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 16, 1914

AN EXPOSE IN LONDON.

FOR EXPOSING fraudulent maens for making money and deluding the common people, Toronto Financial Saturday Night has won a wide reputation. No doubt it has done much good service to Canada. We do not remember, at the moment of writing, whether Financial Saturday Night has devoted any attention to the Dominion of Canada News Company, Limited, or to Canadian Capital Investments, Limited. We think, however, the Canadian public should know something of the facts brought out in a suit in which these companies were engaged.

We are indebted for these facts to the London (England) Financial News, in a copy of which is a very full report of the judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Atkin in the King's Bench Court.

The Canadian Capital Investments, Limited, was a land company, owning a block of land which was outside the city boundary of Regina, and which was being offered in building lots to investors, principally, we presume, in England. The advertisements of this land company had been adversely criticized by the press; they had been animadverted upon by the Board of Trade of Regina in the Autumn of 1912, which invoked the aid of the London Chamber of Commerce in respect to them. Certain reputable newspapers had declined to continue the advertisements of the company regarding the Regina property.

About that time Mr. Charles William Neville, the instigator of the Land Company, became interested in the "Canadian News," an influential English newspaper devoted to investments or financial matters regarding Canada, and publishing advice for the guidance of investors. In fact, Mr. Neville became interested in the "Canadian News" in several ways. He no doubt was intensely interested in its articles, and possibly was a paid-up subscriber. At any rate, he had lent this paper, of which Mr. A. M. de Beck was editor, various sums, amounting to £1,490. He then entered into an agreement with de Beck to take £750 in satisfaction of the debt, if the newspaper were muzzled to his satisfaction.

Clause 6 of the agreement reads, in part:

> "The company shall not publish in "Canadian News," or in any other newspaper or periodical published by the company, any comment upon Canadian Capital Investments, Limited, or its directors, or its business, or in regard to the land owned by the land company in or near Regina, Saskatchewan, or any comment upon any company with which the company have notice that the Canadian Capital Investments, Limited, are connected or concerned."

It then further provided that a paragraph should be inserted in the next issue with reference to the demand in Canada for certain properties.

Thus, under the heading "On Building Homes," was inserted what purported to be special cables from the mayors of various cities in Canada. That referring to Regina reads: "Regina—Demand far exceeds supply; good field for enterprise mentioned." The Toronto "cable" read: "Toronto—Very strong demand small houses in Toronto; demand far exceeds supply." Vancouver, Calgary, Saskatoon, and Montreal were similarly treated in the "special cables."

As to the policy of the "Canadian News," Mr. de Beck published the following emphatic announcement, aglow with idealism and animation:

> "And then, as regards investors and those who would interest themselves in Canadian finance and real estate, my Gold and Glitter column speaks for itself. That column alone means work of the hardest description. Often I am unable even to go to bed, so strenuous is the labour involved by this special branch of my paper. I am often severely criticized by my jealous enemies on this very point and yet I can honestly say that there is not one opinion in it concerning stocks, shares, real estate, or the like, which has been given without the most careful investigation."

Mr. de Beck goes on to say that he cables direct to the city itself and receives answers from banks, trust companies, or other reliable official authorities. He says he has never yet given wrong advice, or at least heard of it being so. This was the policy he laid down when, as the judge says, twenty days before, he had bargained away the freedom of his journal.

The suit to recover the money was lost, because the judge held that the agreement was in restraint of trade and the contract invalidate.

The whole case illustrates a grand and vigorous effort to blacken the good name of Canada as a legitimate and profitable field for British investors. By means of the "Canadian News," a false impression was obviously intended to be made on its readers, and some of these were afterwards to be solicited by the Canadian Investments, Limited. The trial and the comment of the worthy judge are sufficient to condemn the Regina property as a very undesirable investment. We would not be surprised if the Regina property were several miles away from the post-office of that thriving western capital. In spite of all the glow of the Gold and Glitter column, we would not be surprised if its building lots never became anything else than peaceful countryside.

AN OLD PRINCIPLE.

PEOPLE SOMETIMES TALK about the Made-in-Canada movement as though it were some new discovery. It is regarded as a matter of novelty that people should ask for goods made by the labour that keeps the country prosperous. But, as a matter of fact, the principle of Made-in-Canada is as old as the nation. It began generations ago in the farmhouses and the villages, when there wasn't a machine invented that wasn't operated by hand or foot.

The whole fabric of Canadian industry traces directly back to the old spinning wheel and the loom and the village blacksmith shop. Nothing left the maker's hands in those days that couldn't be depended upon to give the last ounce of wear and tear for the work and the cost that went into it. Our pioneer makers were not afraid of the cost of production. They went on the principle that it never pays to make a poor article, even though to do so costs less than to make a good one. The factory operators of today have not gone back on that principle. They never could afford to do so. Since those days, and before, in spite of a tariff, high, low, or middling, the manufacturers of Canada have been tested by the competition of older nations expert in the business of manufacturing. If Canada has learned the art of self-government more thoroughly than any other overseas dominion in the world, she has also learned the art of self-efficiency in the business of producing what the people of Canada have to buy. It never paid to do anything else. The slip-shod maker is out of date. He throve on the credulity of some people. In an age of publicity only efficiency tells.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT IS TO BE HOPED that in future public meetings in Peterborough, no speaker will forget himself to the extent of ignoring, or being discourteous to, the chairman of the meeting. What is overlooked now, if repeated, will likely receive attention.

THIS ISN'T going to be a green Christmas—the snow has fixed that.

TODAY.

(By a British Admiral.)

Rise! for the day is passing,
And you lie dreaming on;
The others have buckled their armor,
And forth to the fight have gone;
A place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has some part to play;
The Past and the Future are nothing
In the face of the stern Today.

Rise from your dreams of the future,
Of gaining some hard-fought field,
Of storming some airy fortress,
Or bidding some giant yield;
Your future has deeds of glory,
Of honour (God grant it may!)
But your arm will never be stronger,
Or the need so great as Today.

The Montessori Method.

(Windsor Record.)

Some educationists have termed the kindergarten a fad, but results have justified its introduction. As noted by Miss Johnston in her paper, Dr. Montessori has developed in Italy an educational scheme which has brought out in very young children a marvellous degree of self-reliance, self-help, and manual skill, all of which has been accomplished without any forcing system, there being ample evidence that the little groups of children are healthy and happy in their work and play.

The principal benefit from kindergartens and Montessori schools is the development of the child mind on correct principles, under wholesome guidance, before any home neglect or evil street associations have been given a chance to get in their baneful work.

Worth the Money.

(Canadian Courier.)

People are willing to pay for good news in war time.

On the day that the news of the Emden's capture reached Toronto, the evening papers got out special editions featuring the glad tidings.

It was a harvest for the newsboys. One little Hebrew lad at a downtown corner was heard to exclaim:

"Gee! dat's a good paper. A man just sclipped me a dime for it, and said he'd give me a quarter if I had another paper like it tomorrow."

Britain's Economic Equilibrium.

(London Chronicle.)

The figures (of unemployment) confirm in a striking way our hope that while the war lasts the country's economic equilibrium may be maintained, and we may escape serious unemployment, except in trades, like the cotton industry, whose case is complicated by causes unconnected with the war. Meanwhile the figures may be commended to those German economists who have been assuring the world that the British business system was so much less stable than their own.

Hon. W. T. White Says So.

(Brockville Times.)

Hon. W. T. White recently stated in Peterborough that peace would be signed at Berlin. He was right. A peace treaty that stops short of Berlin will only mean an armistice and another war. It will not do for a half-defeated Germany to cry quits on its boundary lines; Germany started the war, and the Allies will finish it at their own time and place. When the Allies march into Berlin the war will be over, and not before.

A Prophet on the War.

(Toronto News.)

Hilaire Belloc believes that the war will be over three months after the Allies get a secure footing on German territory. Mr. Belloc proved himself as a prophet two years ago by indicating every phase in the present war, including the violation of Belgian neutrality. And he did not find it necessary to consult Sir Oliver Lodge, either.

An Expert on Rubber.

(London Free Press.)

Almost the whole rubber output is produced within the British Empire. None of this supply is by any means reaching Germany. The Germans will soon be without motor tires and rubber for boots and shoes.

Beyond Dispute.

(Boston Transcript.)

"Which bullet do you consider the deadliest?"
"The one that hits."

First Aid Treatment For Common Poisons

Ptomaine poisoning comes from eating tainted food, usually fish or meat. It manifests itself in vomiting, purging, fever, headache, pain in the abdomen and sometimes by an eruption of the skin-raised blotches of irregular shape.

Give the patient two tablespoonfuls of castor oil or Epsom salts. If these are immediately thrown up, give a grain of calomel every hour till five grains have been administered, then at the end of another hour give a Siedlitz powder or a tablespoonful of Rochelle salts.

Give the patient no food at all except under the advice of a physician.

Poisoning by Gas

Illuminating gas, or the gas that comes from a stove or furnace is very poisonous. It is dangerous to breathe even two or three times in a room where the air is heavily charged with such gas.

The symptoms of gas poisoning are headache, dizziness, ringing in the ears, throbbing temple, spots before the eyes, and finally unconsciousness.

The specific for gas poisoning is fresh air. Stimulants should be administered, a little wine or a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a third of a glass of water.

When rescuing an unconscious person from a room charged with gas hold your breath and hurry. If you cannot carry the unconscious person, open wide all windows and doors, and go for help.

Alcoholic Poisoning

When a man is "dead drunk" he is unconscious from alcohol poisoning. Such poisoning is always serious and often fatal. Never think that because an unconscious man is merely "drunk" he is in no danger.

This sort of poisoning is treated by the use of emetics, except in cases where vomiting is spontaneous. Aromatic spirits of ammonia or strong coffee may be given. The patient should be kept warm and rubbed vigorously.

Powerful Drugs

Opium poisoning may be known by the contracted pupils of the victim, and by the slow breathing. At first the breathing is slow and full, but it gradually grows slower and shallower. The "pin point" pupil is the most characteristic symptom.

Give emetics—a teaspoonful of mustard in warm water or a tablespoonful of sirup of ipecac.

Remember that opium poisoning may result not alone from the drug in its original form, but from laudanum, morphine, paregoric and the various soothing syrups and cough cures that depend upon opium for their action.

"LIFE ITSELF IS GOOD"

Wise are we if we do not allow any one thing, little or big, or still bigger, to disappoint or to cloud or sour our lives and thereby to neutralize our energies, or even our hopes or our ambitions. To skim the cream off of to-day instead of crying over the spilt milk of yesterday is ever the way of the wise. Only the fool, or the temporary fool, gives himself to the latter. To cry over the spilt milk is the chronic tendency or habit of the unwise and the weak, never of the wise, the alert, the brave and the intrepid. "We take too little views," said Phillips Brooks. "It is not the events of life, nor its emotions, nor this nor that experience, but life itself which is good."

The amount of cream that appears in our lives depends, after all, more upon our mental habits and those types of thoughts that we choose and live most habitually with than upon anything else. These are our private property, and it is ours to regulate them as we will.

He who has the quest of the good in his heart relates himself thereby with all the higher powers and forces of the universe, and they aid him at every turn. The one who cultivates and lives always in the optimistic, cheerful, hopeful, helpful habit of mind and heart can never fail. We may, therefore, miss this or that that was a part of our dream, but above and beyond this and a thousand times more important is life, character, the distinctive homely qualities of a high grade, useful and noble manhood or womanhood. Such a life lived bravely through to the end can end only in triumph—and even its failures are in the end but parts of its triumph.
—Ralph Waldo Trine, in Woman's Home Companion.

Italian Cabbage

Quarter firm head of cabbage, boil until tender, set aside to become cold. Chop coarsely and salt to taste. Add dash of cayenne.

Butter medium-sized pudding dish, put in layer of cabbage, sprinkle with crumbs and dot with bits of butter, and sprinkle with one teaspoon of parmesan cheese. Put on another layer of cabbage, more crumbs, butter and cheese, until all material is used. Pour over this 1½ cups of stock and bake 30 minutes.

Avoid Heavy Hats

Heavy hats cause headaches and very bad for the hair. A hat should be light and should not be worn so tightly on the head as to exclude all the air. Lack of ventilation for the hair is one of the causes of baldness.

Should the inkpot be accidentally upset on the tablecloth or carpet, pour a little cold water over it at once. The ink will float on the water, and when the cloth or carpet is rubbed dry no stain will show.

AN EXPLANATION.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—In regard to a report in your newspaper referring to a little incident in one of the local churches I might say that it was caused by the fact that the pulpit is an adjustable one and the noise was caused by the "kitches" slipping and not from the force of a big fist. For the big fist is not a mailed one and has never been raised to do injury to either pulpit or people.

Yours truly,
CHURCH MEMBER.

THE RIGHT WAY TO STRIKE A MATCH

Once in a while we have complaints about our matches breaking in two. This is no fault of the match, as EDDY'S MATCHES are made from specially selected straight-grained wood only. For the benefit of those who are still in ignorance of the proper way to hold a match (and there are many) we give the following rule:—

"The forefinger of the right hand should be placed over the tip of the match, and withdrawn quickly when the flame comes. This prevents any undue leverage on the match, and instinct prevents one getting one's finger burned."

The Terror of Darkness

By SAMUEL E. BRANT.

"I have wondered," said Ned Foster, "since an episode that occurred to me in the dark that blind persons are not all arrant cowards. Children who fear nothing by daylight are timid when they can see nothing. Women who will spend day after day in a house alone will look under the beds at night for robbers, although at the time surrounded by their family.

"While traveling I entered a city one evening where there was a celebration of some sort and was obliged to sleep in the same room with some one else. I did not see the other fellow, nor did he see me. There was a bed for each of us, and he was in his bed before I went to the room. His face was turned from me, and all I could see of him was a little bald spot on the back of his head.

"I undressed, put my wallet, containing a couple of hundred dollars, under my pillow, turned off the light and went to bed.

"I am not an effeminate man or a coward by daylight, but I am free to confess that the moment I found myself in a dark room with a strange man an uneasiness crept over me that I was ashamed of. I tried to think of the olden times, when taverns were small affairs and one might be thankful if he could get half of a bed with a stranger instead of a whole one to himself even in the same room. Imagination began to work upon me, and it was not long before I had a picture before me of my roommate standing over me with a long knife in one hand raised to drive into me, while the other was thrust under my pillow in search of my wallet.

"I could not sleep. My throat was dry, and I wished for a drink of water. I feared that if I arose to get one my roommate might fear that I was getting up for some hostile design against him. I was as much afraid of his fears as I was of him. However, the night was as hot as my throat, and, slipping out of bed quietly, I groped toward what I supposed to be the washstand.

"What was my horror at putting my hand on hair, not only on hair, but the bald spot of a man's head that it surrounded. I withdrew it immediately and retreated on tiptoe. But since I could see nothing I had no idea where I was going. I kept my two hands extended before me, and the first thing I struck was some glass article with a very large top and a very small bottom. It fell and with the usual crash made by breaking glass.

"I heard nothing from my roommate, but fancied that he was doing just what I would do under the circumstances—that is, he had grasped whatever defensive weapon he had and was prepared to defend himself to the death. I stood horror stricken after knocking over the glassware, my heart beating like a kettledrum. I listened, but heard no sound. I felt sure that I had awakened my roommate by putting my hand on his head and that he was keeping perfectly still so as not to reveal himself. Had I heard any movement I would have felt easier.

"Click!

"Was it the cocking of a revolver or one of those sounds that come from a cracking caused by expansion under heat? I did not know, but under excitement I felt sure it was the former. A cocked pistol was undoubtedly pointed out into the darkness. It made matters worse, for now I would not dare strike a match even if I could find one.

"I stood still for what was probably a minute, though it seemed to me a quarter of an hour. Then, touching the wall, I concluded to try to find my bed that I might possess myself of my money. But I did not know which way to move. If I went wrong I might stumble over the bed of my roommate. In the dark a sense of direction leaves us. I was obliged to take a frightful risk, but it was no worse than suspense. I felt my way, making no sound in my bare feet until a board in the floor creaked under my tread.

"My heart stood still, and so did I.

"Then I remembered that sound alone does not give direction, and I grew bolder. Passing my hand along the wall, I came to the door frame. Now I had my bearings. I remembered that my bed was beside the door, and in another moment I reached it. Possessing myself of my money, I stood considering what to do. I had no match with which to strike a light and would not dare use it if I had one. I concluded to take advantage of being near the door and get out of the room even at the risk of being shot.

"With my valuables in one hand I unlocked the door with the other; then, opening it quickly, I slipped out into a lighted hall. Finding a speaking tube handy, I asked the night clerk to come to me and gave him the situation. Not having been worked upon by the dark as I had been, he bravely opened the door of the room I had left, went in and lighted the gas. I followed him.

"There in the other fellow's bed was the bald spot I had seen turned toward me. The clerk went up to the man and spoke to him. No answer. The clerk shook him. Still there was no apparent consciousness.

" 'He's sound asleep,' said the clerk. 'I noticed when he came in that he was very full.'

"Well," said I, "if the fool killer should come along he would take me and burn me at the stake."

MINIATURE GOODIES.

Tiny Puddings and Cakes Make Nice Christmas Offerings.

One of the most attractive holiday novelties on the market last season was a miniature plum pudding put up in a dainty white pasteboard box. The pudding was an inch and a half or two inches in diameter and rolled in oiled paper that together with red satin ribbon. A piece of holly was tacked to the outside of the box. A tiny card bearing the familiar Christmas greetings inclosed in the box made a little souvenir particularly appropriate to the season. The plum pudding could be eaten, and one little girl who received such a souvenir had a Christmas feast for her dollies with the pudding.

Gifts of this sort are always appreciated by the homeless contingent that lives in hotels or furnished rooms. The housewife who excels in the making of puddings or cakes could hit upon no more suitable and welcome gift for the bachelor men and maids of her acquaintance than a small pudding, fruit cake, Christmas cookies, crullers or candies. The cakes should be attractive in appearance and put up in true Christmas fashion. The women who is able to supply things of this sort might create a popular demand for them in her neighborhood and swell her Christmas fund by their sale. The local women's exchanges can doubtless find a market for such material.

INDIVIDUAL DAINTIES.

Cookies that have a genuine holiday flavor are made by combining chocolate and fruit flavors. They will find favor with the young people at least.

The cookies may be cut into many fancy shapes and made attractive with white or chocolate icing.

GREAT CANADIAN WOMAN ADVOCATED "EQUAL RIGHTS"

A bust of Dr. Emily Howard Stowe has been placed in the City Hall at Toronto as an enduring tribute to the memory of a woman who devoted herself to the advocacy of "equal rights for women," including the right to higher education. Mrs. Stowe spent her early life unobtrusively as did other Canadian girls of her time.

After some time spent in teaching near her native place, Dr. Stowe went to Toronto nearly half a century ago to make a living by the practice of medicine. Only those who were intimate with her had any conception of the struggle through which she had to pass in acquiring a medical education and building up a professional practice; but fortunately for herself and the community she retained the perennially perfect serenity that was of such incalculable value in winning personal friends and promoting causes in which she was interested. Her earliest achievement was securing for other women a chance to obtain the privilege of a medical training, but she is also entitled to the honor of being the real founder of the women suffrage movement in Canada.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water, and lay it on the injured part.

To clean glass toilet bottles, put a little vinegar and salt into the bottle, allow to stand for 2 hours, and then rinse out in clear warm water.

You may clean jewelry successfully by washing it in hot suds in which a little ammonia has been dissolved.

To remove paint from a dress take a camel-hair brush, dip the point of it in turpentine, and just damp the parts that are stained. Let the garment dry, and then rub briskly, when the paint will fall off in a dust. If it does not all come off repeat the operation.

Drop a little flour into the hot fat when preparing to fry eggs, if you would prevent the sputtering of the fat.

Before using a new broom, tie strands closely together and put it into a pail of boiling water, letting it soak a couple of hours. Dry it well before using it.

When pressing woollen goods cover with sheet of brown paper in place of cloth. No lint will be the result.

Never use a brush when cleaning silk goods. Wipe carefully with piece of velvet.

To remove soil from marble take finely powdered pumice and vinegar. Wash entire surface with mixture and leave it for six hours, brush hard and wash in clear water. When dry rub with whiting and chamois.

If a tablespoonful of vinegar is put in the saucepan just before straining the potatoes, it will take all blackness out and make them white and floury.

Some people place a small bag of unslaked lime inside the piano to keep the damp away. This prevents the wires from rusting, and keeps the piano in good condition.

In order to ensure a good gloss on starched collars, first mix the starch with cold water, add a tiny lump of butter about the size of a small marble, then pour on the boiling water.

Rub silver spoons which have been stained by eggs with a little table salt.

Stained flour boards may be cleansed by scrubbing with chloride of lime. Use a tablespoonful to a pail of water.

Adam had his faults, but he was never sued for breach of promise.

Points for Mothers

Nursery Rime Crib Sheets.

Buy a good quality of sheeting one and a half yards wide—not linen, for that is too cold and becomes too easily wrinkled to prove satisfactory for babies' use—and tear into the proper lengths. Two yards will make a good sized sheet for the ordinary crib and will be long enough to tuck in fairly. Six sheets will be found a good number.

Hem each carefully, making a two inch hem at the top and an inch hem at the bottom. Then halfway between the sides of the sheet, just below the top hem, transfer some design showing a Mother Goose or nursery rime character.

Many pattern companies publish embroidery designs which have been used with success, and only a hot iron is needed to transfer them.

Children's books also abound in delightful pictures of little people and animals which, with the help first of tissue paper on which the design is traced and then of carbon paper for transferring, may be employed by the most inexperienced person.

Use embroidery cotton in either soft pink or blue and outline the design, using the color in which the child's room is decorated. Then with very little work the small sheet is finished, and most attractive it is.

Menus For Children.

The following are good menus for children from three to five years of age:

Beef broth with vermicelli cooked in it. Broiled fish for the meat course. Spinach, creamed, for greens. A baked potato for the starch food. A ripe, sweet orange for dessert and as much day old bread, with good butter, as the child wants.

Vegetable omelet made with eggs lightly cooked and stewed celery (chopped) or chopped asparagus tips, well cooked, turned in the omelet just before finishing. A small cup of good cocoa. Well cooked rice. Lady fingers for dessert.

Broiled lamb chop, stewed celery, creamed macaroni, bread, butter and honey, and a cup of cocoa for dessert.

Poached egg on well made toast. A saucer of apple sauce, baked potato. Orange gelatin for dessert.

Interchange these menus with the seasonable fruits and vegetables, being careful to keep the proportions right and also remember to use one part of meat to three parts of other foods. Consider eggs and milk as meat. The inorganic salts are in the greens and the fruits.

Keeping the Child From School.

Every mother should have a clinical thermometer and be able to take the temperature of the child. A child with fever should not be allowed to go to school. A good, healthy child makes an efficient man, and health is as important as education. If there is a contagious disease in the school that your child has not had he should remain at home until all danger is over. Of course the teachers do not like this interruption of the studies, but it is not a matter of life and death that the child should pass his examinations at the end of the term, and it may be such matter if he becomes the victim of the disease. At the same time the mother should be the judge of the real condition of the child and not allow him to pretend or imagine himself ill when he is not.

Candy For Children.

Scientists say sugar is a very good food for children, if it is properly eaten. The trouble with a great deal of candy is not with the sugar it contains, but with other harmful ingredients. Another objection is that too much candy is eaten at the wrong time—between meals.

The best candy for children consists of a little pure chocolate—milk chocolate or sweet chocolate tablets—or pure sugar, as in lumps of sugar or pure rock candy or barley sugar. Only a little of this should be eaten at a time and preferably should be eaten after meals, so that it will not spoil the natural appetite for other things.

Little Girls' Sewing Circles.

Sewing circles are always pleasing and beneficial to girls. Christmas gifts may be made, dolls may be dressed for hospitals. Very little fingers may find occupation in a patchwork quilt, this quilt to be sold to the highest bidder among the mammas. Sometimes a little fair may be given, consisting of one fancy table to hold the work of the club, an ice cream and candy booth, a grab bag filled with odds and ends donated by the various mothers. This is an occasion never to be forgotten and still does not require much expenditure of time or money. The children should vote on what charity is to receive the proceeds of the sale.

The Whistling Doll.

A novelty that appeals to the small boy or girl is a new whistling doll. It is a character doll. When you press the small boy in the ribs he gives a most lifelike and childlike whistle. He is inexpensive, for his feet are made only of cotton filled with excelsior. If he is very small he costs 25 cents, and in larger sizes his price mounts to a dollar. He is dressed in a becoming suit and cap of blue cotton.

It was announced at the Russian War Office yesterday that since the beginning of the war 80,000 Austrian prisoners have been sent to Siberia.

The United States naval collier Jason, which brought Christmas gifts from the American people to the children of the belligerent powers, left Genoa, Italy, yesterday for Saloniki.

Under a new lighting order issued by the British Home Secretary, the streets of London will be even gloomier than before. The use of lights for outside advertising and for the illumination of shop fronts is entirely prohibited after sunset.

War Makes New Industries.

Under direction of Mr. Joseph Marks, editor of the Toronto Industrial Banner, toy engines, stoves, menageries, and bake-wagons have been made for the past few weeks at St. Andrew's Market by otherwise unemployed metal polishers, tinsmiths, painters, carpenters, and men of all sorts of trades. It is amazing the ingenuity with which a toy stove can be manufactured from some scraps of tin artistically painted and tin-hinged, with a minute but real stove pipe in the correct place.

Lumber for benches has been supplied by the city, and the Board of Trade has offered the use of a factory building on Eastern avenue. With modern tools there will be good prospects for a permanent Canadian industry.

Pretty dolls are being made by "unemployed" women at the headquarters of the Toronto Women's Patriotic League on Sherbourne street, out of rags plus celluloid faces. Girls are employed to stuff them, and are paid by piece work, while the women make the little dresses and caps. They sell at 25 cents, and are being disposed of as soon as made.

The plan to have pretty rag rugs and portieres woven by feeble women is still being worked at, and may be put in operation within the week, as the Women's Art Association have offered the use of their hand looms. These rugs form quite an industry in Quebec, and the fad is growing in Ontario and the United States, so that Toronto may in the future have the picturesque experience of women weaving at hand looms as in the old Drumtochtie days.

Consolation.

He came home and found his young wife dissolved in tears.

"What do you think has happened?" she cried. "I left the cage open and our canary has flown away."

He undertook to give what consolation he might and took the distressed poor lady in his arms. As she nestled against his shoulder a new access of sobs convulsed her.

"Ah, George," she murmured in a choking voice, "now I've only you left."

Some Facts About Water.

It covers about two-thirds of the earth's surface to an average depth of about 12,500 feet.

It forms 75 per cent. of the human body.

When distilled to absolute purity it is almost a nonconductor of electricity.

In freezing its volume increases by one-eleventh that of the liquid.

Kidneys Wrong?—

If they are you are in danger. When through weakness or disease the kidneys fail to filter the impurities from the blood, trouble comes at once. Backache, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gravel, Diabetes, Gall Stones and the deadly Bright's Disease are some of the results of neglected kidneys. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills contain a most effective diuretic which strengthens and stimulates the kidneys so that they do their work thoroughly and well. Try

NORWOOD PEOPLE THOUGHT THEY WERE IN THE DESERT

Fierce Wind Storm Raised Loose Sand to the Mortification of the House-wife — "Washing" Got the Benefit

Norwood, Dec. 16. — On Monday night of this week Norwood was visited by a veritable gale of wind which caused the light coat of snow to blow in all directions. But that was not all—the loose sand was taken up with the snow and was blown all over the place making a very dirty looking sight. The sand and snow was blown into every conceivable place. Women who had the misfortune to have a washing out were put to the unpleasant task of doing their laundry work all over again.

The Norwood skating rink is open for business. This is the earliest in years that the lovers of skating were able to enjoy the fine sport on a sheet of home made ice. The curling rink is getting into good shape and if the cold weather continues the broom brigade will be getting in their work about the end of this week. This is at least two weeks earlier than any previous year.

New Books at Library.

The public library board have placed on the shelves quite a number of the new popular works of fiction. A few volumes treating on Germany and the present war were also purchased.

The last meeting of the 1914 village council was held last night in the council chamber. Who will meet at the council board next meeting night?

The C.P.R. has closed out Norwood as a night office. Mr. W. H. Bowbey who has been night operator here for some time got notice of this a few days ago and will consequently be leaving here shortly.

Tax Bills Due.

Yesterday being the last day for the payment of local taxes the bank officials were kept very busy receiving donations to the village exchequer.

Mr. Jos. Reynolds who sold out his farm at South Dummer some time ago and went to the west has returned and intends taking up his residence in Norwood. We understand he has purchased Mr. Kenneth Kempt's residence on Victoria St., known as the Cumming's property.

Several of our Norwood people attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John Pallin of Jermyn, on Tuesday.

On Saturday last about noon Mrs. Robert Hill formerly of Dummer passed away after a short illness at her home here adjoining the village on the Dummer road. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon. Place of interment, Norwood Cemetery.

Mr. James Thompson, M.L.A., was in Norwood on Monday of this week.

Mrs. Isaac Puffer, wife of our Chief of Police, we are pleased to hear is progressing favourably under the professional nursing of her daughter, Miss Clara Puffer.

Mr. Keith Waters of the Union Bank staff at Hastings spent Sunday at his home here.

Miss Vera McGill of Pontypool has been the guest of Miss Jean Minore.

Miss Mabel Andrews has returned from Pontypool where she has been the guest of her brother, Rev. T. W. F. G. Andrews.

Mr. Ross Nicol of Toronto is spending a few weeks at his home here.

Mrs. A. B. Greenbanks spent Wednesday of this week in Peterborough.

Mrs. J. E. Roxburgh visited in Peterboro last week.

The young people of town enjoyed their first skate of the season on Finlay's skating rink on Monday night of this week.

Messrs. K. Waters and G. B. Richardson spent Sunday in Havelock.

The bachelors of Norwood have issued invitations to their fifth annual dance to be held in the town hall on Wednesday evening, Dec. 30th. Huycke's orchestra of Peterboro will furnish the music for the evening.

Mr. A. Wilkinson, manager of the Union Bank here, spent the week end in Belleville.

Mrs. A. S. Wilkinson is visiting friends in Pakenham, Ont.

Mr. Gordon Beavis of Hastings was in town on Monday.

Mr. Roderick Pakenham, who is attending Collegiate in Peterboro, spent the week end with his parents here.

CLAIM THE ASSESSMENT IS NOT FAIR

Deputation Asks That Offices on Second and Third Floors be Assessed

FOR STREET PAVING

Some Appeals are Dealt With by the Court of Revision

A number of business men, including J. Crane, Dominion Bank; C. H. Pennefather, Union Bank; P. Campbell, Bank of Toronto; E. N. McWilliams, A. Gibson, Wm. Madill, J. W. McDermid, N. Minicola and D. M. Minicola, waited upon the court of revision, which met last evening, for the purpose of hearing appeals against the assessment for street paving, and voiced their complaint against having only the ground floors of buildings assessed. They claimed that the offices on the second and third floors should be assessed also. The matter was left over till the sitting on Friday at three p.m., to permit W. Johnston, chairman of the court, to look up the law on that point.

A number of other appeals were dealt with.

BOARD OF TRADE

ceived by the Board of Trade through the several subscription lists posted up in the local banks. An interesting feature of the subscriptions is the fact that Mr. R. S. Sutton, a gentleman residing at Ida, had given a donation to this fund each time he has been in the city of late. His first subscription was $2.00, the second $2.00 and when he called last Saturday he supplemented these gifts with a further one of $6.00. Mr. Sutton will be remembered as a man whose heart is "right there." This is one instance among so many of the generosity, patriotism and large heartedness of Canadians. Others are found in the list below and in those heretofore published.

The subscriptions are:—

The office staff in the Sun Life Assurance Company's office have been in the habit of donating presents each to the others and this year decided that the money that would be spent in this way would be used to better purpose if given to the Belgians. This excellent idea has been carried out and increases the fund by the substantial sum of $33.50. This money besides creating as much happiness in the donors as if used in the ordinary way will bring pleasure and help to some men in far off Belgium and help to create the world peace and friendship that must come when the war is over.

PTE. TAYLOR WRITES AGAIN

Canadians are Fit and Ready for the Firing Line

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Taylor have received another letter from their son, Pte. Odely Taylor, at Salisbury Plain. The letter follows:

Bustard Camp.
Salisbury Plain.
November 25, 1914.

Dear Father and Mother, and Kerwood,—

Very glad to receive your letter. Just imagine, only one month till Christmas. I have been up to London four days, and I enjoyed it fine. There are some beautiful sights. I am feeling fine and able for the work, of which we get plenty. For instance, we get a 15-mile march, with our full equipment, even rifle and entrenchment spade, which is used in some cases as a shield. We have our new rifles, and everything is ready for the front. I expect when this reaches you we will be in the firing line. Our boys are cool and well drilled. The regulars have not much on us. We are seasoned and in good shape for the front. They say this contingent is a credit to its country. Their discipline is good; only a few have been confined to B. C. for bad behavior or drinking. We are still in tents, with not too many blankets, but this is better than what is in store for us. Just imagine, they are building a hospital for the Canadians at the front. Even that does not make us shrink, as we are prepared for the task. I see the Peterboro boys are at Kingston, but I don't think they will reach the firing line. Maitland Wood, Barney Quinn and Charlie Hastings are in the tent just now, and all are well.

With love and best wishes, from ODLEY.

The committee desires to thank all who have subscribed to this fund and as the proceeds are to be sent in a few days wishes all new subscrptions to be left with the banks as soon as possible. Could we get $500 to send in a lump sum from Peterborough?

DRIVE NO WUNDERWAY

Allied Forces Have Been Testing Strength of Enemy.

Activity Which Prevails all Along the Franco-Anglo-Belgian Lines Indicates That Offensive Planned by Joffre and French for Spring Will Take Place at Once---Allies Well off for Men.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—All along the battle line from Flanders to the Vosges the allies began yesterday to move forward with the immediate object of driving the Germans out of Belgium.

According to information from a highly-placed personage in touch with the War Office, the Kaiser's troops, if this new movement be successful, should be thrown back on their second line in Belgium from Bruges to Courtrai, a distance of 20 miles, within three weeks.

The authority for the information concerning this most important development pointed out that yesterday's attack at Hollebeke is probably only one of the last feeling-out movements begun by Gen. Joffre about ten days ago. From the sea to the Swiss frontier, the allied troops have been sounding out the Germans' strength by small attacks at various points. Evidently the result of this process has been highly satisfactory.

The commanders in the field figure that by their present strategy either Belgium may be freed of the invaders by spring or the Germans be forced to withdraw so many men from the eastern theatre of war that pressure on the Russians will be relieved to such extent that their advance into Germany will be made practically certain. It is believed, according to the same authority that the duration of the war will be shortened by fully three months unless some unforeseen obstacle overthrows their present plan.

In making the change, Generals Joffre and French were actuated largely by the discovery that their estimate of the number of effectives under their command had erred on the right side, as it was too conservative.

The French first-line regiments needed far less time in which to recuperate from the early months of the war than Gen. Joffre had allotted to them, and the men of Kitchener's new army and territorials have shown themselves to be ready for the firing line months before Kitchener had intended to send them to France.

FLEET HELPS LAND FORCES

THE FRENCH STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Dec. 16.—The official communication says: In Belgium, the town of Westend to the northeast of Lombaertzyde has been violently bombarded by the British fleet. The Belgian army has repulsed a counter-attack on St. George's and has occupied farms on the left bank of the Yser. Our troops made progress in the region of St. Eloi. In the region of Arras, in region of Aisne, and in Champagne there have been artillery engagements in course of which we gained distinct advantage at various points. In Argonne there is nothing to report. In the Woevre district, we have repulsed several German attacks in the forest of Mortmare and have retained all trenches occupied by us on 13th of December. In Alsace we have repulsed an attack to the west of Cesnay.

CREW OF TURKISH WARSHIP WAS SAVED.

Amsterdam, Dec. 16.—Telegrams from Constantinople referring for the first time to the torpedoing by the British submarine B11 of the Turkish battleship Messudieh in the Dardanelles, December thirteen, says the warship sank at anchorage and parts of the vessel are still visible above the water. The Messudieh's crew was saved.

PREPARATIONS MADE TO PROTECT WARSAW.

Warsaw, Dec. 16.—Extensive preparations have been made to protect Warsaw against possible German attacks. Reinforcements amounting to five army corps or about two hundred thousand men are arriving here from interior points. Many of these are first line troops with a full contingent of artillery.

BRITISH WARSHIPS WAITING FOR DRESDEN.

Valparaiso, Chile, Dec. 16.—Advices received here from Punta Arenas are to the effect that when the German cruiser Dresden left that port on Sunday evening, warships of the British squadron were waiting on both sides of the Strait of Magellan.

SOCIAL SETTING AND POTENCY OF HIS MINISTRY

Chancellor McCrimmon Addresses Members of the Ministerial Association

The members of the Ministerial Association and their wives enjoyed an intellectual treat at the Y.M.C.A., when Chancellor McCrimmon gave an address. Among other things he said:

Jesus could not content Himself with preaching salvation by faith in Him as a mere psychological process. The social condition of the people appealed to Him, their relief was continually a burden upon His heart. The revolutionary character of any social disease did not turn Him away from it. The Pharasee who thought He did not perceive that the woman was a sinner had a very uncomfortable time of it when He said, "Simon I have somewhat to say unto thee." And proceeded to convict him of haughty indifference in contrast to the affectionate consideration of the woman whose heart once more beat in hope.

No amount of Pharisaic exclusiveness and eloquent preaching will redeem a minister from the charge of hypocrisy if he is too big or too busy to visit and seek to help the very lowest of those within his reach whether they be in the hovel or the jail. Then Jesus while caring for those who were the very outcasts did not neglect the rich and comfortable. He accepted invitations to feasts and functions but never forgot the main purpose of his being in the world.

If the pulpit by the abstractness of its deliverance grows away from the concrete life of the people it will lose its point of contact with them. The gospel is the everlasting gospel but its universality and ubiquitous application depend upon its setting. The preacher must understand his age and the content of the minds of his people. Otherwise the tinge of reality will disappear from the color of his preaching. This does not mean that he is to identify himself with social clubs, trade unions, or some other movement of the times. It does mean that from his own information he is to give reality to his attempt to spread the spirit of brotherhood and by his familiarity with the social movements of the time he is to escape the Scylla and the Charybdis which await him on either hand as he exemplifies his teaching.

Rev. Jas. Rollins occupied the chair. A vote of thanks to Dr. McCrimmon was moved by Mr. A. Mowat, seconded by Judge Huycke. The wives of the ministers supplied and Inspector Mowat in moving the vote of thanks in beautiful language of appreciation, said that people were asking themselves why the churches were losing their influence and the speaker of the evening had given the reason.

There was more need of the "sense of humanity" in Christion work.

DEFEAT IS ADMITTED

Report Confirms Failure of Column From Miawa.

Russian Official Statement Claims Progress in Battles Now Being Waged in Poland---Large German Forces Are Concentrating on Left Bank of Vistula---Enemy Weakening Near Cracow.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 16.—The following official communication has been received from General Headquarters at the front:—

"In the Mlawa region our action continues, and the success gained by our troops has been maintained.

"On the left bank of the Vistula large forces of the enemy are concentrating. In the area adjacent to the river, near Ilow, the presence of several new bodies of the enemy which have just reached our front, has been disclosed. Since the morning of Dec. 14 there has been fierce fighting between Lowicz, the Vistula, and the left bank of the Bzura, and both sides have been alternately on the offensive and defensive. Our troops, however, have been able to make some progress.

"The fighting in the other regions along the whole stretch of the front has been less intense. A marked weakening of the enemy between Czenstochowa and Cracow is reported and in that region the Germans are completing their movements by railway towards the passes of the Carpathians.

"In western Galicia the battle is developing."

According to The Army Messenger, the German attacks along the East Prussian front, which were conducted simultaneously with their offensive in Poland, failed on account of formidable fortifications which the Russians constructed in fields and forests paralleling the German lines.

Austrian columns are pouring over the Dukla passes into Galicia.

The Grand Duke Nicholas records the fact without the slightest comment. The consensus of military opinion fully endorses his attitude of complete equanimity.

The Novoe Vremya understands that German and Austrian subjects, within six months, must sell any real estate they possess in Russia, otherwise it will be sold by public auction or expropriated.

Military observers in London, commenting upon Russia's failure to clear Poland of German troops, dwell upon the fact that even Russia's vast resources in men may continue to prove unavailing unless existing methods of communication are improved. On two occasions Russian forces approaching the German frontier have been driven back by reason of the remarkable system of German railroads, which enables Germany to move her troops expeditiously, and it has been suggested that Russia should begin at once the construction of new transverse lines in Poland and the improvement of existing lines. Temporary lines, it is argued, could be laid at the rate of ten or twelve miles a day.

The London Daily News' correspondent at Petrogard telegraphs:—

"Enormous forces are massed on both sides of a definite position among the slopes and along the winding courses of streams between the Carpathians and Cracow. There also are movements on a considerable scale within the three chief Carpathian passes leading toward the valley of the San.

Reverse Acknowledged.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—A retreat of the German forces which attempted to strike at Warsaw from the north was acknowledged in an official communication given out yesterday at army headquarters. The statement follows:

"The German column which had advanced from Soldau, East Prussia, by way of Mlawa, in the direction of Ciechanow, has had to re-occupy its old positions owing to the numerical superiority of the enemy."

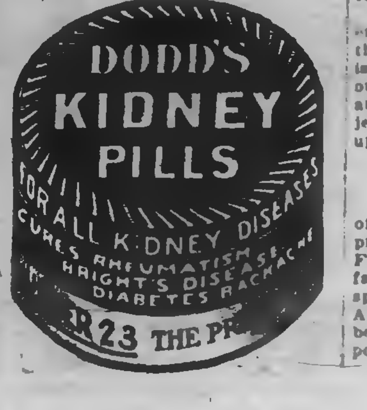
Vancouver Newspaper Bankrupt.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 16.—An application on behalf of F. B. Wintemute, receiver for the debenture holders to wind up The World Printing & Publishing Co. was made before Chief Justice Hunter in the Supreme Court chambers yesterday and adjourned for final argument until Friday.

"The business is hopelessly insolvent. The receiver owes $50,000, and the business gets worse each day. It is quite hopeless," said Douglas Armour, who appeared for the receiver and other debenture holders in objecting to any delay in the winding up.

Cholera Among Prisoners.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 16.—Six cases of cholera are reported among the prisoners held by the Germans at Friedrichsgeld. Two of them were fatal. Determined efforts to stay the spread of the disease are being made. All Russian prisoners in the camp are being segregated in a separate compound.



DRESDEN ESCAPES

But British Cruiser Bristol is in Pursuit

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 16. — An official communication received here from Punta Arenas announces that the German cruiser Dresden left there the day before yesterday (Sunday).

The communication adds that the British cruiser Bristol arrived at Punta Arenas Monday, but left there immediately.

Buenos Ayres despatches on Monday stated that two British cruisers had entered the Straits of Magellan in pursuit of the Dresden. It was believed that the German cruiser would remain in port some time for repairs and would probably be interned.

RAISE FUNDS FOR BELGIANS

King Albert's Book is Contributed to by Many Notables

LONDON, Dec. 16.—King Albert's book will be issued to-day. Already more than a quarter of a million copies are in the hands of the booksellers. Hall Caine is editor of the publication, which has contributions from well-known persons in many nations. The immediate purpose of the book is to raise funds for the Belgian refugees. There is a striking passage in Hon. Joseph Choate's contribution, which says: "Those who were guilty of an awful breach of faith confessed their crime while in act committing it, and pleaded necessity to absolve them from all law, a plea which the whole civilized world would not accept. As neutrals by international law and by our own law, our hands are tied, and will remain so, but our hearts go whither they list."

Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, is a contributor to the book.

Amongst the European contributors are: Premier Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, Lord Kitchener, Henry Bergson, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Hall Caine, Ambassador Jusserand, Rudyard Kipling, Alfred Noyes, Owen Seaman, Pierre Loti, Lord Reading, Earl Rosebery, Cardinal Bourne, the Archbishop of York, Israel Zangwill and William Watson.

Among the Americans are: Ex-President Taft, Cardinal Gibbons, Andrew Carnegie, Joseph Choate, former Ambassador to Great Britain; Lyman Abbott, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Gertrude Atherton, G. Montgomery Flagg, Margaret Deland, Winston Churchill, Charles D. Gibson, Howard Christy, William Dean Howells, Edith Wharton, Harrison Fisher, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Maxfield Parish, E. H. Sothern and Jack London.

Airman Lost His Way.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 16.—A British airman who crossed into Holland and was seized and interned, states that he left Dunkirk on Monday and dropped five bombs on the submarine works at Bruges, afterwards losing his way, owing to a fog and drifting over the border into the Netherlands.

SERIES OF SUCCESSES IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM

Appreciable Advance is Being Made All Along the Western Line Where Allies Have Now Superiority Both in Men and Artillery --- Germans Expected to Retire Stubbornly to New Positions for the Winter.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The offensive movement of the French and British has become general and is being pushed with strong forces, particularly in Flanders, the Argonne, the Woevre and Alsace. While the French claim to have been successful at all points except at Steinbach, in Alsace, the German official report says that the allies' attacks have been unsuccessful at several places.

On the whole, however, it would appear that the allies, who now have a superiority in numbers as well as in artillery, have succeeded in making some progress and have withstood vigorous counter-attacks delivered by the Germans.

The fact that the allies are in possession of Hollebeke, in Flanders, and that heavy fighting was going on again yesterday, shows that they have made an appreciable advance during the past two days, as last week they were being attacked by the invaders two miles to the west of St. Eloy, which is on the Ypres-Armentieres road.

In the Argonne region, the French simply say, "We have made progress and maintained our advance of the preceding days."

The force which has been checked at Steinbach is the left wing of the army which for some time has been fighting its way toward Muhlhausen and which has cleared a considerable part of Alsace of the Germans.

It is evident that while the Germans are prepared to offer stubborn resistance to attempted advances in the regions mentioned in the official communications, they expect the main attack of the allies to be made in another direction, or are themselves preparing for an offensive, for they have gathered considerable forces at Courtrai, from which point they could be quickly transferred either to Flanders or southward across the French frontier.

A defensive as stubborn and unyielding as that presented by the Germans east of the Yser river cannot be said to have crumbled, but the German line is nevertheless slowly drawing back. The corresponding advance by the British and French may be regarded with some dubiety, as it will place the allies in occupation of ground recently held by the Germans, which has been entrenched, fortified and possibly mined to meet attack from the west.

Many rapid movements of troops have been taking place within Belgium recently, which, it is believed can only portend a retirement to newly prepared lines of defence, where the Germans will go into winter quarters.

The following official communication was issued by the French War Office:—

"In Belgium the Franco-Belgian troops have debouched from Nieuport and occupied the line from the outskirts west of Lombaertzyde to the farm of Saint Georges.

"To the south of Ypres we made an attack in the direction of Klein Zillebeke and gained 500 metres, 550 yards.

"In Alsace we continued to hold the heights which dominate Steinbach.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

An official statement was also issued last night by the British War Office. It says:—

"After a period of comparative quiet, the fighting in Northern France has recommenced.

"A combined attack by the allies was made yesterday on the line from Hollebeke to Wytschaete, in Belgium. Several German trenches and a number of prisoners were captured, and substantial progress was made."

THREE KINGS TO CONFER

Rulers of Sweden, Norway and Denmark Meet To-morrow

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 16. — (Via London.)—The meeting of the three kings—Haakon of Norway, Gustav of Sweden, and Christian of Denmark—at Malmo, Sweden, on Thursday on the initiative of King Gustav, will be the first conference of these three Scandinavian monarchs to discuss state affairs since the dissolution of the Duality between Norway and Sweden in 1905.

The newspapers of the three kingdoms are expressing the greatest satisfaction at this evidence that the strained relations between the royal families of Norway and Sweden have come to an end with this holding out of the olive branch by King Gustav.

Clasped Babe's Dead Body.

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 16. — One of the most distressing cases of poverty discovered by charity workers came to light yesterday, when a woman, lying ill on a bundle of straw, was found clasping her dead babe to her breast. The child had died of starvation.

The woman had nothing to eat for days, and there was no fuel in the house from which the furniture had been moved.

Twelve Thousand Boys Enrol.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—Twelve thousand school boys between the ages of 15 and 17 have been enrolled as volunteer recruits in Berlin.

They have been divided into twenty companies, and their military training is proceeding with all possible speed. It is intended that they shall take the field early in the spring.

Many of them by that date will still be under 16 years of age.

People of Warsaw Are Confident

WARSAW, Russian Poland, Dec. 16. — Notwithstanding the proximity of Warsaw to the battle front, the business of the city is proceeding as in times of peace. Although sound of cannonading may be heard at times, Christmas crowds throng the streets. Shops and cafes are decorated gaily, and the holiday spirit has dissipated the gloom of war.

Among every rank and class of society there is supreme confidence that Warsaw cannot be taken by the Germans.

Pulp Mill Burned.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 16. —Fire from an unknown cause broke out in the Thorold Pulp Mill last night, and fanned by stiff wind destroyed the entire plant. The firemen were hampered by the fact that the water supply was shut off for making repairs. The loss is $12,000 to $15,000, partially covered by insurance.

A score of persons were hurt in New York when a stepless car was hit by another on a dangerous crossing.

LIFE IS SAVED BY FIREMEN

Used Pulmotor on Young Man Apparently Dead

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 16. — Michael Mulvehill, aged 20, owes his life to the pulmotor, worked by members of the city fire department. He is a patient at the Hotel Dieu. Yesterday afternoon he was removed to the operating room to undergo an operation for appendicitis. After the anaesthetic had been administered it was found that the young man's heart was too weak to stand it. His respiration stopped for three minutes, and a rush call was given for the pulmotor, which is kept at the fire hall. The work of the pulmotor saved his life, for after working half an hour the firemen succeeded in reviving him. He is out of danger and doing well.

The Duke of Connaught will be here Friday to inspect all the soldiers for overseas service. He will also make a visit to the Royal Military College. Premier Borden is expected here to review the men in the course of a few days.

A Proposition Convener Bond Will Put to Today's Meeting of Intermediate Representatives of This District at Port Hope

Percy Band, convenor for this district is in Port Hope today drawing up the Intermediate schedule. Picton, Belleville, Whitby, Oshawa and Bowmanville were also notified to be present. As this district is being overlapped this year by two other junior groups the arranging of dates is likely to occasion a lot of work.

Mr. Bond informed The Review last night that he intended putting forth every effort to have the first game played in Peterboro with Belleville as apponents on January 1st. At that a better drawing card could not be staged. The "Belles" gave the Petes a great deal of trouble last season.

Seamen Get Increase.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The Board of Trade has decided to award the Liverpool seamen an increase in wages of $2.50 per month.

The question of raising the wages of the seamen was submitted to the Board of Trade for arbitration shortly after the war broke out. The men requested an advance of $5 per month over their old wages, to cover the extra risks of navigation.

COMMENT
As You Like it

BELLEVILLE is as optimistic as ever. An exchange from the railroad villa says:—

Belleville hockey is looking up this season. When the ice is ready at the rink Billy Finkle, manager of the Junior expects to put on a team that will make things hum. Keep your eye on mim.

The Intermediates, under the management of Dr. Clapp are bound to make sports sit and take notice this season. They are a stocky bunch of boys, and after a little training will be ready for work.

JIM SUTHERLAND always has a hockey team in the fullest sense of the word. Perhaps this is why:—

Frontenac seniors are getting in fine shape. They had a splendid workout at the Y.M.C.A. Gym. on Saturday night with a good attendance. They will be in great form for their trip."—Standard.

STAN. TROTTER, convener of the Kingston group of the Junior O.H.A. series will have the representatives of his district meet tomorrow night to draw up the schedule.

WHAT'S THE MATTER with the promoters of the Mercantile League? The president has demonstrated that he possesses no interest but some one else should take the matter up. A city league would go well.

NORM MILLAN, captain of the Frontenac juniors has considerable material for a junior team to represent the city in the O.H.A. series. He is anxiously waiting for ice to try them out and see what they are made of.—Kingston Whig.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

HABIT.

MAN is such a child of habit
If he once performed a thing
Then it comes so very easy,
Just like chasing round a ring.
One cigar will get him going.
And when he has smoked a score
It is all off with reforming.
He's a chimney evermore.

If he gets into the habit
And the way of dropping round
To the corner billiard parlor.
Where congenial souls are found,
And a social visit holds him
He is restless as the tail
Of the busy bright eyed puppy
Or a gentleman in jail.

If he takes a certain paper
He is lost without the sheet.
If a strange hotel he enters
There is nothing there to eat.
If he finds a special barber
Daily in the selfsame place
And to that man's chair gets fitted
No one else can scrape his face.

Thus it is we form our habits,
Bad, indifferent and good,
At the same place every morning
On the same old job saw wood.
In the same old ruts we travel.
Custom holds us on the rack.
If we step aside a minute
We are lost till we get back.

Couldn't Get Used to It.

"I can't like a sleeping car."

"Can't?"

"No."

"Why?"

"The berths are so uncomfortable."

"Yes, they are narrow."

"Narrow! Mercy! I can't feel at home in them. They make me so lonesome. I was raised in a flat."

She Knew.

"Where is the man of the house?" asked the agent.

"Ain't no man of the house," replied the servant girl.

"No man of the house?"

"Nop; the man of the house here is the boss' wife."

Startling.

"And now society is threatened with a new danger."

"What?"

"Fact."

"What is it?"

"Women hold up men armed with hatpins."

SHIP BELLAS IS HELD AS PRIZE

Imperial Tribunal at Ottawa Decides Prize Case

OTTAWA, Dec. 16.—For the first time in the history of the Dominion of Canada a prize court, an Imperial tribunal exercising jurisdiction in time of war, was convened in Ottawa yesterday, with Mr. Justice Cassels of the Exchequer Court sitting as president. The case before the court was one involving the seizure of the ship Bellas by his Majesty's customs officers in the port of Quebec after the declaration of war between Great Britain and the German Empire. The ship's papers disclosed that she was a German ship, constructed of iron and of the net capacity of 850.67 tons. She was built in 1875, and her home port is Hamburg. The registered owners are J. Wimmer & Co.

On Sept. 16 Mr. E. L. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, issued a writ claiming condemnation of the ship and the goods laden therein as "good and lawful prize and as droits of the Admiralty."

An appearance was entered to the writ of Dr. Orlando de Mello de Rego of Lisbon, Portugal, claiming to be owner of the Bellas by sale on July 3rd, 1914.

After evidence had been given by the Customs Collector at Quebec, Eugene N. Chinic, Conrad Bollen, master of the ship, was called in behalf of the Portuguese claimant, and stated that the vessel had been sold thirty days before the outbreak of the war. However, it was brought out that the transfer of the ship had not been completed before seizure, and the president of the court decided that the claim be dismissed with costs, and that the Bellas and cargo be detained during the duration of the war.

Ships May Escape Search.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, advised the State Department yesterday that his Government was willing to forego the exercise of the right of search of vessels carrying cargo from American ports if the shipmasters would confer with the British consuls at the ports of departure and satisfy them as to the neutral character of their cargoes.

The Department yesterday received a note from the French Government stating that France was prepared to give the same assurances as had been given by the British Government in regard to the non-contraband character of American cotton.

To Court-martial Bavarians.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 16. — (Via London.)—A message from Antwerp, says that 80 soldiers, who participated in the recent mutiny among the Bavarian troops garrisoning that city are to be court-martialed.

It is stated that the mutineers broke furniture and many windows in the barracks, attracting a great crowd, which the police were forced to hold back. The soldiers displayed Bavarian flags and decorated the portrait of Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, who is a Bavarian by birth.

YOUNG LADY SHOT IN ARM

School Children Were Drilling for an Entertainment

Kinmount, Dec. 16.—A very distressing accident took place at the school here a few days ago. Mr. M. McCulloch, principal of the school, assisted by a lady friend, were drilling the pupils for a school entertainment which they proposed holding in a week or so. Instead of using something harmless, it seems that guns were permitted. One young lady brought her brother's rifle, and not knowing it was loaded, presented the gun and pulled the trigger. The gun went off, and the ball entered the arm of Miss Maggie Dettman, daughter of Mr. Fred Dettman, of this village. Some time was spent by the doctors probing for the bullet, but without success, so it was thought best to have the patient removed to Toronto hospital. The ball was found and removed, and latest advices were that she was doing as well as could be expected.

WORK IS NOT DONE THE NEED IS GREAT

Correspondent Says There is More Unfed Unwarmed People in City Than in the Last Fifty Years Altogether

Editor Review,

Sir,—The magnificent work which was done recently should not be allowed to rest. The spirit of the town is there but the method of distributing is entirely inadequate. It is not necessary to find fault but unless we will allow many people to starve it is necessary to waken up. It may be said that their wants have not been made known and the wants in the case of many will never be made known. They are too poor, too heart sick and too distressed to make complaint. These are the facts no matter what may be said. Complaints are coming in from kind hearted ladies from all directions that distress is rampant. If the patriotic committee would like further work for their willing hands they can find it by making a thorough canvass of the city. This is no fairy story. There is more unfed, unwarmed people in Peterborough at the present time as an indirect cause of the war, than there has been in the last fifty years altogether. Now this is nobody's fault but it will have to be looked into and looked into at once. The Business Girls' Club has a list of over 280 names of children who are at the present time in actual and urgent need of attention. Cut out the pink teas and the entertainments and go to the houses as sister to sister and brother to brother and see the people. It is a wholly mistaken idea this idea that the work is done. The Patriotic Relief Fund idea is in grave danger of missing its opportunity. The scepticism of a few and the so-called wisdom of some others is going to result and indeed has resulted in an appalling state of affairs. Anybody who wants to know more about it need call on only this organization alone and they will learn enough to convince them that there is even a greater need for visiting than there was for collecting.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

German Cruisers Dash Out Into North Sea and Bombard Coast Towns Not Fortified

REDCAR, YORKSHIRE, Dec. 16. — Heavy firing was heard off the coast here between 8 and 8.20 a.m. today. The forms of three cruisers could be discerned looming out of the haze, and flashes of artillery fire could be easily observed from Redcar. The people of Redcar sought the waterfront, but were driven back from the promenade by the military authorities to a point beyond the zone of danger. It appeared from here as if the hostile warships were attacking forts on Tees Bay. Cannonading was kept up for more than half an hour, when the booming of guns gradually grew less. During the height of the bombardment as many as half a dozen flashes of guns were counted within the space of two minutes.

HULL, ENGLAND, Dec. 16. — Nine persons are reported to have been killed at Hartlepool and a number injured in the bombardment of that port by German cruisers this morning.

WHITBY, YORKSHIRE, Dec. 16. — German cruisers bombarded this town between nine and ten o'clock this morning.

WHITBY, YORKSHIRE, Dec. 16. — Two German cruisers appeared to be about three miles off shore. In the bombardment several persons were injured, and a number of buildings, including the historic abbey, were damaged. One person is reported to have been killed. The cruisers after the bombardment disappeared in a northeasterly direction.

HULL, Dec. 16. — An eye-witness from Scarborough said that a large amount of debris was scattered about the square near the railway station by shell fire. Roofs of houses were torn away, windows broken, and holes were bored entirely through some houses. A huge chimney at the brick works was knocked down. Several shells were fired at the wireless station, with the result unknown.

Foe Attacked Almost Immediately by British

LONDON, Dec. 26. (2.30 p.m.) — The Newcastle Evening Chronicle places the number of German cruisers which bombarded Hartlepool at three. It says these cruisers were attacked almost immediately by four British destroyers. Several entire rows of houses at Hartlepool were destroyed, and the gas works were seriously damaged. This newspaper says: "It is believed that several persons were killed or wounded."

HARTLEPOOL, Dec. 16. — Many business premises and private houses were wrecked here by the German shells.

No Reliable Estimates of the Casualties

HULL, ENGLAND, Dec. 16. — It is reported here that word had ben received that an attack by Germans was contemplated, and that consequently the authorities were in readiness to meet it. The coast defences had been thoroughly prepared, and all units of infantry and artillery were at their stations and in trenches. Up to 3 o'clock this afternoon no reliable estimates of the casualties were available.

SCARBOROUGH, Dec. 16. — Just before daylight broke, a vessel of the cruiser type was observed off Scarborough. The warship came in close, and for half an hour threw shell after shell into the town, doing considerable damage. A woman behind a counter in a shop was killed instantly, and her husband was wounded. The ruins of the shop tumbled down about them. Forty or fifty shells were thrown, the objective of the German gunners apparently being the town hall, which was slightly damaged. Other property suffered much more severely, and at places the streets are filled with wreckage. During the bombardment the vessel steamed slowly past the town and finally disappeared in the haze. After she had been lost sight of the sound of her guns was heard for some time.

HULL, Dec. 16. — Fugitives reaching here from Scarborough say that the German bombardment was heavy and great damage was done. A morning train from Scarborough to Hull brought many passengers who left Scarborough when the shelling commenced. A railroad man has wired his wife here from Scarborough, saying: "Shells are falling thickly around me, but I am all right."

British flotillas have been engaged with the enemy at several points, however, and at noon the situation was described by the Admiralty as "Developing." It could not be ascertained at first whether this German attack was designed merely to spread panic among British people, or whether its purpose was to engage the British fleet in a general action, or to act as an escort in an attempt to land troops on the British coast.

Neither Scarborough nor Hartlepool are fortified.

Every Evening (Sundays and Holidays Excepted) at 4 O'Clock

PARIS, Dec. 17---The official statement this afternoon says: "Between the Sea and the Lys we have occupied several German trenches at the point of the bayonet; We have consolidated our positions at Lombaertzyde and St. George's and organized the territory taken from the enemy to the West of Gheluvelt. We have made progress at some points in the region of Vermelles and our artillery has done good work on the Aisne, in Champagne, in the Argonne and near Verdun."

CANUCK FORCE MAY BE USED IN COAST DEFENCE

This Rumor Was Heard at Camp of Canadians at Salisbury

Corporal H. E. Carpenter, who is with the Canadians at Salisbury, writes to his mother as follows:—

Here I am sitting with a candle in front of me, trying to write a few lines while the piano is humming and the bugle sounding defaulters. Our colonel, Colonel Watson, has erected a big tent for a recreation room and has provided reading material, an oil stove and a piano. The latter is played from reveille until the last post. It is a great treat to sit around the stove reading and enjoying the music.

The rain has stopped and we are getting cold weather, cold enough to freeze the drinking water in our tents. The quartermaster sergeant has issued an extra blanket to keep us warm. Each man has four blankets and a straw mattress. I generally wind myself up in the blankets and get into a big tent bag.

Every day this week the battalion is going out on rout marches in marching order. Today we left at 9 a.m. and returned at 2 p.m. and have since been idle. We have a bugle band now and you should see us march. I wish Peterboro could see the old second march up George Street. The church service yesterday was held in the tent and one of the boys played the piano.

I have not seen Howard Curtis since we left Valcartier. His battalion is at Bedford in new huts. Six men from our company are there building huts, supposed to be for us but I guess not. There is a rumor that we are going to some town on the east coast, for coast defence. We shall go into barracks there or else be billeted. There seems no possible chance to get to France till spring.

Saturday afternoon is half holiday here so three of us went to a village called Netheravon and spent the afternoon and evening. It is four miles from camp over the plains.

HYDRO RATES IN THIS CITY

All over 100 K.W. hours — 0.5 cents per K.W.

According to a communication received sometime ago by the Peterboro Utilities Commission the rate for the first thirty hours for Peterboro has been set at 6 cents per K.W. As yet no communication to the contrary has been received.

EXCITEMENT HAS SUBSIDED, THE PEOPLE CALM

Precaution Has Been Taken by Authorities in Coast Towns --- Number of Aliens Are Rounded up by the Police

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 17. — News of the raid by German cruisers was promptly sent to military authorities in all coast towns, and steps taken by the mayor of Tynemouth indicate a general state of preparedness for eventualities. He immediately ordered the gas supply turned off, instructed the police to round up a large number of aliens, and has issued a proclamation advising the population that in the possible event of a bombardment, there was no occasion for them to leave the town, but that if it did become necessary, notice would be given. The people are advised to remain indoors.

One London newspaper telegraphed mayors of east coast towns asking what effect the enemy's visit had had, and replies all indicated a state of calmness existing.

Hull replied: "Excitement over; raid soon subsided. We have full confidence in the navy."

Great Yarmouth: "We have taken all necessary precaution; the people are quite calm."

Harwich: "The city is calm and normal."

Lowestoft: "The raid has not affected our nerves; we are prepared for any contingency."

SAYS GERMAN CRUISERS WERE DAMAGED.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The Daily Telegraph's Hartlepool correspondent says that the enemy's ships were damaged by coast batteries, and one light cruiser was afire as the squadron steamed away north.

GREAT SATISFACTION FELT IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, Dec. 17.— Newspapers express great satisfaction over the exploit of the German cruisers. The Berliner Tageblatt says: "Again our naval forces, facing the danger of scattered mines, shelled English fortified places." The Boersen Zeitung says: "The bombardment is possibly a herald of greater events."

MARINE INSURANCE PREMIUMS REDUCED.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The Government today announced further reductions in marine insurance premiums under the war risks insurance scheme.

PTOMAINE POISONING AMONG TROOPS.

AUSTRIANS CLAIM RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE HAS BROKEN DOWN

BERLIN, Dec. 17. — The official press bureau says the Austrian general staff reports that 31,000 Russians have been taken prisoners in West Galicia, and that the Russian offensive against Silesia and Posen has completely broken down. In Northern Poland Tuesday and yesterday the bravery of the West Prussian Hessian regiments gained a victory, the importance of which cannot yet be estimated.

BUSINESS IMPROVING IN PARIS.

PARIS, Dec. 17. — For the fourth time since the war began, financial settlements have been postponed, the moratorium having been extended two months. Business appears to be better than at any time since war began, both in production and in trade, and more coin is in circulation.

CAPTAIN J. H. FESSENDEN IS PROMOTED TO MAJOR

News has reached his parents here of the promotion of their son, Capt. J. H. Fessenden, to the rank of major in the British army service corps. Major Fessenden will be easily remembered by many of the older residents of Peterboro, who have watched with interest his steady rise in the army. He is the son of Mr. Cortez Fessenden, of the Collegiate Institute. He graduated from the Peterboro Collegiate, later going through the Royal Military College, Kingston. Major Fessenden's ability after his enlistment in the British army was quickly recognized and promotions followed. He has seen considerable active service, part of it in the present war, when he was in the battle of Mons and the subsequent retreat. His elevation to the rank of major will be heartily endorsed by his numerous friends in this city.

Mr. Vivian Fessenden, a younger brother, who went through the local High School, and was a student at the R. M. C., is now with the Canadian troops at Salisbury Plain.

BOARD OF TRADE GETS LETTER FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Canadian Trade Commissioner Writes From Buenos Aires

In a lengthy communication to the Board of Trade, H. R. Pousette, Canadian Trade Commissioner, writing from Buenos Aires, South America, asks about possibilities of interesting Peterborough manufacturers in trade with foreign countries.

A suggestion contained in the letter is that boards of trade might perform a useful service in bringing together several manufacturers in one town or neighboring towns to share the expense of sending a representative to foreign markets where it would be beyond the means of any one to do so rightly.

The communication has been fyled.

ENGLAND IS ASTIR AS NEVER BEFORE SINCE WAR BEGAN

Entire Machinery of Home Defence Put in Motion as Another Raid is Expected --- Attack on Coast Towns Had Assistance of Spies

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 17. — Bristling with wrath and resentment at yesterday'st attack on unfortified towns, England is astir today as never before since war was declared . Another raid is confidently expected, and the entire machinery of home defence has been put into motion.

On the east and southeast coast, emergency committees are at work, while in London plans are under way to organize a national guard of men too old for military service. Although a raid on London seems remote, yesterday's episode drove home the realities of war as nothing else could. Arrangements have been made at Deal and Dover to expedite the removal of the civilian population in case of an attack. These measures are primarily to forestall any panic or congestion on the roads and railroads, which might impede military movements.

Except in the hospitals and bereaved homes, the towns attacked yesterday had resumed a normal appearance today. Everywhere the sound of hammering was heard, as workmen repaired damage. The belief is general that the Germans had able assistance from spies. Not a single incoming vessel at any east coast port saw the German ships.

MAJORITY OF VICTIMS, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The majority of the victims at Hartlepool were women and children. Fifteen school boys were killed by a single shell, only one boy in the group escaping. Ten persons were killed by the collapse of a building in which they had taken shelter. One shell damagged a building five miles from the shore.

PASSENGER BOAT ONE OF THREE SUNK BY MINES

Three Steamers Lost in the North Sea, off Flamborough --- All Traffic is Stopped Indefinitely

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

SOUTH SHIELDS, Dec. 17. — Three steamers, one believed to be a passenger vessel, were sunk by mines in the North Sea off Flamborough Head last night. Only one has so far been identified. This is the steamer Elterwater. Twelve of her crew were saved and seven lost.

Casualties on the other ships have not yet been determined, but it is reported that the crew and passengers of the passenger vessel were seen taking to their boats.

The Admiralty has announced that all traffic between Flamborough Head and Newcastle must be stopped indefinitely.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The steamer Princess Olga bound for Aberdeen struck a mine off Scarborough last night and went down, but her crew of eighteen escaped in their own boats. All naturalized Germans in Sunderland were arested last night according to an Exchange Telegraph Co. despatch.

SEVEN WOMEN ARE KILLED

Casualties at Scarborough Include Prominent Residents

SCARBOROUGH, Eng., Dec. 17.—(Via London.)—The casualties in Scarborough as a result of the attack by German warships yesterday morning include among the killed, John Hall, a prominent alderman; Alfred Beale, a postman; Mrs. Bennett and two children; Mrs. Merryweather and Mrs. Tetrow, all well-known residents of the city; two unidentified women, a housemaid, a young woman named McIntyre, and a boy belonging to a family of the working class.

The town was aroused by firing about eight o'clock. German warships accompanied by a trawler had come into the south bay under cover of a mist.

There was a lull in the firing at a quarter past eight and then the shooting began again more sharply. Women and children took the first train from the station.

AUTHORITIES DO NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH GIRL

What to do with Margaret Duncan who is lodged in the court house jail is a problem confronting the authorities. During the last few months this young girl has had an interesting career, which wound up by her arrest on a charge of vagrancy. She appeared before the Police Magistrate about one month ago, who sent her to the jail. It is understood that such quarters are not exactly suited to her needs, and the authorities are confronted with the problem as to what disposition to make of her case.

The girl is comparatively young, and worked in the capacity of domestic and waitress in Toronto and Peterboro homes and hotels, finally marrying a young man who is at present working on an Omemee farm, and, it is said, has failed to fulfil the vows he made at the altar.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1914

SHOWS IGNORANCE OF THE SUBJECT.

THE TORONTO STAR published the following editorial on Tuesday:

> "In reviewing the third volume of a 'Life of Disraeli,' the Spectator mentions as a very good example of his prophetic insight the promptness with which he swooped on the ultimate meaning of Prussia's Danish policy. He predicted that 'it meant a challenge to British naval power,' and that was more than sixty years ago.'
> But Disraeli was not at all times a prophet. If 1914 has seen one of his predictions come true, this year has seen another triumphantly refuted. In 1852 he wrote: 'These wretched colonies will all be independent, too, in a few years, and are a millstone round our necks.'
> He did not foresee the part those colonies were destined to play when, in due time, Prussia was ready to challenge British power. He must have quite misjudged the effect that self-government would have in Canada."

The above editorial, in its haste to cast aspersion on one of Britain's greatest statesmen, solely, we presume, for his strong Conservative principles, shows either a lamentable ignorance of the life of Disraeli, or else the suppression of truth or facts to bolster up an argument of a mean, partizan character. That Disraeli made the two assertions or predictions is true, but, like many another famous political leader, he had occasion to change his views. The changes of time, a knowledge of facts not previously known or understood by him, enlightenment, were perfectly just and natural causes for a change of views. In fact, he who never changes is, sooner or later, a fossil.

Disraeli, who had no feeling for the colonies in 1852, lived to inaugurate his great imperial policy in 1874. Disraeli was the first English statesman who really believed in the British Empire, who spoke authoritatively about it, and gave it concreteness by formulating his forward policy of Imperial Consolidation. Mystic, brilliant orator, and man of phrases, as he was, he performed, in his later years, a great imperial service. The old insular view of 1852 had definitely given place to a conservative imperial policy, which felt the vigor of new and far-flung domains. When, in the Afghan troubles, in which Germany was deeply interested, England feared for India, Disraeli, or, as he had become, Lord Beaconsfield, declared in the House of Lords: "But, gentlemen, the key to India is not Herat; the key to India is London." That was a splendid way of symbolizing the reality of the British Empire in a single, strong sentence, and it applies as much to Canada as India.

Thus, Disraeli did foresee something of what the Empire was to become. In 1874 the Overseas Dominions were not the outstanding countries they are today. The great expansion in commerce, the building of prosperous railroads and lines of steamships, the influx of immigrants, have been features of their history and growth since Disraeli's time. But, in any event, Disraeli ceased to regard the colonies as millstones, as did many other Englishmen. He did more; he foresaw a great empire, strong and united in the hour of danger.

DE WET'S CASE.

THE HAMILTON HERALD thinks the English newspapers that have been calling for the execution of De Wet are going beyond their sphere of influence and do not show good judgement in doing so. The Herald says, in part:

> "Christian De Wet has earned the fate of the traitor. His guilt is worse than it would have been if he had led an armed revolt against the government of the South African Union in time of peace. He waited until the Empire was at war and South Africa was in danger of invasion by the King's enemies before becoming himself an enemy of the King to whom he had sworn allegiance, and leading a revolt against the King's Government. There was never a clearer case of treason than his.
>
> It is difficult to see how De Wet can escape condemnation and sentence of death. But we do not believe that the Botha Government will allow sentence to be executed upon him. To do so would be, politically, inexpedient. The execution of the Boer leader would transform him into a hero and a martyr, and would serve to sanctify in the minds of many Boers the cause for which he died. Associating the idea of revolt against the Empire with their hero, rebellion would come to be regarded almost as a patriotic duty. De Wet dead would become a more potent force for mischief than De Wet living has been.
> Botha and his chief lieutenant Smuts are shrew, cool-headed statesmen, and they are not likely to allow their enemy De Wet the honours of martyrdom. Exile, more likely, will be his lot banishment to St. Helena for the few years he has yet to live. This would be the most sensible way of disposing of him."

The truth is that the English newspapers are not alone in what they demand. De Wet's case has been discussed by many newspapers in Canada, and, we suppose, his case has not escaped notice in the United States and in the Overseas Dominions other than Canada. Several have pointed out why De Wet's execution is necessary. In fact, the Herald admits that his case demands his execution, but thinks expediency calls for a tempered sentence. It does, in one sense, so far as the Boer population is concerned, but not so far as the English population of the Union of South Africa is considered, and that population is by far the larger of the two. However, we think even the Boer population must be impressed with the power of English law, which is made to be kept, not broken. De Wet's case, on the evidence we have, does not call for leniency or compromise. It is a clear instance where the course of law should be followed to the letter.

THE CANADIAN FARMERS' RESPONSE.

THAT THE FARMERS of Canada are making a magnificent response to the call from Europe and from the Canadian Government to plant as much land as possible for next year's crop seems to be borne out by the data received by the Government. In dealing with this question, the Stratford Herald said recently:

> "Forty-eight per cent. more land has been prepared for crop next spring than in any previous year, according to Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works. The information on which the statement was based appears in a special report on farming conditions, by Mr. Bruce Walker, of the Interior Department. Two million bushels of seed wheat, of barley and of oats, or six million bushels in all, have been purchased to provide farmers with sufficient seed grain next spring.
> This is part of Canada's splendid response to the demand for agricultural produce. The 1915 crop, with favorable weather conditions, should surpass our previous crops by between fifty and one hundred per cent., counting the inevitable increase of acreage which will be plowed next spring. The 1915 crop will probably be sold at higher prices than have been obtained in the history of Canada, and the receipts will swell the credit of our national ledger."

LEAVE IT TO PROVINCIAL POLICE.

LEAVE that Whitby case to the Provincial Police. When they have fiddled away considerable time and found out nothing, some poor fellow may surrender himself and confess. Ontario's new Premier, Hon. W. H. Hearst, will do well to take a hand in the Attorney-General's Department. Look at the Tamworth case, the Moyes case, the murder cases in Hamilton, all works of art of the Provincial Police. The evidence is convincing, and the people of this Province look for something being done in the forthcoming session of the Provincial Legislature.

The Nation and the War.

(London Times.)

We are glad to see fresh signs in many quarters that people are beginning to awaken, not only to the gravity of the actual struggle in the field, but to the consequences which depend upon it. We ourselves have never underrated either. The struggle is the greatest we have ever waged, and our all depends upon success. When it began, the rush of recruits was so great that the authorities were unable to deal with it. They could not, with the machinery then at their disposal, house, equip, arm and train the numbers who responded to the summons. They deliberately damped down the enthusiasm of the nation. Now that they have adapted their organization to the requirements of war on so vast a scale, repression of that kind is no longer needed. Young men of all classes and of all callings are quite ready to come forward, but they are not quite sure that they are really wanted, or that the foreign service for which they are wanted is really service for the defence of their own homes.

This uncertainty and this ignorance, we are convinced, are very largely due to the want of public information about what is really happening in the field. The temper of our people is such that news of a reverse brings men flocking to the colours. So does the news of a great danger undergone. So does the news of some heroic deed. We already see that the account of the gallant conduct of the London Scottish which we were able to print is bringing abundance of applicants for enrollment in that famous corps. We all remember the rush to the Gordons after Dargai, and to the 21st Lancers after Omdurman. So it has ever been in our history, and so it will ever be. No steps are too strong to prevent a foolish kind of war correspondence which has sometimes been too common in the past. But, while injudicious attempts to make or mar the reputation of individual officers and other extravagances and indiscretions of that sort are to be deprecated, we cannot but think that the spirit of the nation suffers from the meagreness and the lateness of war news. What reason can there be why each country should not know the fortunes and the deeds of its own regiments?

The grateful letters which pour in upon us after the publication of Mr. John Fortescue's historical articles prove how dearly such a record is welcomed. Why should it deal with ancient history only? There is something grotesque in the necessity imposed upon us of having to feed our recruits with tales of heroism drawn from the campaigns of Marlborough and of Wellington, when we are actually engaged in the greatest and most momentous war of all times. We have not the least doubt of the spirit of our people. It is what it has always been. That is being shown daily in the field. But we submit that the Government are not trusting and using that spirit as they ought to do, and that only by trusting and using it can they "fill up the gaps" and "fling fresh forces into the fray."

ELECTIONS BY ACCLAMATION.

Editor Review.

Sir,—It is all very well for Mr. H. Rush to suggest in a plausible manner the return of the present members of our various boards of administration by acclamation. It may be the hand of Esau but it is the voice of Jacob. Mr. Rush may be the spokesman for the coterie which is trying to run, if not to ruin our city through incapacity or selfishness, but he does not represent the free and independent electorate. The alluring bait of the alleged saving of a few hundred dollars where millions of dollars of property are involved, will not down with the taxpayers who have to fear the burden of incompetency or self aggrandizement imposed upon them. If the present incumbents are so anxious to save the paltry sum under such a pretext, let them step down and out and give way to others who would be more acceptable all around. Mr. Rush must not think that we are living in Germany and that he is the Kaiser pro tem. Give us freedom or give us death. The Augean stables must be cleaned out. Some of our representatives are honestly serving the best interests of the public and no doubt will not be opposed in whose case there will be no further expense. At best, only part of the expense can be saved, for where there is no election the advertising and other preliminary expenses must be incurred. A three years' term in office is too serious a matter to be lightly dealt with. In that time incalculable harm may be done before the electorate could bring to bear their heavy siege guns upon the offenders at the next election. Our free British institutions must not be subordinated to the wishes of any man or set of men.

Yours truly,
LIBERTY.

Dec. 17th, 1914.

LET THE PEOPLE DECIDE.

Editor Review,

Sir,—I have noticed in the press of this city, recently, that there is a movement on foot to re-elect by acclamation the present mayor and council, suggested by Mr. Harry Rush.

While Mr. Rush may have his own ideas on the subject, I think "the people" should also have something to say. The saving of five to seven hundred dollars is nothing, if the taxpayer is going to have as we have had, more in thousands wasted.

Re-elections by acclamation may be or may not be all right, but for the sake of saving (?) a few hundred dollars the city's business, "That is very serious business" should not be placed in the hands of incompetents.

Now is the time for the citizens to ask.

Farmer's Fruit Cake

Soak 3 cups of dried apples over night in cold water enough to swell them. Chop fine in the morning and put them in a granite pan with 3 cups of molasses. Cook until soft; add 1 cup of seeded raisins cut in pieces—allow mixture to cool; sift 3 cups of flour with 1 even teaspoon of soda. One cup of soft butter (do not melt), mix butter into apple and molasses mixture.

Beat all together until well blended. Add 3 eggs one at a time beating well as each is added. A half of nutmeg grated, or spice to taste. Add flour and soda, beat well, put in well-greased pan with tube in centre and bake one hour in moderate oven.

A SOLDIER'S EQUIPMENT

When the British soldier goes on active service his outfit is very different from that which he wears in times of peace. A war outfit is severely practical. Everything ornamental ruthlessly goes by the board.

While wagons are provided for spare kits, in the field the soldier has to carry nearly all his wardrobe. Although the men may "grouch" at the weight of their arms and equipment, it is nothing compared to the loads carried by Continental troops. The French, Belgian, and Russian soldiers are not only burdened with heavy knapsacks, but they also have to fight in their greatcoats.

Every member of the British Expeditionary Force wears an "identification disc." This is a small circular piece of aluminum suspended round the neck by a cord.

Other items of active service kit which the soldier always has on his person are a field dressing packet and an emergency ration. The field dressing packet consists of a cotton bandage, a pad of gauze, and a safety-pin; and the emergency ration contains a small quantity of compressed meat and vegetables.

War equipment is officially divided into two classes—"personal" and "regimental." Under the former heading come the belts, arms, ammunition, and accoutrements that the soldier carries with him in the field. Regimental equipment means additional clothing, blankets, tents, saddlery rations, forage, etc., and the necessary transport wagons to convey such stores. Until actually wanted, regimental equipment is kept in camp.

Tents, blankets, and spare kits are also carried in baggage wagons.

An officer's field-service kit is a good deal larger than a private soldier's. The principal items are the following: Service jacket, trousers, breeches, greatcoat, drab shirt, puttees, "Sam Browne" belt, haversack, water-bottle, lanyard and whistle. Most officers who know what campaigning means will add certain extras. Among such are a knitted jersey or sweater, a money belt, spare shirts, socks, and handkerchiefs, a tin of dubbin, a sleeping cap, a small medicine case, and a "housewife." This last item is very necessary, as socks and shirts wear out very quickly on the march and have to be constantly repaired.

An officer also wants a certain amount of camp equipment in the field. These various items are divided into "war-kit" and "field-kit." The former consists of a sleeping-bag, cork mattress, blanket-bag, pillow, and bucket, and costs about $32.50. A flask, aluminum cup, brush and comb and shaving tackle, etc., are other desirable adjuncts. The "war-kit" is rather more elaborate, as it includes such articles as a mirror, basin, bath, bedstead, sheets, lantern, canteen, hold-all, and small tent. The two kits together cost from $60 to $75.

"SISTER SUSIE SEWS SHIRTS"

Women Have a Marching Song Which Delights the Soldiers

Sister Susie's sewing shirts for soldiers—
Such skill at sewing shirts our shy young sister Susie shows!
Some soldiers send epistles—say they'd rather sleep on thistles
Than the saucy soft short shirts for soldier sister Susie sews.

A Canadian returning home from Liverpool brought the chorus of a song now popular in England. The song, the music of which has a marching swing similar to that of "Tipperary," is sung wherever women gather to make clothing for the men at the front. In fact, so popular has it become that whenever recruits marching to and from their training camps start their "Tipperary" women on the sidewalk sing "Sister Susie," greatly to the delight of every one in hearing distance.

The Pearl Scarfpin

It Proved a Dead Giveaway.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Jack Herkimer was a very pleasant fellow. He was popular with both men and women. Flaxen haired, blue eyed, a boyish face on a massive figure, good natured, careless of everything except the feelings of others, he drew about him so many friends that he found it difficult to avoid distressing them from an inability to accept and return all the favors they lavished upon him.

One day Jack was sitting in a street car when a young lady got in. She sat for a few moments oblivious to the fact that persons are not expected to ride in street cars for nothing, then made a dive for her portmanteau, supposed to be contained in the bag she carried. There was a succession of dives, each more spasmodic than the last; then she arose and started to leave the car without stopping it.

Jack interposed. "Pardon me," he said, placing himself in front of her, lifting his hat and smiling benignly; "if you are without change for your fare I will pay it for you. There is no need to get off."

He held in his hand a quantity of large change and picked out a nickel from among the coins. The young lady, apparently reassured, refrained from her attempt to commit suicide for the want of 5 cents and sat down. But she was still too flustered to thank Jack for the loan. The conductor received the fare, passed on, and the young lady sat trying to regain her equanimity. Presently a thought struck her all of a sudden. It was that it behooved her to make some arrangement for the payment of the debt. She was a young woman and had not the experience adequate to the occasion.

"How am I to—to get it back to you?" she asked Jack.

"There's no need to get it back to me at all," he replied, with that winning smile of his. "But if you insist upon doing so"— He hesitated. He would have liked to add, "I'll call for it if you'll give me your address," but it occurred to him that if the young lady did not consider this taking an advantage of her youth there were doubtless members of her family who would, so he finished the sentence by giving his own address, at the same time begging her not to take the trouble to return so small an amount.

By this time the girl had so far recovered her composure as to say, "Thank you very much." She would have liked to return Jack's smile, for it was catching, but she was only sixteen years old and had been brought up to give no encouragement to a stranger.

Jack, who was feasting his eyes on her beauty, passed far beyond the point where he had intended to leave the car. When the girl arose to alight she was apparently in doubt whether or not it would be proper for her to nod an adieu to the handsome young fellow who had befriended her. She decided in the negative, and Jack, who was about to go out before her in order to hand her off the step, sat still. The episode was ended, but left a very pleasant sensation in the young man's breast.

That night when Jack went to sleep he was paying the girl's fare again and again and assuring her that a nickel was of no consequence and she must not think of returning it to him.

The next day Jack received an envelope addressed in a man's handwriting containing a bit of paper and postage stamps to the amount of 5 cents. On the paper within in the same hand as the address was the word "Thanks." Evidently the girl's father or brother had taken the matter off her hands. Jack felt sorry. He had hoped to receive from the young lady something that would have given him the semblance of an excuse to take another step toward an acquaintance. This return of his loan by one other than the creditor herself ended the matter. And in a week Jack, who had bouquets of smiles thrown at him from pretty girls, forgot all about it.

One day a little box, addressed in a feminine hand, came for Mr. Herkimer by post. Jack was the recipient of so many favors from young ladies that he naturally supposed it to be from some girl with whom he was "spoons." He did not recognize the handwriting, but quite often his favorers who wished to conceal their identity had addressed him through an amanuensis, and he thought nothing of it. Opening the box, he found nestling in cotton a scarfpin set with a single pearl.

Jack ran over all the girls to whom he had recently made love—that is, all he could remember—with a view to getting a clew as to the sender. He formed an opinion that she was one of three, but he could not tell which one. He would await developments, being well aware that no woman was likely to so favor him without in due time getting credit for her gift. Whenever he met a suspect he would put out feelers with a view to testing her as to whether she had sent the scarfpin. But week after week passed and there was no clew. Jack wore his pearl ornament for several years, studying the face of every woman who fixed her eyes upon it, hoping for a betrayal, but found no one who gave any indication whatever that she had bestowed the favor.

One September day Jack, who had gone to Europe with the American summer hegira, was in a compartment of a railway carriage in Germany on his way to Hamburg when an elderly man handed a lady into the car, then got in himself. The girl was a beauty, and it seemed to Jack that he had seen her before. It was some time before the gentleman got his hand baggage stowed away in the racks and the lady had settled herself in her seat. Then she looked about among her fellow passengers. Jack from the time he had received the mysterious scarfpin had never worn any other. He saw the girl's eyes hovering upon him and finally light on the ornament. Immediately the blood left her cheeks, then rushed back a crimson flood.

There was no more doubt in Jack's mind that the young lady was the donor of the scarfpin than that she was present before him. But who was she? Certainly not one with whom he had been on intimate terms. He was quite young enough to remember faces, especially of those with whom he had an acquaintance. But no racking of his brain served to bring forth the identity of this lady who had sent him an anonymous gift. And yet something had passed between them, for he was sure he had seen her before.

The train was an express and connected. As soon as it was well under way the conductor came through for tickets, and the first person he approached in the compartment was the young lady in question, who referred him to the gentleman who accompanied her.

If it were not for suggestion our world would be a very dull one. Seeing the girl ask for her ticket brought back to Jack Herkimer a picture of her when, three years younger, she had started to leave a street car in America for lack of fare. The riddle was solved. She had rewarded him for what she doubtless considered a favor of importance, sending the reward anonymously.

Jack was a man of quick resource. What he would do flashed upon his brain with electric rapidity. He began to fumble in his pockets for his ticket—that is, in every pocket except where it was. The conductor stood before him, waiting. Jack continued the search until, pretending that the ticket was not forthcoming, he said to the conductor in the only language he knew, English:

"I've lost my pocketbook, with my money and my ticket as well."

Naturally, every eye in the compartment was turned to the unfortunate man, the girl's included. She was not the unsophisticated creature she had been when Jack had paid her fare, and it did not take long for her to become aware that he was enacting this scene on her account. To conceal a smile she turned her face to the window.

"You are an American, are you not, sir?" said the young lady's companion.

"I am."

"If you will tell me what you require I will be happy to oblige you."

"I need only my fare to Bremen, where I will take steamer for home."

"In that case the matter is simple. I sail on the Crown Princess tomorrow morning."

"I go by the same steamer. I have the documents by which to obtain all I need from the purser."

The gentleman paid Jack's fare. Jack asked for his name and address and was given a card bearing the name of Farnsworth. Then the passengers, having lost all interest in the matter, settled down to their various ways of passing the time. There was one person who, not being deceived by this audacious imposture, continued to look through the window at the scenery as though she would not lose any of it for a fortune. At last she turned, but carefully abstained from meeting the gaze of the unfortunate man who had lost his valuables.

Americans abroad come at once to a friendly footing. Jack Herkimer was profuse in his thanks to Mr. Farnsworth and, taking a seat opposite him, talked about everything he could think of, expatiating especially on that confidence those born under the stars and stripes have in one another, and so ingratiated himself into the favor of the old gentleman that the latter at last said, "Permit me to introduce you to my daughter, Mr."—

"Herkimer. I am John Herkimer of Troy, N. Y."

That was the trying moment of Miss Farnsworth's life. She felt a great impulse to fix her eyes on Jack's scarfpin, and Jack threw open his coat that she might get a good view of it. A half vexed, half amused smile played over her features like a fitful breeze among flowers. Jack gave no outward sign of ever having met her before, but there was a happy triumph within that was as plain to Miss Farnsworth as it was unobservable to the others present.

As soon as the steamer was reached Jack, after a pretended visit to the purser, paid his indebtedness and tipped the head steward to put him at table beside the Farnsworths. After such adventures with a young lady and a week's voyage ahead of them it would be absurd to suppose that the principal actors would cross the Atlantic ocean without a love affair. Indeed, the gift of the scarfpin made it plain to Jack that a conquest had been made long before, and he found lovemaking dead easy. Fortunately he had found a girl he wanted and, as he expressed it, "wanted her bad." An engagement occurred on the steamer, and the wedding followed in due course of time.

Miss Genevieve Clark, Who Originated Plan to Boom Cotton.

MISS GENEVIEVE CLARK.

The clever and attractive daughter of Speaker Champ Clark gave the stimulus to the nation wide movement to promote the sale of cotton and thus help southern cotton growers, mill workers and people generally.

Miss Clark originated the idea for the cotton fashion show in Washington. Also she suggested the plan of the nation wide bargain day sale of cotton goods. Her ingenuity has done much to popularize cotton goods and promote their sale.

In a recent interview Miss Clark said:

"It has been said that no person can live so that his life only affects himself, and so, while this problem is essentially the problem of the south, it affects the northern section of our country by eliminating $400,000,000 spent annually by southern cotton growers in the north.

"It has been said by the business men of the country, who understand the financial situation, that there is no real lack of money in this country; that the trouble lies in the fact that people, anticipating a stringency, are holding on to what they have. Thus should this idea of a great nation wide bargain sale in cotton appeal to 10,000,000 women, each buying $1 worth of cotton materials on a certain day would put in circulation $10,000,000 of the hoarded gold, as most hoarded money is in gold, and to that extent alleviate the stringency.

"The cotton factories of the country are at this time putting out only about one-half of the materials that they are equipped to turn out. The reason for this is that the merchants will not buy any more cotton materials until they have sold what they have on hand.

"All the women of Europe, to meet the crisis which they have had to face, have gone in training for hospital and commercial service. If the women of America by using more cotton can avert this crisis it is certainly their patriotic duty to do so."

One of the most charming and popular girls of the younger set in Washington, Miss Clark is also clever and energetic. There is no doubt that in her cotton has a valuable champion.

WHEN PAPERING WALLS.

Artistic and Simple Papers Are the Most Useful and Satisfactory.

The following in regard to papering are useful facts to remember: Choose a ceiling paper with a small design in silver, which is almost invisible when put on. The plain pulp ceiling paper does not wear as well and will not clean satisfactorily. It does not pay to calcimine a ceiling over paper if durability is desired.

For side walls an oatmeal paper in tan, taupe or putty color is inexpensive, artistic and it has splendid wearing qualities, as it fades very little if any and makes an excellent background for pictures as well as harmonizes with any color of rugs, draperies and upholstering. This paper is wide and is 30 cents a roll. Being heavy it covers poor walls much better than a thinner quality, as cracks and defects are not visible.

For sanitary reasons new paper should never go on over old. A thorough soaking and a good scraper will remove the old very quickly, and if the good man of the house has time he may do it and save the time of a professional workman.

ECONOMY HINTS.

Reducing Gas Bill by Cooking and Heating Irons at the Same Time.

When ironing over a gas flame it has been found decidedly economical to use an iron lid over the gas under the irons. When this iron lid is once heated it retains the heat and the irons can be kept piping hot with a slow fire.

A way of saving gas while ironing is to cook over the same burner that heats the irons. When two irons are kept continuously on the stove a flat bottomed kettle can be placed over them, and even with the interruptions caused by changing the irons the contents can be kept at the boiling point.

This is a very important point when cooking ham, soup and other foods that demand a slow boiling for many hours.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 20, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 50-53; Acts i, 1-11—Memory Verses, 10, 11. Golden Text, Acts i, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We have the option this time of the regular lesson on the ascension, or what is called a Christmas lesson on the reign of peace, from Isa. xi, 1-10, but as the ascension lesson includes His return to set up His kingdom we will take it and look at both. The time when Isa. xi shall be literally fulfilled cannot come during this age of a rejected Messiah and a consequently scattered Israel, but as truly as He at His first coming literally fulfilled all that is written in Isa. liii and elsewhere concerning His sufferings, so shall He when He shall come again as literally fulfill all that is written everywhere concerning His kingdom and glory. Animals that now devour each other shall live in peace together, nations shall learn war no more, for He shall have smitten them and broken them in pieces, and the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea, for the rod out of the stem of Jesse, who is also the root of Jesse; the son of David, who is also David's Lord, shall sit on David's throne and reign over the house of Jacob, who will then be a nation all righteous, according to Gabriel and all the prophets, the neglect of whom made the two with whom He walked to Emmaus to be foolish men (Luke xxiv, 25; i, 31, 32; Jer. iii, 17; Isa. ix, 6, 7; lx, 21).

He who rose from the dead was indeed the Son of David, the long promised king to rule over Israel, which He shall surely do at His return, and not only Israel, but all nations (Mic. iv, 3; v, 2; Ps. lxxii, 11; Matt. i, 1; Rev. xxii, 16; II Tim. ii, 8; Rev. i, 5; Ps. lxxxvi, 9). How wonderful the king and the kingdom! Thy kingdom come! Christmas is almost without significance unless it points us on to the coming again of Him who was born in Bethlehem, not in the winter season, but probably in the springtime.

Turning to the lesson in the Acts, the former treatise referred to was the gospel by Luke, wherein he, as well as Matthew and Mark in their gospels, set forth the things that Jesus began to do and teach and which the Holy Spirit through redeemed people has ever since been doing and teaching and will till the church is completed.

Notice that doing always goes before teaching, for we cannot teach others until we have done the things ourselves. He continued to do and teach until the day in which He was taken up. May we by the same Spirit be faithful witnesses until taken out of the body or taken up in the body to be ever with Him (I Thess. iv, 16-18; Phil. i, 21, 23). We must not confuse these two, but either will be glorious.

Notice how He did all by the Holy Spirit. And remember that from His conception to His resurrection all was by the Holy Spirit, the same one concerning whom He said, "Ye shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me" (verse 8, margin). As He showed Himself alive in His resurrection body He expects us, in the power of His resurrection by the Holy Spirit, to manifest Him in our mortal bodies that others may see Him and not us.

He will manifest Himself in us if we are fully yielded. Since He is more willing to give the fullness of the Spirit than parents are to give good gifts unto their children, what can hinder us from being filled but our own unwillingness? Their question, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" was in no sense a foolish question, for the prophets are full of such a restoration, and the heaven has received Him only until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began (Acts iii, 21). Our Lord did not reprove them for asking the question, nor did He say that they were carnal in looking for such a kindom or that they misunderstood the nature of the kingdom. He simply said to them, and He says to us, that we are not to know the time, and elsewhere He said that it will be in such an hour as we think not. But His great desire for us is that we shall be, in the power of His Spirit, His faithful witnesses to His death and resurrection and present ministry and coming again.

He led them out as far as to Bethany, and while He blessed them with uplifted hands He was parted from them, carried up into heaven and sat on the right hand of God (verse 9; Luke xxiv, 50, 51; Mark xvi, 19). As they looked steadfastly toward heaven two men in white apparel said, "This same Jesus * * * shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." Then they returned to Jerusalem with great joy and were continually praising and blessing God (verse 11; Luke xxiv, 52.) Let us hold fast the very words about "this same Jesus," and if we believe them as they did we will be affected as they were to His glory—not death nor any great event in the past, but a literal personal coming to the air to welcome His church and then to the same Olivet to set up His kingdom.

We distinguish between His coming for us and His coming with us—not two comings, but two stages of the great event with an interval between.

TORTURE FOR CONVICTS.

The Cruel Methods In Use In Portugal's Mozambique Colony.

Mozambique being one of the principal convict settlements of the Portuguese government, many poor creatures make desperate dashes for liberty only to be devoured by the sharks before the eyes of their guards. It was no uncommon event to hear the fortress gun boom forth, announcing that another poor soul was running this ghastly gantlet of the sharks sooner than exist like a half starved dog in deplorable surroundings.

There being no capital punishment under Portuguese law, many of the convicts were of course of the most desperate type—notorious murderers, and so on. Some of them, after a certain time and as a reward for good conduct were allowed to work on parole, leaving the fortress in the morning and returning at night, plying their various trades to their own advantage. Others of a more dangerous character might be seen working in chains on the road, guarded by slovenly half caste sepoys.

Outside the dungeon cells were whipping posts, over which poor creatures had to kneel, their arms and legs being bound to iron rings, while lashes were administered with a chicotte, a strip of hippo hide. Palmatoria was another torture used. Although illegal to Portuguese law, it is nevertheless still widely used, causing excruciating pain. The implement employed is a flat, spoon shaped heavy piece of hard wood about an inch and a half thick, with a handle eighteen inches long, the spoon head being perforated with five holes. The person to be punished extends the palms of his hands, and sharp, regular blows are administered, which at each stroke suck up the flesh. The bravest can rarely stand more than thirty blows, for the tortured hands swell to double their natural size. The sentence is often several hundred blows, the punishment continuing on succeeding days until "justice" is satisfied.—Sibyl Belcher in Wide World Magazine.

Montreal Is "Wide Open."

MONTREAL, Dec. 17.—The Montreal Star says: Despite sporadic outbursts of reform the business of gambling is going on to-day as freely as it ever was. The city is "wide open."

There are a number of quiet resorts, some of them in respectable uptown localities, where the devotees of poker or the wheel may find sport any evening. Poolrooms where you may play the ponies are also flourishing.

In another place "craps" are the order of the day and night, and "the sky is the limit," where the bones are being rolled. All one has to do is to walk in. There are at least a score of these resorts.

ALLIES' ADVANCE SLOW BUT UNINTERRUPTED

British Fleet Aided Advance by Vigorous Bombardment of Westende---In the Argonne There Has Been a Lull, But in the Woevre and in Alsace Activity Has Been Vigorous.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The raid of German warships on the northeast coast of England and their escape in the fog after having bombarded Scarborough, Hartlepool and Whitby, where a number of persons were killed and wounded and considerable damage was done to property, completely overshadows the operations on land.

The land operations, however, as on preceding days, have been of the utmost importance. The British, French and Belgian troops have continued their offensive in the west, and, according to the French official reports, have made further slight progress. This was not accomplished without serious opposition on the part of the Germans, who at every point where an advance was attempted fought against it foot by foot.

Along the coast of Flanders, where the allies are trying to push their lines forward from Nieuport, they had the assistance of the British fleet, which violently bombarded Westende, one of the many little coast towns that have suffered greatly since the commencement of the war. This attack, Berlin says, was without effect and the allies were repulsed.

Further inland the French also claim to have gained ground, although in a less marked degree than on previous days. In the Argonne there appears to have been a lull in the fighting, but both in the Woevre and Alsace, the two other regions where severe fighting has been in order for some time, the Germans appear to have delivered counter-attacks.

British Troops at Havre.

HAVRE, Dec. 17. — Thousands of British troops are arriving here daily on transports, and are being moved to the north as rapidly as possible. The British are making the port of Havre their main base of supplies. On the average, 15 British transports arrive here daily from Southampon.

Large camps have been leased on the heights along the Seine for periods varying from two to three years, and barracks are being built. Extensive supply depots have been established here.

French Advance on Right.

BASLE, Switzerland, Dec. 17.—The French armies appear to have taken the offensive along the entire front from Belfort to Sainte Marie-aux-Mines. Heavy artillery firing causes the windows to shake in houses here by night and day. The French have converted Thann into a stronghold.

The movement reported from Basle apparently is in the nature of a general attack by the French forces in Alsace.

EARL ESCAPES

Lord Levan Gets Away From Hospital in Disguise

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The Earl of Levan and Melville has, according to the Central News, arrived in London, after having escaped from German territory.

The earl went to the front in the early stages of the war with his regiment, the Royal Scot Greys, in which he is a lieutenant, and, being wounded on Aug. 22, was left behind when his regiment retreated. He was taken by the Germans to a hospital, suffering from a bullet wound in the thigh.

On Wednesday last, disguised as a Belgian refugee, he traveled across Belgium in a northerly direction, broke through the German lines, and crossed the Dutch frontier without a passport. The earl is still very lame, but hopes soon to be in the fighting line again.

NEXT BIG ENCOUNTER TO BE NEAR CRACOW

Grand Duke Nicholas Seems Determined to Hurl His Immense Weight on the Austro-German Forces to the South and Invade Silesia--- Germans Prepare Another Attack on Warsaw.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The greatest importance is attached to the fighting on the southern front. Grand Duke Nicholas is determined to crush the Austro-German resistance in the region and to advance in force through Silesia, says a despatch from Petrograd.

The next big battle is expected to be fought south of Cracow. In preliminary engagements the Russians have repulsed the Austro-German forces.

In Central Poland, in the region of Lowicz, repeated German attacks have been repulsed, and the offensive of the enemy has been confined to sporadic attacks upon the Russian line. German reinforcements have arrived, however, and this battle is expected to be renewed with the greatest ferocity. Northern Poland is cleared of Germans, and the East Prussian campaign is to be vigorously pushed.

The repulse of the Austrians advancing down the northern slopes of the Carpathians through the Dukla Pass into Galicia is claimed in a report published by The War Messenger yesterday.

South of Cracow, it is stated, the Austro-German forces have been endeavoring to check the Russian attack by strengthening their defences. The Germans are declared to have suffered heavy losses in violent but unsuccessful attacks in the region of Lowics and Llow.

Czar Nicholas left the Caucasian front, where he has been visiting the Russian troops, yesterday.

From western Poland the Germans are preparing another great drive on Warsaw. Fresh troops are being rushed into the fierce struggle on the Vistula and a stupendous battle is again developing from the Baltic to the Carpathians, according to advices received in London.

The following statement from the General Staff of the commander-in-chief of the Russian forces was issued last evening:—

"In the direction of Mlawa we have repulsed the enemy toward the frontier.

"On the left bank of the Vistula the Germans kept up a stubborn attack throughout the day along the line from Kiernozla to Sochaczew. Owing to the unfavorable condition of the country our troops retreated slightly during the evening.

"On the other sections of the front our troops made counter-attacks and compelled the enemy to remain on his positions, checking his attempts to advance.

"Our strategy has stopped the Austrian advance from beyond the Carpathians.

"On the other points there is no important change to report."

The correspondent of The Morning Post at Petrograd says:—

The Germans continue obstinately to reinforce their already enormous strength on the left bank of the Vistula. The new forces here again made a most determined series of attacks between the Bzura and the Vistula in the neighborhood of Hova, and the concentration of German forces is taking place almost on the Vistula. The Germans evidently persist in their original plan to force the Russian right flank south of the Vistula in the hope of reaching Warsaw, securing the whole course of the Vistula and utilizing this magnificent river as a main artery for the direction of their attack upon the flank of the Russian main armies operating in Galicia.

BOURASSA IS HOOTED DOWN

Big Crowd at Ottawa Refuses to Hear Him

POLICE WERE RUSHED

Audience Was Good Humored and Sang Patriotic Songs

OTTAWA, Dec. 17.—Henri Bourassa, the Nationalist leader, came to Ottawa last night to make a speech. He did not deliver it. The Russell Theatre was packed from floor to ceiling with a crowd of nearly 3,000 who refused to listen.

The trouble began early. As the crowd was surging its way into the building, one of the policemen lost his temper and brutally treated a young man. Seeing this, a number of soldiers rushed the police, the doors were smashed, and the crowd filed in.

The audience was good-humored and sang patriotic songs. Dr. Freeland was chairman and when he and Mr. Bourassa came on the platform the uproar became tremendous. For half an hour the Nationalist leader waited for silence, but the crowd never gave him a chance to begin. The climax was reached when one of the soldiers jumped on the platform, lifted a Union Jack from the table and held it out for Bourassa to wave Bourassa refused and a great roar went up. Several soldiers mounted the platform, Bourassa disappeared, and the curtain went down.

Speaking of his reception in Ottawa, Mr. Bourassa said: "It is what I might have expected from Prussian culture in Ontario."

KINGSTON, Dec. 17. — Information has been received to the effect that Co. T. D. R. BRITISH WOMEN ENLIST.

They Will Serve as Supplementary Corps in Case of Invasion.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — A meeting was held yesterday at the Mansion House, in aid of the movement for the formation of a woman's volunteer reserve, the object of which, according to the Lord Mayor, who presided, is "to provide a trained and highly efficient body of women, whose services can be offered to the state if required."

"Such women," said the Lord Mayor, "could be trained for signalling, despatch riding, telegraphing, motoring and camp cooking, and thus could replace men who might be more usefully employed on the firing line."

The Rt. Hon. Henry Chaplin, M.P., explained that the corps was intended to be employed in the event of an invasion of this country "by hordes of German barbarians." It was not proposed to arm women for aggression, he added, "but to arm them for their own defence in the last extremity is very different and entirely justifiable."

PASSING OF MRS. PALLIN IS MOURNED BY MANY FRIENDS

Jermyn, Dec. 17.—On Sunday, December 13th, 1914, death removed from our midst the much beloved wife of Mr. J. H. Pallin.

Deceased whose maiden name was Caroline Robertson was 57 years of age, and was born in Norwood but for the last 35 years had resided at Jermyn, where she was held in high esteem by all who came in touch with her in any way.

Besides a sorrowing husband she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. F. Kidd, of Indian River, Mrs. J. O. Fife, Peterborough, and Fannie at home, as well as four sons, James of Oregon, William and Ralph of Carlstadt, Alberta, and Percy of Galt; one sister, Mrs. Robert Easson of Otonabee, and one brother, Jessie, of Wenichee.

The pall-bearers at the funeral were six trustees of Bethel Methodist Church of which the deceased was an ardent member, the Rev. A. K. Edmison, of Keene, officiating at the services. Interment was held at Fife's Cemetery.

In the calling away of Mrs. Pallin the community has lost a valuable resident, one who by her years in our midst made for herself many friends who gathered from all quarters to pay the last rites and extending to the sorrowing husband and family their deepest sympathy. In the home she was a mother whose wise counsel was always carefully and prayerfully administered.

Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit, rest thee now;
E'en while with ours thy footsteps trod
His seal was on thy brow.

Dust, to its narrow house beneath,
Soul, to its place on high;
They that have seen thy look in death
No more may fear to die.

A Generous Patron.

Probably the most generous contributor to the Canadian Patriotic Fund in proprotion to his income is H. F. Baker, the lighthouse-keeper at Clapperton Island, Lake Huron. When this employe of the Government received the circular suggesting that all Government officials should contribute one day's pay, he wrote back to say that his pay was so small that his earnings on one day would not be worth while. He therefore asked the Department to deduct $10 from his quarterly pay check, and enclosed a $5 contribution by his wife and family.

Good Omen.

None of the rabbits brought in had on their winter coat, which, according to prognosticatious, is a sign that winter will not set in until some weeks hence.—Beeton World.

A LETTER FROM THE FIRING LINE

Brother of Havelock Man in the Thick of the Fighting

Havelock, Dec. 17.—The following letter from the firing line in Belgium was received by Mr. Frank Watson, of town, from his brother, Mr. Jos. Watson, who was among the first detachment of British troops sent to the front:

Dear Frank and wife,

Just a few lines to let you know that I am in the land of living and hope that this finds you both in the best of health. Well we came out of the firing line the other day for a rest and we had a hot water bath and a change of clothing, and it was certainly time we had it. We had it hard for the first week out here. We caught the battle of Mons and had to retire quickly. We fought all day and started to retire about four and we kept that up till six the following night and then up early the next morning again. It was during the retirement that L. Battery got cut up and as we were all in one camp it did not take us long to pick them up and turn the guns upon the enemy. We have had one or two good fights since we were on the Aisne that lasted for over 18 days. I tell you this is worse than the South African war. I feel sorry for these people. The Germans go into their houses and demand all they've got, loot the houses and throw all their things about and then set fire to their buildings. In some places they have killed women and children. It is a good job they are not in England. Well we have snow on the ground now and hard frosts at night, but it is nice and warm with two blankets, and a drop of rum is not so bad these mornings. I only hope this does not last long for I am fed up, but I will tell you more when I get out of it, so you can think the other out. I conclude with fondest love to both.

Your ever loving brother
JOE.

MOBS ARE PROTESTING

Enormous Defeat by the Servians Has Upset Austria--Retreat is Called a Tragedy.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The Times correspondent in Servia wires that the Austrian retreat is a tragedy surpassing anything in the Balkan war. What impresses one most is the appalling filth left behind by the Austrians. Hospitals containing their wounded are unfit to enter, owing to the stench. Servians are busily engaged trying to restore order.

ROME, Dec. 17.—According to reports which have reached the Austrian frontier whence they have been transmitted to Rome by telegraph, the situation in the Dual Monarchy is approaching what might be called a critical stage.

These reports are worthy of credence, and set forth that, following the news of the defeat inflicted on the Austrians by the Servians, the situation became grave and was rendered more acute by internal disorders, especially at Vienna, Budapest and Prague.

At Vienna, a large crowd gathered in the Ringstrasse and marched to the Foreign Office and the War Office, the people calling loudly in protest against the way the war is being conducted. At Prague there were demonstrations, which assumed a separatist character, in the sense that the Bohemians do not desire to see their sons killed for German or anti-Slav interests, and have not hesitated to express their views along this line.

At Budapest the demonstrations were more violent and almost assumed the character of a riot.

Cost of Firing

The guns used in the navy range from six inch to fourteen inch calibre of bore. The six inch gun carries a 100 pound shell, seven inch guns 165 pound shell, eight inch guns 250 pounds, ten inch guns 500 pounds, twelve inch guns 850 pounds, thirteen inch 1,100 pounds. To fire one of the big guns using the shells and the explosives that would be used in battle costs from $477 to $720 for each discharge, according to the size of the gun, but the cost in target practice is only about $250 each discharge, because they use cheap shells and no explosives. The big guns are used twice a year in target practice, the target for an eight inch gun at five mile range being 30 by 60 feet in size.

PRISONERS OF WAR

Already a large number of German prisoners have been taken by the allies. In the Franco-German War of 1870, however, the shoe was on the other foot, for during that campaign the French prisoners reached the extraordinary total of 21,508 officers and 702,048 men. Of these nearly 250,000 were the Paris garrison, and over 90,000 represented the French troops disarmed and interned in Switzerland. Prisoners of war are always an embarrassment and a source of considerable worry and expense, though their numbers are frequently lessened by interchange of prisoners taken by the enemy.

Iron Cross Popular.

The Iron Cross was conferred the other day on hundreds of Londoners, but not by the Kaiser. The crosses in question were an imitation of the German Iron Maltese cross and sold on the Strand and other principal thoroughfares for a penny apiece, including a long piece of yellow ribbon.

It appealed so much to several drivers that they purchased crosses and tied them around the necks of their horses, and, when a bulldog appeared in Trafalgar Square with an iron cross attached to its collar the owner of the dog was congratulated on having such an highly honored animal.

Barred Out.

An old gentleman by the name of Page, finding a young lady's glove at a popular resort, presented it to her with the following words:

If from your glove you take the letter G
Your glove is love, which I devote to thee.

To this the lady returned the following answer:

If from your Page you take the letter P
Your Page is age, and that won't do for me.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL HOLD LAST REGULAR MEETING WILL ASSIST NEEDY FAMILY

The North Monaghan Council met in the County Council room on Tuesday, Dec. 15th, for an all-day session, it being the last regular meeting of this year's council. Reeve Howden and Councillors Dobbin, Robson, Forster and Young were present.

A deputation composed of T. E. Bradburn, R. E. Morrow and Geo. W. Hatton, came before the council and asked that Mr. Winn and his family (now residents of North Monaghan) be given free transportation to England. Mr. Winn is sick and unable to earn a living for himself or dependents in this country, and has assured both the council and the gentlemen who appeared on his behalf that his relatives in the Old Country would care for them. Moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Forster, that this council furnish transportation for Mr. Winn and his family to England, which will, according to Mr. Bradburn's figures, be in the neighborhood of $150; this proposal to be submitted to the township solicitor for approval. — Carried. Mr. E. A. Peck, the township solicitor, came before the council regarding this proposal and said it was quite within their rights to vote the transportation money, the same coming under the head of charity.

Reeve Howden reported that no permission or report had been received from Mr. Hanna, provincial secretary, regarding the raising of $2,000 on short term debentures in the way proposed at the public meeting held on Nov. 26. The council then went to general business.

The minutes of the last four meetings were read. Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Robson, that the minutes of the last four meetings as read be accepted and confirmed. — Carried.

The council then proceeded to deal with and pass the following accounts:

FORTUNES OF WAR

Dr. John Noble, one of Toronto's best known medical men, a member of the Board of Education, is active in the organization of the Military Training Association of that city, and the other night he had a rather interesting time of it when he endeavored to persuade the men of Earlscourt, a suburb peopled by the British-born, to join that organization.

Among the advantages that the doctor urged was that by joining the M.T.A. the citizens did not obligate themselves to take up arms and turn out, as is the case with the Home Guards.

This argument did not meet with general approval.

"Say, doctor," piped up one little man near the front, "you ought to be organizing for the Safety First League."

And the laugh was on the doctor.

There was a laugh also a little later on Controller "Tommy" Church, who happened in (civic elections being not far away now), and, of course, Tommy had to make a speech. He was ignorant of the fact that scant success, if any, had rewarded the efforts to establish a corps of the M. T. A., and he rapturously waded into a speech complimenting the men of Earlscourt on the splendid organization they had just completed.

Troops Are Busy.

Work at Salisbury camps for the past few weeks has been marked principally by musketry practice and night marches. Different battalions have been out until 2 a.m. covering often 15 to 20 miles. Work in the day time has been steady, and unbroken, the men settling down to their training with fine valor.

The Ross rifle has proved itself a very effective weapon, and frequent scores of nine out of ten bulls at the 500 yards' range, speak sufficiently for the general marksmanship of the contingent. It is not all work, however, at Salisbury. At Bustard Camp a traveling kinema has been installed and crowded houses indicated the mens' appreciation. There are weekly inter-regimental football matches, chiefly rugby; drill contests and improvised concerts have become the order of the day.

A Good CHRISTMAS PRESENT For YOUR BOY--A TICKET FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

HOW TO AVOID CHRISTMAS FIRES

In many Canadian homes every year Christmas festivities cause regrets and in numerous cases loss of life among those taking part.

Illuminated effects as Christmas tree decorations in private homes are dangerous, and wherever either fire or lights are used too much attention cannot be given to their safety. The Christmas tree is in itself sufficiently inflammable, but when to this is added decorations of cotton batting, light paper balls and other dangerous material, it is only by the exercise of great care that fires can be avoided. Where Christmas trees are erected in carpeted rooms, sheet tin or zinc should be placed under the tree, to catch the candle drippings. It should be one person's duty to watch the candles, that instant action may be taken if the tree takes fire.

In public halls, Sunday schools, etc., where numbers of children are assembled, unusual precautions should be taken. Fire extinguishers and pails of water should be in convenient places. Santa Claus costumes should be dipped in a solution of four ounces of phosphate of ammonia to a quart of water. If clothing catches fire throw the person down, and roll him in carpet, rug, blanket, coat or anything handy, to smother the flames. The exits should be kept perfectly clear to avoid danger of panics.

In business houses electric wiring and gas lighting for special displays should be carefully inspected. Do not use paper or muslin shades close to the lamps, as they may take fire from the heat. Some one in authority should be given the responsibility of seeing that the fire hazard is not excessive, and that every precaution is taken to protect life and property. Insurance may replace the property, but no insurance can replace loss of life.

OTTAWA IS NOT INTERESTED IN BERLIN MOVE

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Owing to the wording of a clause in the statutes, the courts of Ontario have found it impossible to determine whether or not the surplus revenue from public utilities should be used for extensions to these utilities or turned over to the municipalities for use with the general fund. The City of Berlin, Ontario, has experienced some difficulty with its water commission in this respect, the corporation claiming that the surplus revenue should go to the general fund. In order to have the question cleared, the mayor of Berlin has asked the mayor of Ottawa to join him in asking the Ontario Legislature for an amendment to the act so that the meaning shall be clear. As Ottawa is not concerned in the question, the board of control concluded yesterday that it would not comply with the request.

SUSPICIOUS LOOKING MEN ARE COMMON AT OTTAWA

Sometimes They Pose as Representatives of Manufacturers of War Material And Often They are Only Looking for Jobs.

The efficiency of the German system of secret service and the perfection of their methods of espionage have long been one of the proudest of many boasts of the Fatherland, and unquestionably constitute a strong contributory factor in the plan and execution of its military operations. How it works in Canada, where its operations are carried on and the character and design of the general scheme are subjects of constant investigation by the authorities of the Dominion Government.

Ever since the war broke out—and previously, for that matter—our own secret service agents have been keeping in close touch with the situation, and to them has come fairly convincing evidence that Canada has not been at all overlooked by Germany in the allocation of those who engaged in hostile espionage or the supply of information calculated to be of more or less vital advantage to the enemy.

Cases are known where this plan of campaign has been going on for years. The German who ostensibly was in Canada to reside permanently or was here on business without the remotest apparent association with war, has in many instances since hostilities broke out, disappeared, having accomplished his purpose.

For one that has gone, however, a score remain. Every city and district in Canada to-day furnishes to them, in greater or less numbers, a hospitality which in most instances is open and unsuspecting.

Many of these have disappeared and been replaced by others, who from their appearance and the character of their supposed callings would be less likely to arouse suspicion. In any event, that they are still with us in uncomfortable numbers admits of no doubt. Not a day passes but that the Government is overwhelmed with communications calling attention to supposed acts of espionage. Allowing that many of them are unfounded and that in most of the rest there is an insufficient warrant for apprehension, the extensive existence of the system cannot be questioned, nor can the need of caution by the Canadian people be too strongly emphasized.

Concrete cases, of which there are a good number since the war began, are hard to get at because of official reticence, and the perhaps questionable view that publicity might be a deterrent or injurious factor. A number of them, however, have come to light in Ottawa and furnish instructive illustrations of the methods in vogue by the German agents.

The war had been on a week or so and the Militia Department was at its busiest preparing for the despatch of the first division, when a well-dressed man, polished in manners, approached one of the leading officers of the Department.

"Would they tell him how many rifles the Canadian militia possessed?" was the modest question. When asked his motive in making such a query, he represented himself as being connected with a British armament firm, which could readily replenish any paucity in the domestic supply, but, of course, would like to know all about our rifle equipment, the ammunition used, and amount of it and rifles on hand, and the capacity of our factories in turning out more.

This man was no stranger. He had been around Ottawa for a couple of years, ostensibly a mineralogist, with a reputation as a good fellow, and more or less prominence in certain social sets. It is needless to say that the information sought was not forthcoming, and the gentleman was, in fact, advised to make his disappearance in relatively short order.

The instance above cited is by no means isolated. Just a few days ago, a stylishly dressed young man, obviously a German, but ostensibly a former Swedish naval officer, now a "naturalized and enthusiastic Canadian," applied at a Department in Ottawa for a clerical position. The Department in question has much to do with war correspondence.

Curiously enough he was highly recommended by a Canadian of prominence. The assumption is that the good-hearted Canadian who furnished the letter of credentials was innocently enough assisting the employment of a spy designing to get at confidential information. Again the proof is lacking but the strong suspicion remains. He didn't get the job.

Care was very properly observed and a censorship of news established in regard to the movement of our troops, but there is no reason to doubt that Germany was kept advised of doings at Valcartier; of the embarkation at Quebec, and of the date of sailing of the contingent. The mines strewn off the Irish coast, according to despatches, are believed by the Admiralty to have been laid for Canadian transports. German submarines likewise laid in wait. The scheme failed but the information as to the movement of our troops was flashed indirectly to Germany and doubtless it was done by German secret service agents in Canada.

A more pacific but nevertheless effective plan of activity, carefully being watched by the Government, concerns the maintenance of German trade with Canada and the forwarding from Canada of supplies destined for Germany. Evidence has come to light of extensive attempts to buy up Canadian produce, to ship to the United States, have it forwarded from there to Holland or some neutral country, but ultimately to reach Germany. No effort is being spared to completely block any such hostile enterprise.

EMDEN SAILORS ARE AT LARGE

Have Captured a Collier and are Raiding Again

MANILA, Dec. 17.—Forty men of the crew of the German cruiser Emden who were left on Cocos Island when the Australian cruiser Sydney discovered the Emden and chased and forced her to run ashore some time ago, have captured a collier and mounted two maxims on her and are now raiding commerce in the Pacific, according to a report received here.

The report came through officers of the British steamer Malacca, which has arrived at Jolo. The report has not been confirmed officially.

The men of the Emden had gone ashore on Cocos Island to dismantle the wireless and fled, but were unable to rejoin their ship when the Sydney put in an appearance. The German party, which is commanded by Lieut. von Muecke, left Cocos Island with a commandeered schooner and plenty of provisions and also their own armed launch and two boats, according to the report. Where they captured the collier is not stated.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case".

MRS. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE NATIONS AT WAR

Austria to Servia.

"Ferdinand our prince was slain by a Serb assassin's hand;
An excuse I've waited long to invade your cherished land.
I will conquer and enslave you, you
no longer shall be free.
I am certain I can do it, for I'm backed by Germany."

Montenegro to Austria.

"So you think to conquer Servia,
by whose side I fought before,
When we fought for right and freedom in the recent Balkan war?
Montenegrins still are loyal; to our friends we will be true;
And while you are conquering Servia, we will make it hot for you."

Russia to Austria.

"Do you think I'll stand unheeding while you trample Servia down,
Leave the nation torn and bleeding,
and usurp the monarch's crown?
Russia's army's strong and ready,
and her sons are trained for war
Pray accept a neighbor's warning:
'Austria do not go too far.'"

Germany to Russia.

"Stop your meddling! neighbor Russia, you have but one part to play;
Keep outside and mind your business,
I have something now to say.
While Austria now to quell the Servians with her armies doth advance,
I will take a rousing army and step over into France.
Britain's hands are tied with Ulster,
and the Boers would soon rebel;
Her colonies won't care to meddle,
she can't help her very well."

Germany to Belgium.

"Little Belgium are you neutral, now
remember what I say:
I will travel through your dooryard,
it is much the easier way.
Soon my legions will be marching,
when I give the word Advance!
Through your country 'twill be easy to the capital of France.
There are just some "scraps of paper," made with Luxemburg and
you;
Do you think I'd let them stop me?
You don't know me if you do.
I'm the War Lord of Creation, and my banners are unfurled,
With my armies, ships and Zeppelins
I can now defy the world."

Belgium to Germany.

"I have burned with indignation at your insolent demand.
Though you turn to desolation all our fair and lovely land,
We will stand for right and freedom,
Belgians will to God be true;
And our friends across the Channel will come and defend us too."

France to Germany.

"In the year 1870 you took Alsace and Lorraine,
And you think because you conquered you can do the same again.
Britain's just across the Channel, and she's strong and brave and true,
We, with Russia, and wee Belgium can defeat the like of you."

Britain to Germany and Austria.

"I have ever stood for freedom, for the cause that's just and right,
And to maintain the peace of Europe,
rest assured that I will fight.
So you think my hands are tethered with my troubles here at home;
But to prove my sons are loyal, I have just to bid them come.
Ireland's trouble's all forgotten in one burst of loyalty
That's re-echoed by the millions of my sons across the sea."

Colonies to Britain.

"Mother dear! are you in trouble?
Let us help you in the fight;
We will come both quick and willing to increase your armies' might.
We are coming from New Zealand,
from Australia's far-off land;
From South Africa's dominions and from India's coral strand.
Canada will send her thousands and one million bags of flour,
Countless tons of other foodstuffs to increase your armies' power."

Allies to Germany.

"Come along to Paris, to the Channel ports as well;
You've nothing now to stop you but the Allies' shot and shell;
Try the Yser River route and then go home and tell
How you could not go to Paris."

—Mrs. George W. Fox,
Allisonville, Ont.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Uncertainty as to what effect the German naval raid might have on the demand for export shipments to Great Britain led to some selling today by nervous holders of wheat. In consequence, the market, altho steady at the close, was ⅜c to ⅝c under last night. Both corn and oats finished ⅛c to ¼c down. The outcome in provisions was irregular, varying from 5c decline to a rise of 7½c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

Owing to the more liberal shipments of oats from Ontario and Quebec than was expected a weaker feeling has developed in the market for such and prices have declined 1c per bushel for car lots, but there is no actual change in spot prices as yet. Demand for Canadian western oats is very weak.

Trade in corn and feed barley is quiet, with prices steady. Demand for flour shows no improvement and the market is quiet with a steady undertone. Millfeed is fairly active and firm. Butter and cheese quiet and unchanged. Eggs and dressed poultry in good demand.

There were a few loads of choice butchers' steers on the market, for which the demand was fairly good, and sales were made at $7.75 to $8, but the bulk of the trade was done in stock ranging from $6 to $7, and cows at from $5.50 to $6.50, while a few choice bulls brought $7 per cwt.

The trade in small meats was active, there being a good demand for all lines, and as the offerings were not large the tone of the market is firm, with sales of Ontario lambs at $7.50 to $7.75 and Quebec stock at $7 to $7.25, while sheep brought from $4.25 to $5 per cwt. Choice calves were scarce, for which there was good demand, and some sales were made as high as $20 each, while the lower grades sold at from $5 to $15 each. The tone of the market for hogs was firm under a good demand and sales of selected lots were made at $7.75 to $8.75 per cwt. weighed off cars.

FIRST WORKOUT

Hockey fans will have the first opportunity of seeing the Intermediates perform tonight on Brock Street rink at seven-thirty. The dope has been rather scarce this year so the rail-birds are expected out in large numbers.

The Wrong Kind.

"There is a lot of human interest in my play, sir. A poor girl, madly in love, is forced to give up her lover to marry a rich man so she can pay back a loan made her father at 50 per cent."

"What are you talking about? That's inhuman interest."—Baltimore American.

Greatness.

"What is your idea of greatness?"

"Greatness," replied Senator Sorghum, "is the distinction a man enjoys when he gets himself so securely established that people have to tolerate him whether they like him or not."—Washington Star.

Reminded.

Dick—I thought you were not going to give Miss Banks anything for her birthday.

Tom—I wasn't. But how could I refuse? She sent me a bunch of forget-menots the day before.—Judge.

Comparisons.

"A woman has to give up a great deal after she gets married," sighed Mrs. Gabb.

"A man does nothing else but give up after he gets married," replied Mr. Gabb.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Martin's Way.

Irishmen are inclined to word perversion; but, says a writer, the following description of slow speech, which often degenerated into a stammer, shows that occasionally they use the best words possible in explaining a thing:

"It's a quare sort uv way Martin talks," said Pat. "It's as if he tuk the wurds out uv his mout' an' looked at 'em before he gives 'em to yez."—Exchange.

CURLING CLUB MEETS TONIGHT

Will Decide Question of Holding Open Bonspiel

An important meeting of the Peterboro Curling Club has been called for this evening when the members will decide whether or not to hold an open bonspiel this winter.

Last winter they did not hold one on account of Lindsay holding their big 'spiel, but there is a strong feeling that one should be held this winter. It is therefore expected that there will be a large meeting this evening to decide this important matter.

ONE OBJECT OF RAID FAILED

Sudden Move of Germans Without Military or Noval Significance

LONDON, Dec. 17. — The Times, discussing what it terms "indiscriminate shelling of unfortified towns,' refers to the statement of Count Ernst von Reventlow, the German naval expert, "that we must see clear that in order to fight with success we must fight ruthlessly and in the proper meaning of that word," and adds: "The deeds wrought at Whitby and Scarborough represent the proper meaning as interpreted in Germany.

"We shall not discuss the prescriptions of international law, because the Germans jettisoned alike all principles of international law and all dictates of society. The German navy and the German nation will learn the full significance of the Indian saying: 'The patience of the British is as long as a summer day, but their arm is as long as the winter night'."

"The raid had no genuine military or naval significance and its objects could only be to relieve the prevalent depression in Germany and create panic in these islands. The second object has entirely failed. The raid was received with complete calmness.

"We fully expect the German ships to come again until they come once too often."

The Times adds that the purpose of the royal navy is to engage and destroy the enemy's ships and that this purpose will be inflexible despite all subtle temptations to abandon it for other objects."

From a myriad of special editions of the afternoon papers London learned of the action off the east coast. The news created excitement and tense interest, but there was not the slightest apprehension, nor was there any trace whatever of panic. If the German action was designed to frighten Britain it completely failed.

There is no confirmation of the unofficial reports that any of the raiding ships were sunk by British warships or gun-fire from the land.

"Let's make something good to eat," planned Robert's two little sisters in an undertone.

"All right," said Robert, overhearing "We'll each make something. Lou can go ahead and make the candy and Flo the popcorn."

"Oh," said he, "I'll make away with it."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TRAPPING WOLVES

They Are Easily Lured by Playing on Their Curiosity.

Wolves are the most difficult of all animals to trap, and it is usually by working upon their uncontrollable curiosity that they are most easily deceived. The "camp-fire set" is one of the best. When a man makes camp in the forest the wolves, if there are any near, are sure to note his whereabouts. When he has gone they trot up to investigate the ground, and with due caution pick up any scraps he may have left lying about. The "camp-fire set" is made as follows: First hollow out an oblong hole in the ground just large enough to take the trap, and perhaps five inches deep. Cover the trap with a sheet of brown paper, and over this fill the hole with damp earth. Then light a fire on the top of it, and into the fire, as it burns low, throw a few scraps of raw meat.

Should a wolf come along to investigate the place, he is sure to scent the cooked meat, and will start scratching in the ashes for it, thus of course, springing the trap.

This is one of the easiest "sets" to make, as the fire destroys all telltale scents of the device bidden below.

One of the greatest difficulties in wolf-trapping is to hide the aforesaid tell-tale scents, so keen is their sense of smell. The traps must never be handled with the naked fingers. Old gloves, soaked in oil or fat are used, and it is best to smoke the trap over a "smudge" fire before setting it, and then enclose it in a paper bag.

In prairie countries a good way of trapping wolves is to empty a cartload of manure in the centre of a flat stretch of country, then set the traps on the top of it. Wolves will always ascend a high mound to view the landscape—especially if the mound happens to be of a material that appeals to their nostrils.

The old wolvers often used to proceed as follows: They would start out on their round dragging a piece of carrion behind their horse or cart by means of a long rope, thus leaving a trail, upon which they set their traps at regular intervals. At nighttime the wolves took the trail up, and, which ever way they followed it they were sure to encounter one or more traps.

Wolves are more easily done away with by the use of strychnine than they are by trapping. A trail of baits is laid, the central bait containing poison. Into this bait is stuck a black feather to warn passers-by to keep their dogs out of the danger-zone, and incidentally to attract the notice of the wolf. Having picked up several of the baits, he has now lost suspicion, and gulps down his dose of poison, which kills him almost instantly.

The Indians of northern Alaska regard the wolves as everything that is bad. "Kill moose, kill good Indian, drive game out of country," they will tell you.

Overcoming Shyness.

An older woman can aid so many young girls by trying to draw them out and by helping them to talk. There is no reason why any child should go through agonies of embarrassment through shyness if her mother is of the right kind and knows how to train her in the right way.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

CLARK—FICK.

This afternoon, December 17th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. McClelland, Boswell avenue, was the scene of a quiet wedding, when Winnifred M. Fick, youngest daughter of the late P. F. Fick, of Port Rowan, was united in marriage to William G. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Clark, of Orillia. The ceremony was performed under a large floral bell, the Rev. Mr. Marshall of Orillia officiating.

The bride was given away by Mr. McClelland, and was gowned in white silk, with overdress of accordeon-pleated ninon, and wore a veil arranged in Juliet cap effect, caught with lily of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, and was wearing the groom's gift, a pearl and cameo necklet.

Miss E. Pearl Fick was her sister's only attendant, and wore a gown of old rose silk crepe.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. McClelland, the bride's cousin, in whose home the happy event took place.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark left at 4.30 for a short trip, the bride travelling in a hunter's green broadcloth suit, with small French hat to match. They expect to return to spend Christmas in their new home in Orillia.

Those from a distance present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Clark, Miss Helen Clark, Rev. Mr. Marshall, and Mr. Carter(all of Orillia.

HARRISON—KING.

A pretty wedding was solemnized by the Rev. R. Brydon, of Strange, at the home of Mrs. Janet Rogers, Eversley, Ont., when Katie E. Baker was married to Mr. Robert Harrison, of King, Ont. The decorations were artistically carried out in evergreen and Christmas bells, the bridal party standing under an arch composed of evergreen with holly berries. The dainty little bride wore a charming gown of ivory silk crepe with shadow lace and pearl trimming, and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses with maidenhair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Ada Jenkinson, of Peterboro, was dressed in shell pink satin with pearl trimming, and bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Scott Bovair was best man. As the bride entered on the arm of her brother, Mr. W. H. Baker, of Peterboro, the wedding march was played by Miss Alice Harrison, of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison will reside in Aurora, where they will be at home after the New Year.

Mrs. L. Seward, with her daughter, Miss Gladys, have returned from Dresden Germany. They are staying with Mr. and Mrs. O. Bracken, Toronto.

Mr. W. J. Gamble, managing traveller of the Thomas Davis Company of Montreal and Winnipeg arrived in the city last night to spend the Christmas vacation with his brother and sister, 678 Ross street.

Hydro Rates

The rate being charged at present by the Utilities Commission for house lighting is:—

Thirty hours—10 cents per K.W.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Commission, informed the Review today that the new rates would very likely come into force in Peterboro in February. The delay is being caused by the inability to secure meters.

OBITUARY

MRS. GORDON KING.

Mrs. Gordon King, who has lived in Peterboro for some four or five years, died last night in Nicholls Hospital. She was in her twenty-seventh year, residing in the apartments above the Princess Theatre, George Street. She had been ill for some time. One little girl, eight years of age, besides her husband are left to mourn her death.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 4.30 from D. Belleghem & Son's undertaking parlors to the Grand Trunk station. Interment will take place in Mariposa where relatives of the deceased reside.

HAD TO PUT OUT SIGN TO GET MEN

The gang of men working on the outfall sewer was changed this morning, and so scarce were the men that a sign had to be placed on George street. The sign asked married men wishing employment to call on the city engineer. It did not take long to fill any vacancies.

On Exhibition.

Briggs—We are coming around to see you this evening.

Griggs—That's right; but do me a favor, old man. Don't let your wife wear her new fall suit. I don't want my wife to see it just now.

Briggs — Why, man alive, that's just why we are coming.

F.REMEN AND FAMILIES MADE MERRY AT HALL

Annual Christmas Dinner Was Carried out With Splendid Success

Fire Chief Howard and the men of his department had their annual Christmas dinner last evening in the fire station, the occasion being patronized by some 120 people. This number embraced His Worship Mayor Buller, members of the city council and their wives, His Honor Judge E. C. L. Huycke and Police Magistrate Dumble.

The families of the firemen and their children were all on hand and entered joyfully into the spirit of the occasion.

The guests were seated in the dormitory which had been cleared of its furniture and provided ample accommodation. The fire fighters did the serving and attended to the tables, several of them performing with a dexterity that would qualify them for permanent jobs of that character.

At the head of the table Chief Howard beamed, his face all smiles. To his right and his left were the honored guests. Appropriate speeches were made by Mayor Buller, and Magistrate Dumble, Judge Huycke, Alderman Stratton, Ald. Duffus, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Chief Thompson, Adjutant McElhiney and Alderman Green, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, without whom the dinner and Christmas tree this year could not have been held. Alderman Green made the affair possible by a handsome cash donation, establishing himself firmly in the goodwill of the fire department.

The Chief assumed the role of Santa Claus in distributing the presents on the Christmas tree, assisted by Dr. T. N. Greer and Alderman Duffus, bringing inexpressible delight to the large number of kiddies who romped around the hall.

Those who assisted in the program were:—

Miss G. Clancy, accompanied by Miss L. Clancy, Mr. Robt. Henry, Mr. W. F. Skitch, Mr. R. F. Downey, Mr. J. John, Mr. Soden, Miss Thomas, Col. Miller, accompanist, Mr. John Crane.

MINSTRELS' PERFORMANCE ENJOYED BY AUDIENCE

The attendance at the entertainment given in the Conservatory of Music last evening by Asa Huycke's Minstrels in aid of the Peterboro Hockey Club was not large but the audience certainly could not help but admire the evening's attraction. Mr. Huycke's "Made in Canada" production is composed solely of Peterboro talent and by their work last night, one is led to believe that the minstrels are the best of Peterboro's talent.

The opening overtures by Huycke's orchestra won great favor but the overture previous to the opening of the second act was par excellence. It consisted of a medley of some of Mr. Huycke's compositions including "Birds of Boudage," "Memory's Flowers," "Navigatin' " Home" "Belmont Girl" and numerous others. The singing of the chorus was exceptional, and the solos were also well up to the standard. Mr. J. Minicola made a big impression with "Last Night was the End of the World." Mr. George Wesley created almost as big a stir with "The High Cost of Living." Mr. Frank Clark and his banjo specialties were up to the usual high mark. Mr. E. Hanrahan's numbers were likewise much enjoyed.

After the entertainment, a large number of the younger element held an informal dance. The music was well provided by Asa Huycke's orchestra and the members of the Canadian Kitchener League served the refreshments.

The evening was easily one of the most pleasant and enjoyable evenings the hockey club ever held.

BUSINESS GIRLS ARE ENCOURAGED IN THE EFFORTS TO HELP KIDDIES

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Business Girls' Club was held in the Bank of Montreal chambers on Wednesday evening. Final arrangements were made for the distribution of toys and candies the week before Christmas.

The honourary President, Mrs. Travers, was present and spoke a few words of kindly encouragement. A handsome donation of $10 was received from some kind friends who did not wish their names mentioned. Another donation of $11 was received from the office staff of the Quaker Oats Company.

Through the kindness of Mr. Geo. Morrow, the premises lately occupied by the Patriotic Fund Committee, have been placed at the service of the club, as headquarters until after the distribution has been made.

All the members are asked to be present on Monday or Tuesday evenings to secure the toys and candies for the children on their respective lists.

IS PREPARING REPORT ON STEAM AUXILIARY PLANT

Engineer for Utilities Commission Has Investigated at Several Points

The Utilities Commission met last evening and received a letter from Wm. Kennedy, Jr., of Montreal, the engineer, investigating the possibilities of installing a steam auxiliary plant in connection with the pump house. The communication stated that Mr. Kennedy had been in Niagara Falls and is now at his office in Montreal. He is working out a report which will be forwarded to the commission in the near future. With reference to the dismantling of the McDougall pump Mr. Kennedy stated that he would come to the city if requested to do so.

Superintendent Dobbin of the waterworks department reported that the pump is being taken apart in the presence of a representative from the McDougall, Caledonian Iron Works of Montreal. The Commission decided to visit the pump house this afternoon in connection with the inspecting of the pump and if Mr. Kennedy is required he will be wired for immediately.

Letter from Hydro.

A letter was read from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario acknowledging the receipt of a report giving the time of turning off and on power on the old arc light system and acknowledging the receipt of a letter giving data of tests made of power required to operate the arc lighting system.

Use of City Poles.

An agreement submitted by the Peterboro Radial Railway Co. in regard to the use of the city poles for their feeder lines was referred to the manager for a report.

It was decided to appoint J. C. Anderson to act for the commission in transacting all business which the commission may have with the collector of customs and that the appointment be authenticated over the seal of the commission.

HAVELOCK'S TURN FOR WARDENSHIP OF COUNTY

Reeve Kindred Said to Stand Good Chance for Coveted Office

Municipal matters are exceedingly quiet in Havelock, although nomination day is only a few days away, says the Standard. All the members of the council, it is said, will stand for re-election, and in view of the fact that a special election will have to be held early in the new year in connection with the Hydro by-law, coupled with the fact that there is practically no issue to come before the electors, it is extremely probable that no one will have the temerity to force the expense of an election upon the municipality. It is also rumored upon good authority that Reeve Kindred has been assured of the coveted Wardenship of the County should he be returned as head of the village, and if such is the case, he should certainly be elected by acclamation, both as an honor for his work as reeve during the past two years and to obtain the honor of the Wardenship of Havelock once more.

Messrs. Isaac Barlow, James Barlow and Edw. Fennell are the members of the School Board, whose terms expire this year, and it is also altogether likely that three members for the Board will be elected by acclamation.

The prospects of an election in Belmont & Methuen are particularly promising. Rumor says that Reeve Wilde will seek re-election and that he will be opposed by Councillor Jas. Ketchen or Mr. Wm. Griffith, or in deed that both the latter gentlemen may be in the field. Mr. Marceuna Rylott is said to be out for the council, and it is altogether likely that the present councillors will seek re-election.

CLARK—FICK—In Peterborough, on Dec. 17th, 1914, by the Rev. Mr. Marshall, of Orillia, Winnifred M. youngest daughter of the late P. F. Fick, of Port Rowan, to William G. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Clark, of Orillia.

A MATTER OF INTUITION.

What are the women of Canada doing about the made-in-Canada movement? As usual more than meets the eye. There never was a good movement without women in it somewhere. When the women of Canada undertake to put their sanction on the campaign that means prosperity to their husbands, sons and brothers, the success of that campaign is certain. In this case that peculiar quality of women known as intuition counts for more than all the logic of well-constructed arguments. Women are natural economists—as well as instinctive spenders. When they endorse a policy of buying goods made by Canadians for the sake of Canadian homes, they do it as a matter of plain instinct. You don't have to reason to a woman that it's her duty to support her own cause before anybody else's. She takes it for granted.

All this movement needed to carry it with flying colors to the winning-post of national prosperity was the intuitive backing of the intelligent womanhood of Canada. To them it's as obvious as the smile that disarms opposition or the tears that conquer an enemy. There isn't an intelligent woman in Canada who doesn't stand behind this campaign to boost Canadian prosperity. Any mere man who feels doubtful or lukewarm about it had better introduce the subject to his wife. One gleam of her intuitive perception will be a match for all his lame and limping arguments to the contrary. This is no cause that divides families. Buying made-in-Canada goods at a time like this is the one cause that unites both families and communities.

"Bill's married."

"Is that so?"

"He is."

"Let's send him a letter of sympathy."

Treaties.

A treaty is a form of disagreement between two countries reduced to language which enables each of them to crawl out of it. It belongs in the same family as the insurance policy except that no one can understand an insurance policy, whereas a treaty reads as though it were perfectly plain until something happens that makes one of the parties to it wish to get out of it. Treaties are used for various purposes—to promote typewriting agencies, lawyers, diplomats and to furnish material for editorial writers to convey the impression that they know something of what they are writing about. The principal use of treaties, however, is to bring on wars. —Life.

GERMANS ADMIT BEING FORCED BACK BEFORE COMBINED FIRE, FLANDERS ARMY DEPRESSED

World-wide Feeling of Angry Resentment, at Bombardment of Unfortified English Cities Will be Prejudical to Germany, New York Papers Say

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18. — A cable to the Herald from the Belgian frontier says the Germans in Western Flanders admit that the combined fire of the British warships and Franco-Belgian land troops has caused them to fall back toward Ostend with considerable losses. Even more significant than their great repulse is the reported discouragement of the troops still entrusted with the task of holding the extreme right. According to the wounded, of whom a large number arrived at Bruges yesterday, universal depression has taken possession of the German army in Flanders.

New York papers comment indignantly on the German bombardment of unfortified English cities. The Times says it has aroused a world-wide feeling of angry resentment; which cannot fail to be prejudicial to Germany.

RAID ATTRIBUTED TO DESPAIR AND FAILURE.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — Colonel Rousset, French military writer, attributes the German raid on the English coast to despair, caused by the loss of Von Spee's squadron and the complete failure of their armies in the east and west.

HERE'S A WHOPPER FROM BERLIN.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — A German official statement wired from Amsterdam says that two British destroyers were sunk and another damaged while pursuing the German squadron on Wednesday. The Admiralty have not confirmed this.

MUST BE NOW OR NEVER, WITH THE GERMANS.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — A Times despatch from Warsaw, describing the great strength of the Russian defences between that city and the present battle line, says the Germans must take Warsaw within a week or never, as Russian reinforcements on the way will make the task impossible.

INFANTRY AND MOUNTED RIFLES, MOBILIZE HERE

Distribution of Troops for Third Contingent Decided by Military Authorities at Ottawa

According to a despatch sent out from Kingston, the military authorities at Ottawa have decided on the distribution of troops for the third contingent. Peterboro will be mobilization centre for one company of infantry and one squadron of mounted rifles, in all about 200 men and 100 horses.

The two battalions of infantry and the one battalion of mounted rifles for the Third District will be divided as follows:

Ottawa—Four companies of infantry and one squadron of mounted rifles.

Smith's Falls—Two companies of infantry.

Brockville—Two companies of infantry.

Cornwall—One company of infatnry.

Belleville—Two companies of infantry.

Cobourg—One company of infantry.

Port Hope—One company of infantry.

Peterboro—One company of infantry and one squadron of mounted rifles.

Lindsay—Two companies of infantry. Making in all eighteen companies to each of the three battalions.

Expect Orders Soon.

There is good reason to believe that the 21st Battalion will make an early move for the front. Already the battalion has been informed regarding transportation, the price to be paid for meals on trains, accommodation, provision for men and all other things that are necessary for a unit to know when it is about to move. If the 21st Battalion has been officially notified as to all things concerning entrainment and transportation it is reasonable to believe that the whole of the second contingent will soon be on its way to the front.

The Patriotic Fund

There will be a meting of the general committee of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund and the team captains and members of the teams in the city council chamber at eight o'clock. The forming of a local branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and other matters in connection with the recent campaign will be discussed.

The deal was put through with the Canadian representative of the Russian Government and the local company is awaiting a cable from Russia sanctioning the contract.

ENGINEER MAKES GOOD PROGRESS

Engineer Ambrose Smith who was so severely injured in the Grand Trunk wreck near Campbellford some weeks ago is making excellent progress towards complete recovery according to a report received today from Nicholls Hospital. REMNANT OF EMDEN'S CREW ROUNDED UP

Their Capture Has Been Effected by British Warships

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 18.—Certain British warships have captured those members of the crew of the German cruiser Emden which escaped at Cocos Island when the cruiser was destroyed Nov. 10 by the Australian cruiser Sydney.

The German sailors went to sea in a Cocos Island schooner named Aysha.

NO LET-UP IN INTEREST AMONG THE HOME GUARD

Some Orders and General Information for Members —Badges are Distributed

A very large and enthusiastic drill of the Home Guard was held last night at the armouries. Company drill was practiced under the company captains and a great deal of progress was made. A muster roll by companies was held and badges presented to each member who is sworn in and enlisted. After company drill the Battalion was formed up under Major R. E. Layfield and the following orders were read:—

"Orders of Lt.-Col. J. E. L. Goodwill, Officer Commanding Peterboro Home Guard."

The Battalion will discontinue parade through the holiday season. Battalion drill will be resumed on Thursday, Jan. 7th. Company drills will be held by the captain of the company on any evening that suits their purposes, also on Saturday afternoons. It is expected that the captains of companies will get their companies in such shape that they will be thoroughly organized by the first Battalion drill.

The rifle ranges will be open for practice as per rifle committee's schedule. It is noted that set hours have not been laid out for the companies, the captains of companies are expected to make such arrangements between themselves as will be most suitable for themselves and their men. It is suggested that on Saturday afternoon that the captains arrange that only one company will be at the ranges at a time, the balance to be drilling in the armouries. We would again draw your attention to the fact that the shooting platform must be kept clear, and men not allowed to crowd on the platform. The officer in charge will be held strictly accountable if these rules are not carried out.

Members' Badges.

Members' badges have been presented to each individual member who has signed the service roll and sworn in. They will be worn on the left arm above the elbow. It is expected that the badge will be placed on the arm before leaving the members' residence and removed on returning to the residence. It is requested that men who are on duty on Thursday night and cannot attend drill will wear the badges at their work, we particularly refer to street railway men, firemen and policemen.

Each member is expected to have the badge lined with some heavy material and the ends hemmed and fastened together with elastic so as to preserve these badges and keep them in good shape. While the first issue has been presented to the men, all replacements will be charged at the rate of 25 cents each. Officer rank badges have been issued to the officers and they will pay the paymaster for the same. Non-commissioned officers' badges will be issued by the company captains next week. Non-commissioned officers are expected to pay for their badges at cost.

A further issue of badges to those who have not yet received them will be made at the armouries on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, also Tuesday evening next at 8 o'clock.

The commanding officer hereby extends to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men the wishes of a very Happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

By order.

F. D. KERR,
Capt. Adjt.

Col. Goodwill was unable to be present on account of a severe cold, his many friends will be pleased to know he will soon be on deck.

The several companies are beginning to shape up like veterans and by the time the contingent is established in Peterboro they will be able to show the regulars how to drill.

It is noted that officers' rank badges are a shoulder strap on which the ranks are indicated by stars and crowns as follows:—

Honorary Colonel — 2 stars, 1 crown.

Colonel—1 star, 1 crown.

Major—1 crown.

Captains—3 stars.

Lieutenants—2 stars.

Was Wounded While on Duty In the Trenches

In a letter received by Mrs. Fred Bagnel, of Hastings, written by Mr. Bagnel at the hospital in Leicester, he gives an account of some of his experiences after he left England and on the firing line. He left England about November 8th.

The letter, which we have been priveleged to read is the best pen picture of the actual conditions we have read anywhere. It gives the real truth from the man in the trench as he experienced it, and a real insight even to those who have no conception of what those brave boys are doing.

Fred left England about Nov. 8th and by the 10th, was in the trenches at Ypres with his regiment the Kings Royal Rifles. Thirty-five casualties the first day mainly from German shrapnel from his account, the Taubes finding them and giving their guns the range. Five days of this in

PROVIDE FREE SKATING RINK ON SITE FOR PUBLIC BUILDING

Mayor Buller has brought out another scheme to assist the poor of the city. He has arranged with the Federal member to have the land purchased by the Dominion Government for new public buildings utilized during the winter months for a public skating rink. It is His Worship's intention to have the firemen do the flooding and the Utilities Commission supply the water and light gratis.

The matter will be brought up at the next council meeting and something definite decided on. It is expected that the rink will be operated during the Christmas holidays.

ENEMY'S FIRST LINE TRENCHES ARE TAKEN

Every Counter Attack by Germans Without Success--Distinct Advantages Won in the Argonne

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The official afternoon communication:

"Thursday was marked, as stated yesterday, by an advance on our part in Belgium, where every counter attack undertaken by the enemy failed.

"In the region of Arras a vigorous offensive made us masters of several trenches. These are located at Auchy, La Bassee, St. Laurent and Blangy. At Blangy we occupied almost all the first line trenches of the enemy for a distance of one mile.

"In the region of Tracy le Val and in Champagne our heavy artillery won distinct advantages.

"In the Argonne the Germans blew up one of our trenches to the north of Four de Paris and endeavored to move out from their position with three battalions of troops. This infantry attack, as well as one they undertook at St. Hubert, was repulsed.

"To the east of the Meuse and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

VIOLATION OF THE LORD'S DAY ACT ?

Bank Clerks Appear in Police Court, Charged With Working on the Sabbath --- Magistrate Reserves Judgment

Three bank clerks were charged with violating the provisions of the Lord's Day Act in police court and from the peculiar character of the case an interesting point of law developed as to whether bankers are included in the list of occupations that are expressly forbidden on the Sabbath. Conflicting interpretations were placed upon the meaning of the act under which the bank clerks were given a hearing. Only one of the three, Mr. J. S. Watson, accountant of the Bank of Commerce appeared, who assumed full responsibility for the other two clerks' actions concerning the case in question.

The Reason Given.

Mr. Peck who represented the case for the defendant claimed there had been no breach of the act committed when Watson and two of his clerks had gone into the bank on a Sunday night and started to check up their balances at the end of the bank year.

Watson declared that an unusually large volume of business had to be cleaned up in order to send in reports to head office. They had been working but a short time on the Sunday night in question when two constables entered the bank and informed them it was against the law and that they would take action against them.

Stopped When Warned.

Waston in the witness box said he was unaware he was breaking the law by working on Sunday and that he had but lately come from New York and had never been told it was unlawful. It was the first time he had worked here on a Sunday but he had never been iterferred with in other places. After being warned, however, he stopped within a half hour and left the building.

Mr. Peck stated that he could quote instances which made it justifiable to work on Sunday.

"I suppose you mean the one in the Bible about pulling the ass out of the pit," returned His Worship with a smile

A Bald Point of Law.

It was a bald question of law all the way through as Mr. Peck sought to show. He held that banks were not included in the list of occupations that the law said must not be followed on the Sabbath. He said that a lawyer for example could work on Sunday which His Worship was not prepared to deny. He said that the business of banking did not come within the meaning of the act under which they were proceeding and asked that his client be discharged on that account.

His Worship reserved his judgment for ten days.

Later an interesting discussion occurred in the police court corridor between the newspapermen and the Chief and Mr. Peck, concerning the case. Mr. Peck declared that the act could not touch the newspapermen for working on Sundays which was not very encouraging to the reporters. The result of the case will be awaited with interest as it will settle a fine point of law that has never been up in the city before.

WOMEN INJURED DRIVER IS FINED

Defendant Arranged to Pay Half the Medical Bill

William O'Brien, while driving a livery horse on George street, ran down two women, one of whom was rather elderly. He injured one so severely that she was kept in the house for two days, while the other one was given a bad shock. Both were knocked down when crossing George street to go west on Hunter.

Constable Blade was standing at the corner and saw the whole performance. Assisted by Ernest Slight, a passerby, he helped the two women into Madill's drug store, where they were given aid and a cab summoned to take them home.

O'Brien, instead of stopping after knocking the women down, drove on and it was not until he was down as far as Grafton's store that he looked around and saw what he had done.

In police court this morning he declared that he never saw the women, nor was he aware that he had collided with them. His story was disbelieved by the Magistrate, who fined him $10 and costs, or $15 in all.

O'Brien, after being summoned to appear in court, visited the home of the injured women and arranged to pay half the madical bill.

FOUR KILLED

Fifty-six Wounded in Naval Battle off Falkland Islands

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Buenos Ayres, Dec. 18.—The commander of the Argentine cruiser San Martin just arrived in port says he met the British cruiser Carnarvon after the battle off the Falkland Islands and exchanged visits with the captain.

He was told the British loss was four men killed and fifty-six wounded, all of whom are being cared for aboard ship.

The German cruisers opened fire at thirteen thousand yards and the British held fire until within eight thousand yards.

COURT RULES GROUND FLOOR MUST PAY

At the adjourned sitting of the Court of Revision at three o'clock the court ruled that the ground floor occupants of George street stores must be assessed for the street paving. It will be remembered a number of merchants were present at the sitting of the court on Wednesday evening and expressed their dissatisfaction at the manner in which the assessment was made, and the matter was left over till today to permit Mr. W. F. Johnston, chairman of the court, to look up the law. He found that the owner must be assessed, and where the tenant pays the taxes the occupant of the ground floor is the one assessed. This frees occupants of offices and rooms on upper floors of paying taxes on the street pavement.

MOTHER DIDN'T KNOW.

Meeting one of his former employes in a naval uniform, a London merchant asked the young man why he hadn't joined the army instead.

"My mother wouldn't let me," replied the youth.

"What! A big, hulking fellow like you, and you say your mother wouldn't let you?"

"Yes," said the recruit, "so I volunteered for mine sweeping."

"But that is far more dangerous than fighting in the army," said the ex-employer, amazed.

"I know it," the boy chuckled, "but mother doesn't."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1914

THE LATE SENATOR JAFFRAY.

THE CAREER of the late Senator Robert Jaffray, just closed, in his eighty-third year, is another case of what a Scotchmen can do in another country than his own. In a sense, the Scotchman is ubiquitous, for wherever he goes he seems to be able to adapt himself so that he succeeds, whether it be in gay Paris, in southern clime, in what were once the wilds of Glengarry, in lumber camp or western homestead. He succeeds when he could not have done so in his own loved, romantic, but often unalluring country.

The late Senator Jaffray was a stalwart son of that rugged country that has given so many successful men to other lands. Born on his father's farm on the very edge of the historic field of Bannockburn, where Robert Bruce overthrew the English hosts, he was reared amid the dearest associations of his native land. There he developed that physical vigor, his intense patriotism and strong convictions, that, when he came to Canada in his twentieth year, were the very qualities that made him an outstanding and successful man.

Strong convictions, Presbyterianism, intense feelings, are characteristics making for independence and tenacity of purpose that, undoubtedly, helped the late Senator to achieve in the commercial world that standing, success and influence that won for him whatever political power he exercised. They were qualities that, in many ways, would prevent him being an outstanding political man. He was a Liberal, a strong party man, with little tolerance.

Breadth of view beyond his own party limitations he had not in any particular degree. His characteristics were such as would make for success in business, even success as an editor or director of a party newspaper. He was essentially a man of character, a man of the Liberal party in Canada, but, the breadth of view that comes with larger and expanding interests, and which stamps a man as being greater than his work, ever above his achievements, was not in his nature.

The late Senator Jaffray exhibits that vigorous type of mind that omits nothing within the range, in a sense a limited range, of its immediate interests. He had great capacity for work, for money-getting, for party interests. He was honourable in his dealings. As president of the Globe Printing Company, he controlled Canada's leading Liberal newspaper, yet he did not require the editors of that journal always to advocate his views, and, in fact, that newspaper often ran counter to his monetary interests. He might have made himself much richer than he was, and have swung the Globe into the path of his monetary interests, but that would have been false to the traditions and responsibilities of journalism. That would not be good business, and, if the late Senator possessed any characteristic more than another, it was splendid judgment in commercial affairs. He had a mind for correct, honest business that few equalled.

For the success that has crowned the labour of his long span of eighty-three years, he deserves praise. The Liberal party has lost one of its strongest supporters; Canadian commerce and finance, one of its captains, and Canada a good citizen.

KEEPING UP THE TRADITIONS OF THE BRITISH NAVY.

THE BRITISH NAVY owes many of its finest traditions to the merchant ships flying the Union Jack. In fact, the British fleet first became important as a trading fleet under the direction of great trading companies, like the East and West India Trading Companies. There was a time when the struggle for mastery of the seas was a struggle, not between Britain and her enemies or her rivals, but between British and Dutch, French or other trading companies. These companies carried on war on their own account whenever their self-allotted preserves were infringed on, and their ships were always available to their respective governments or kings whenever international hostilities occurred.

The days of the trading companies were times when the men of Britain went to sea for the love of it. There doubtless were other motives, too—the prospect of gain in large amounts, promotion in rank in the navy, of a wealthy marriage, of influence in politics, but, in spite of all these motives, there was an attractiveness to the sailor's life that it alone offered. Adventure, the heightening effect of risking one's life and not likely losing it, the curiosity to visit far-away, strange lands, the thrilling tales of adventure and of sea serpents, all contributed to make British men go to sea for the love of it. Hence, there has always been an esprit de corps in the British marine that has won most of its glories. For the great victories of the past were notable for the odds against the British in the numbers of opposing ships and men. The defeat of the Armada, and Trafalgar, are two of the many cases where Britain's enemies had forces superior in numbers, but not in generalship or fighting power.

While a powerful battleship in the present war has little chance in a fight with one having guns of greater calibre and longer range, yet the old spirit survives, and already there have been excellent examples given that will add some of the finest exploits to the story of British seamanship. Recently there was the exploit of the submarine B 11, which performed its task with the cleverness, daring and elusiveness of a mighty monster of the sea. There was the daring of Admiral Cradock in engaging an enemy of much superior strength, and sinking to death in the waves of the South Pacific. The submarine E 3 has also performed signal services in the North Sea. The battle off the Magellan Islands in the South Atlantic has also added glory to the British arms, but these are the exploits of war vessels, built for fighting, and have been determined in some cases by the superior strength or gun power of one or the other. The battles in the South Pacific and Atlantic were so determined, although there is this to be said in favour of Admiral Cradock's squadron, that it is said that six hundred shots were fired at the Glasgow, of which only five hit the target. In gunnery or the science of operating big naval guns, the Germans have shown themselves much inferior to the British.

The merchant marine, however, is not without its laurels, and the exploit of the Ortega is well worthy of the best traditions of the British trading ships.

The Ortega, a liner of 8,000 tons, sailed from Valparaiso with some 300 French reservists on board. When she had arrived close to the western entrance of the Straits of Magellan, a German cruiser of the Dresden class suddenly appeared and gave chase. Be it remarked that the normal speed of the Ortega is only some 14 knots, whereas the speed of the German cruiser was at least 21 knots.

Under those circumstances, the master of the Ortega took a heroic resolve. He called for volunteers to assist in stoking his vessel. That appeal met with a hearty response; firemen, engineers, and volunteers, stripped to the waist, set to work with a will, and the master stated that they actually succeeded in whacking the old ship (she was built in 1906) up to a good 18 knots.

The master headed his ship straight for the entrance of a passage known as Nelson's Strait; and he made for the strait at full speed, hotly pursued by the German cruiser, which kept firing at him with two heavy bow guns, the shells of which sent up fountains of spray in the wake of the vessel. Luckily, none of the shots took effect, and the Ortega succeeded in entering Nelson's Strait, where the German cruiser did not dare to follow her.

In order to realize the hardihood of this action on the part of the master of the Ortega, it must be remembered that Nelson's Strait is entirely uncharted, and that the narrow, tortuous passage in question constitutes a veritable nightmare for navigators; bristling, as it does, with reefs and pinnicle-rocks, swept by fierce currents and tide-rips, and with the cliffs on either side sheer-to, without any anchorage.

However, the master of the Ortega managed to get his vessel safely through the dangerous passage, employing the device of sending boats ahead to sound every yard of the passage. Eventually, by a miracle of luck and good seamanship, he worked his way into Smyth's Channel, without having sustained even a scratch to his plates, and finally brought his vessel to the port of Rio de Janeiro on October 1st.

When it is remembered that, as already stated, Nelson's Strait is absolutely uncharted, and that never before had a vessel of any size attempted that most perilous passage, it will be admitted that the captain's action in taking an 8,000-ton steamer safely through that passage constitutes a most notable feat of pluck and skilful seamanship, and it is reassuring to know that the old spirit of daring and resource is still alive in our mercantile marine.

The captain of the Ortega, Mr. Douglas R. Kinneir, has been thanked by the British Admiralty for his daring and skill in bringing his ship safely to port, as well as by the owners, the Pacific Steam Navigation Company. No doubt the war will not end without other exploits of a similar nature, proving that the spirit that has made Britannia mistress of the seas is still the mainspring of her naval power.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE ANNUAL STATEMENT of the Bank of Ottawa, which appears elsewhere in this issue, is one of the most satisfactory in the history of that bank. It shows that this bank, one of the largest and strongest in Canada, has been operated at a profit of fifteen and a half per cent., which shows that a very careful and efficient management must have been in progress. A careful perusal of the report will be of interest, and shows in detail the position of the bank.

THE HODDEN GREY.

(Wilfred Lorraine Anskorn, in London Times.)

Way, way for the Hodden Grey,
For the fiery cross burns red;
Thro' London Town, borne up and down,
The ancient spell has sped.
O'er hill and dale, each warlike Gael
Is called to meet the foe,
And spirit feet on the London street,
March with us as we go.

Way, way for the Hodden Grey,
For the lads from o'er the Forth,
From Tweed and Tay and Silvery Spey
The shieling in the North.
Some ne'er hath seen the heather green
On hill or highland ben,
But the spirit's there to do or dare,
That led our Highland men.

Way, way for the Hodden Grey,
For we fear no foreign foe;
Our grandsires bold, as in days of old,
March with us as we go.
For Scotland's might, for Britain's right,
We march to win the day,
And the foe shall shout, 'mid battle rout,
"Way for the Hodden Grey."

Still Deluded.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The German Chancellor, Von Bethmann-Hollwegg, [illegible]fesses to think Germany can still win. And anybody may be fool enough to think that who was fool enough to help get Germany into such a war.

HORSES FOR WAR

Upkeep of Cavalry and Artillery Horses Costs Huge Sum of Money

From the earliest times the horse has been a potent factor in war, and to-day his education is a delicate and serious matter, undertaken at great expense by all the nations of the world. Germany needs 1,000,000 horses for cavalry and artillery to put her colossal forces in the field. France requires probably 750,000, and even Great Britain has needed as many as 230,000.

Although England in peace times mounts only two-thirds of her cavalry, her horse bill amounts to about $400,000 a year—a figure which may be multiplied by four or five for the German army. In most countries omnibus, farm, and domestic horses are registered as being available in time of war for miscellaneous service, and for this anything from $30,000 to $150,000 a year may be paid by a military nation. France spends upward of $600,000 a year on horses for her great armies. As a general rule, the recruits are five years old, and cost $200 each.

ABOUT BERLIN, ONTARIO

There are nineteen thousand people in Berlin and fifteen thousand of them are German or of German descent. Add to these another ten thousand in the adjoining town of Waterloo and on the prosperous farms of Waterloo County. Practically all of these people speak German in their homes, read German papers, eat German dishes, sing German songs, and go to market in a thoroughly German way—going to market is one of the most popular outdoor sports in Berlin. And yet they are practically as one in sympathy with Britain and her allies in the present war. There are exceptions, of course. There are no doubt a few who secretly rejoice when the papers tell a tale of British loss; there are others—but very few—who, having but recently come from the Fatherland and not as yet fully appreciating the value of the liberty which they enjoy under the folds of the British flag, would welcome the opportunity of striking a blow for the German cause, and there may be found here and there a reservist of the Kaiser's army who might be labelled "dangerous." But these German sympathizers are few and they seem to be extremely modest in respect to their views. They no more represent the feeling of Berlin as a community than do the vapid outpourings of Bourassa represent the community feeling of the Province of Quebec.—From "The City which is too German to stand for the War Lord," by Ben Deacon in Beck's Weekly (Montreal).

Preserving Railroad Ties

In Canada last year about 10 per cent. of the cross-ties purchased by both electric and steam railways were given a preservative treatment to retard decay. The practice is a fairly recent one, as is seen by the fact that in 1910 practically no ties were treated at all, and that the percentage of treated material has increased steadily since that time. The treatment is most profitable when applied to the harder, stronger woods that if used untreated would decay before the end of their mechanical life.

The Housekeeper

Oh, Woman, what is the thing you do,
and what is the thing you cry?
Is your house not warm and enclosed from harm, that you thrust the curtain by?
And have we not toiled to build for you a peace from the winds outside,
That you seek to know how the battles go and ride where the fighters ride?

You have taken my spindle away from me, you have taken away my loom,
You bid me sit in the dust of it, at peace without cloth or broom.
You have shut me still with a sleepy will, with nor evil nor good to do While our house the World that we keep for God should be garnished and swept anew.

The evil things that have waxed and grown while I sat with my white hands still,
They have meshed our World till they twined and curled through my very window-sill;
Shall I sit and smile at mine ease the while that my house is wrongly kept?
It is mine to see that the house of me is straightened and cleansed and swept!

My daughters strive for their souls alive, harried and starved and cold—
Shall I bear it long, who was swift and strong in guarding them white of old?
My children cry in our house the World, neglected and hard-opprest
Is my right not then to command all men to be still while the children rest?

I who labored beside my mate when the work of the World began,
The watch I kept while my children
slept I will keep to-day my Man:
I have crouched too long by the little hearths at the bidding of Man my mate—
I go to kindle the Hearth of the World, that Man has left desolate!

Germany Threatened Unions

Mr. J. A. Seddon, President of the British Trade Union Congress, speaking at the Labor Temple, Toronto, told of an incident at the last International Trades Union Congress in Europe which throws an interesting sidelight upon the war from the German point of view. "A regular feature of all our congresses," said Mr. Seddon, "has been a resolution urging the nations towards a state of peaceful relationship. But last time the German delegates asked to have the peace resolution eliminated from our program and in an explanatory conference with the Executives of the congress, they told us that they had received a direct intimation from German officials that if peace resolutions were passed with their consent all funds of labor unions in Germany would be sequestered and the organizations themselves be dissolved."

The International Hotel, of Virginia, Nev., famed as the home of men who dug their millions from the depths of the Comstock mines, was destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Carman, Acquitted on Murder Charge Says One Experience Has Been Sufficient

Mrs Edwin Carman.

New York, Dec. 18.—Mrs. Florence Carman's recent trial for the alleged murder of Mrs. Louise D. Bailey has developed one feature she did not expect. It has complicated the servant problem for her. She has visited employment agencies repeatedly, but everywhere she goes there seems to be an oversupply only of Negro maids.

Her experience with Celia Coleman, her Negro servant, who at first stood by her in the murder case, but later accused her of having confessed she was guilty, has turned Mrs. Carman against members of Celia's race. Recently when an employment agency manager suggested that she try a Negro servant Mrs. Carman threw up hands and exclaimed:

"No, thank you. I've had all the experience I want with that class of help."

The White Death

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

In 1850 Mlle. Antoinette Garnier, named for the ill fated queen of France who lost her head on the guillotine, was one of the most attractive of the younger girls of New Orleans. The Crescent City was in those days one of the gayest cities, if not the gayest, in the United States. Being a city of the French, it contained a number of emigres of the revolution whereby the Bourbon kings lost the throne, and they were of the noblesse, some of them having the right to titles that they did not use. New Orleans socially was delightful, but more foreign than any other American city.

Edwin Wentworth, a young northerner from the state of Maryland, went to the Crescent City to spend a winter, attracted thither by the reports of the unique social life. Having letters to the "best" people, he was invited everywhere. He met Mlle. Garnier, and a love affair ensued. It was arranged that when the spring came on they should be married and both go north to the groom's home.

In those days there was frequent intercourse between New Orleans and France. While desirable persons came out to the new world to make homes for themselves, occasionally one would come whose absence would have been preferable. Among these was Antoine Le Voisier, a duelist who had killed so many opponents that he had acquired the sobriquet of the White Death.

One evening at a cafe young Wentworth saw him, asked who he was and on being told remarked in a voice loud enough for Le Voisier to hear that the authorities of Louisiana should ship the fellow back to France. The result was a challenge. If Wentworth had come from Massachusetts or any northern state he might have declined it. But, hailing from a border state, in which dueling had not entirely died out, he felt compelled to fight. He was rash to have made the remark in the White Death's hearing and rash to go on the field with one who had fought twenty duels and killed ten men. Wentworth was entirely unskilled in the use of weapons, and there was no time to learn how to use them.

The result was that he went out to meet his antagonist, and another murder was done.

Mlle. Garnier was so crushed by the tragedy that for awhile her life seemed to be in danger, and as she recovered her strength she showed signs of mental derangement. The social world saw her no more, and so rapid are the changes in the world of fashion that in a few months her place there seemed to have been filled and she forgotten.

It was not long after Wentworth's murder that the cholera visited America, and New Orleans was not immune from its devastations. But it seemed that nothing could even temporarily obliterate the people's desire for amusement. A masked ball was given in a large hall, and, although it was not an affair to call out fashionable society, especially at such a time, many of the bon ton went there to divest themselves of the gloom surrounding them.

The contrast within and without the hall was a fearful one. Within was a dance of life, without a dance of death. But the death from without broke in among the merrymakers. A figure entered the ball dressed in white flowing robes, the mask as white as chalk, with great hollow eyes, a grinning mouth and rotten teeth. It advanced to one wearing a Louis XV. costume and stood staring at him. The merriment ceased, and all eyes were bent on the two figures. The Louis XV. figure took off his mask and displayed the features of Le Voisier.

The reason for his unmasking was apparent. He had seen himself confronted by one dressed as the White Death and was desirous to avenge the insult.

"Whoever you are who has offered this affront you shall pay for it," he said.

"I am the White Death."

"Meet me in an hour in the wood," replied Le Voisier, referring to a wood on the outskirts of the city where duels were fought.

"Not without a reason. For me (the White Death) to confront you, the White Death, is no insult. Take that!"

He struck Le Voisier with the back of his hand, drawing a drop of blood, which seemed to come from a ring he wore on his finger. Le Voisier paid no attention to the blow other than to say that if his antagonist was satisfied he was; that he would expect to meet the person who had insulted him as soon as they could reach the wood; then, turning, he started for an exit.

It was noticed before he had taken a dozen steps that he staggered, and before he reached the door he fell. The specter followed him and stood over him, looking down upon him. Le Voisier writhed in agony, but kept his eye fixed on his other self, the White Death. Presently the latter removed his mask and exposed the features, not of a man, but a woman. Some there were who recognized her as Mlle. Garnier, though she was much changed from the beauty she had been before her lover's death.

"You are no longer the White Death," she said to the dying man. "I have taken your place to avenge your last victim. This ring is more powerful than any weapon of yours. It contains a deadly poison."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 17.—Wheat opened ⅛c to ¼c higher this morning, caused by firmer Liverpool cables. There was a good demand for wheat and fractional advances occurred. At about noon Winnipeg had gained ¼c over the opening with a strong undertone. Active sales for export were claimed to be off today, altho reports were to the effect that Italy and France were buying from southern markets.

The close was ⅝c higher for wheat, ⅛c to ¾c higher for oats and ¼c up for flax. Cash demand was good. Barley and flax were in good demand, while flax was slow. Inspections Wednesday 193 cars, as against 757 last year and in sight were 240 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 17.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat was not so keen today, but cables were firm at the late advance in prices, which, however, exporters were not disposed to accept and business in consequence was quiet. The demand for all lines is rather quiet and the volume of business doing small. The feeling prevails in the market for flour, but the demand is still limited from all sources which indicates that buyers are well supplied for the present. Demand for millfeed is fairly good.

TRAINING SHIP STRIKES MINE

Austrian Crew and Cadets Have Lost Their Lives

LONDON, Dec. 18.—In a despatch from Rome the correspondent of the Central News says:—

"A Trieste official has announced the blowing up of a mine and the sinking of the Austrian training ship Beethoven, with the loss of the crew and all the cadets on board."

None of the standard naval reference books has mention of a training ship named Beethoven, belonging to Austria-Hungary. The dual monarchy has four or five ships devoted to the training of cadets, and it is possible since the outbreak of hostilities other vessels have been used for this purpose. When a ship is assigned for training purposes, her name often is changed.

ABOUT TO SEIZE ISLANDS WHEN DISASTER CAME

First Detailed Account of Battle in South Atlantic Says Enemy Were Deceived Regarding Strength of British.

Admiral Count von Spee

Admiral Count Von Spee, commander of the German fleet destroyed off the Falkland Islands.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 18. — The first detailed accounts of the naval battle on Dec. 8 when four German cruisers were sent to the bottom reached here yesterday from Puerto Gallegos, Patagonia.

According to these accounts the Germans were on their way to seize the Falkland Islands, British possessions, when they came unexpectedly upon a lone British warship. The other members of the British fleet were taking on supplies from neighboring islands at the time. Before the Germans were aware of the strength of their opponents these ships closed in on them and the fate of Admiral von Spee's squadron was soon sealed.

The story of the battle was told by passengers on the British steamer Orissa, which arrived at Punta Arenas from Callao, Chile.

They say the losses of the British were placed at eight men.

It was a formidable British squadron which faced the Germans. Included in it were the battleship Canopus, the battle cruisers Invincible and Inflexible, and the cruisers Kent, Cornwall, Carnarvon, Bristol and Glasgow. It far outmatched in strength the German squadron, consisting of five cruisers — Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Leipzig, Nurnberg and Dresden.

The British squadron arrived at Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, on Dec. 7, to take on supplies. The next morning the Canopus, which was guarding the entrance to the port, sighted a hostile warship. Four others quickly came into view and were recognized as the squadron of Admiral von Spee. The German warships bad left the Chilean Islands of Juan Fernandez Nov. 15 for the Falkland Islands, to take possession of the islands and destroy the wireless station.

Only the Canopus was visible at first to the Germans, who steamed straight to her. The Canopus opened fire and the other British warships rushed to her assistance.

The Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig formed in battle line. The Nurnberg and Dresden, however, dropped back from the firing line.

The British warships concentrated their fire on the Scharnhorst, which sank after an hour's fighting. When it became evident that the Scharnhorst, Admiral von Spee's flagship, was doomed, her crew assembled on the forward deck. The Scharnhorst refused to surrender and soon plunged beneath the waves. The crew preserved its formation as the ship went down and cheered as the waters closed over them.

The Glasgow engaged the Leipzig and sank her. The Gneisenau went down eight miles from Port Stanley. The Nurnberg attempted to escape, but after a pursuit of two hours was sunk. The Carnarvon pursued the Dresden, but was not swift enough to overhaul her and the German warship escaped.

After the battle the British picked up 194 Germans, including a few officers. Of these survivors 100 were from the crews of the two German colliers. An opportunity to surrender was offered the colliers, but it was refused and they were sunk.

The cruiser Cornwall was damaged slightly below the waterline. None of the other British warships were damaged.

On Dec. 10 funeral services were held for the eight British sailors who were killed, in the presence of the commanders and crews of the squadron.

The British Admiralty report of the battle stated that only seven men of the British squadron lost their lives.

NERVE SPECIALISTS NEEDED.

Terrific Strain of Battle Tells On the Mentality of Men.

WARSAW, Dec. 18.—A new first aid corps consisting of nerve specialists for the treatment of soldiers who have become insane during battle has been organized.

The necessity for this form of treatment is growing as the result of the intensity of the nervous strain under which the soldiers are fighting.

An instance in point is the case of a second lieutenant who escaped unwounded from a fight in which there were only thirteen survivors out of 240 men. He is a mental wreck.

It is said that there are many similar cases.

Wounded Frenchmen Back at Front.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—No fewer than 54 per cent. of the French wounded returned to the firing line before Dec. 12, according to interesting figures supplied yesterday by the surgical department of the Ministry of War. Of the remainder 24 per cent. had been given convalescent leave, 17 per cent. were still in hospitals, and 1 1-2 per cent. had been discharged from the army. Three and one-half per cent. of the wounded died.

These statistics demonstrate the remarkable advance made in surgery, and show a lower percentage of deaths from wounds than in any preceding war.

ARE MENDING THEIR LINE

Russians Are Taking up New Positions to Meet Onslaught.

LONDON, Dec. 18—"The Russians are retiring along the entire front in Galicia and Poland."

This statement, officially issued at Vienna is the outstanding feature of last night's news from the battlefronts.

While there is no confirmation of this from other sources, such a move on the part of the Russians would be quite in line with the announcements in despatches from Petrograd that the Russians, threatened on both flanks, had decided to take up new positions where they would be better able to meet the onslaughts which are being launched against them by the Austro-Germans from the Carpathians to the East Prussian frontier.

Should the Austro-German armies, as on previous occasions follow the Russians in Poland another big battle will soon be in progress, which may decide whether the Germans are to get to Warsaw or whether the Russians are again to threaten an invasion of Germany.

The delay of the Russians in fulfilling expectations that they would prove a serious menace to German territory is a disappointment to the peoples of the allied countries, but military men express the view that it is better for Russia that she should meet her foes in her own territory, where the means of communications would be more on an equality.

Flanking operations on a great scale are going on against the Russian armies in the eastern war area, according to the Petrograd correspondent of The London Times, who says that the German armies have been heavily reinforced, enabling Marshal von Hindenberg to send two corps to help the Austrians drive the Russians from the Carpathian passes.

An official report from Vienna tells of a sortie of the garrison of Przemysl and of successes in South Poland and Galicia.

A Turkish official statement claims a victory over the Russians in the Vilayet of Van, Asia Minor. This is contradicted by a report of the Russian General Staff of the Caucasus. The Turkish statement tells of the shelling by a British cruiser of a Turkish water tower between Jopza and Gazza Palestine. A British squadron shelled Turkish troops that had concentrated on Sunday on the coast of the Gulf of Saros, north of the Dardanelles.

The retreat of the Austrians from Servia is described as a disaster by a correspondent of The London Times, who went over the route, which was littered with bodies and military material of every kind.

Egypt is Now British and Sir Arthur MacMahon the New High Commissioner

LONDON, Dec. 18—Egypt has been declared a British protectorate. This announcement was made officially last night.

The official press bureau last night issued the following statement concerning the making of Egypt a British protectorate:

"His Britannic Majesty's principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs gives notice that in view of a state of war arising out of the action of Turkey, Egypt is placed under the protection of his Majesty, and will henceforth constitute a British protectorate.

"The suzerainty of Turkey over Egypt is thus terminated, and his Majesty's Government will adopt all measures necessary for the defence of Egypt and the protection of its inhabitants and interests.

HILMI PASHA.
The disposed Khedive of Egypt.

"The King has been pleased to approve the appointment of Lt.-Col. Sir Arthur Henry McMahon to be his Majesty's High Commissioner for Egypt."

Sir Arthur McMahon has been Foreign Secretary to the Government of India since 1911. He was born in 1862, and has had a long career in the military and political services, principally in India, Afghanistan and Persia. He has had charge of many missions of a military-political nature for the Indian Government and of commissions for the demarcation of boundaries. During the royal visit to India he was Master of Ceremonies to the King.

The proclamation of Egypt as a British protectorate was foreshadowed in recent despatches. On Nov. 3 Egypt was placed under martial law, and Maj.-Gen. Sir John Grenfell Maxwell, commander of the forces in Egypt, was placed in military control of the country.

HOME GUARD

Quarter-Master Sgt.—4 inverted bars, surmounted by 1 star.

Color Sergeant—3 bars, surmounted by 1 crown.

Sergeants—3 bars.

Corporals—2 bars.

Pioneer Sergeants—3 bars with crossed axes.

Musketry Sergeant—3 bars with crossed rifles.

Now that the commissioned officers are indicated by the shoulder straps, it is not only necessary but looks very soldier-like that the rules as to saluting be carried out properly. All commissioned officers, that is ranks from Honorary Colonel to Lieutenant, are entitled to a salute when addressed or passed by any other rank. When a non-commissioned officer is addressed, the party addressing should stand strictly at attention, they are not entitled to a salute. It should also be remembered that officers are expected to return the salute in the proper manner; nothing looks so slovenly as to see officers and men standing around addressing each other as Tom, Dick and Harry instead of in the proper manner by their ranks.

Officers should be addressed as "Captain Jones" and non-commissioned officers as "Sergeant Smith" and privates by their ranks as "Private Wilson." It must be remembered that the title of Private is just as honorable as that of Colonel, and these ranks should be used at all times. These rules which have been obtained from one of the lecturers of the corp should be carefully studied and as this city is expected to be one of the military headquarters, all slips of this nature, will be very quickly noticed and the Home Guard must be the leaders and not be considered one of the secondary features of the military organizations of the country.

ENTRIES EVERY DAY FOR LOCAL POULTRY ASSOCIATION'S SHOW

Entries are coming in every day for the annual show of the Peterboro Poultry Association, which will hold forth in the market hall, on January 5, 6 and 7. Among the exhibitors will be W. E. Pakenham and Stan. Hendren of Norwood, who were prominent winners at the Guelph Winter Fair. Silver Campines from the yards of Messrs. W. E. Pakenham and Stan Hendren held their own among the best stock in the land. Mr. Pakenham won 1st prize for best hen in a class of ten entries, fourth prize for best cockerel in a class of sixteen, and 3rd prize for best pullet in a class of nineteen, while Mr. Hendren's pullet was awarded the second prize. As this show is rated the first in Canada, both owners are much elated over their success. The sweepstakes in the poultry show was won by an Ingersoll man, whom it is said afterwards refused $300 for the bird. The same class also carried off the sweepstakes for the best pen of poultry.

BANK OF OTTAWA EARNS 15½ P. C.

Fortieth Annual Report is Satisfactory

Up to the present time every bank reporting for the year 1914 has shown decreased earnings as compared with 1913. The Bank of Ottawa, which has just held its 40th annual meeting, is no exception to this rule. Net profits for the year ended 30th November, 1914, amounted to $620,691 as compared with $706,740 for the previous year. Despite the shrinkage in net earnings, the bank is in as sound a position as at any time in its history due to the policy it adopted of maintaining an unusually large proportion of its assets in liquid or quickly available form. It also made provision for any possible shrinkage in its securities by setting aside from profits sufficient reserves to offset these losses. This provision adds to the strength of the bank's position although for the time it affects the volume of its net profits.

Among the decreases noted from the report are a slight shrinkage in deposits, a contraction in the note circulation, decrease in current loans, and smaller total assets than in 1913. The total assets now stand at $53,529,000 as compared with $54,674,000 last year. The earnings were at the rate of over 15.5 per cent. on the paid-up capital.

MAIL RECOVERED FROM EMPRESS OF IRELAND

Today Mr. C. J. Schwertt, 58 Victoria Ave., received through the dead letter office, a letter which was amongst the tons of mail matter, carried by the Empress of Ireland, when the liner was lost off Father Point. The letter was addressed to his brother in Kent, England.

Miss Era Hazelwood, 87 Gladstone Ave., also received a letter, written by her, and which was carried on the ill-fated liner. Both letters are well preserved.

A NATION OF SELF-HELPERS.

The man that's able to work and is out of work is the kind of man that we are determined to make into a busy producer. This is a problem for practical people. Now that winter is near, we can't afford to leave this problem to the charitable organizations. Canada is a poor land for organized charity. This is no country of slums. It is a land of self-helpers. Suppose that for every man, woman and child in Canada a hundred dollars were spent every year in buying Canadian goods. Total $800,000,00. That is more than half the total amount of goods turned out of Canadian factories. That eight hundred millions of goods made, means more than $150,000,000 paid out in wages. Add that $150,000,000 to the gross amount of money spent for Canadian goods and going as near as possible to a peak load. Bear in mind that every dollar spent for Canadian goods adds about 20 cents to the amount of money paid in wages. It means twenty cents more to spend for goods made in Canada. The man who gets the wages becomes a partner with the man who buys the goods, to keep up the grand total of goods made by the workers of Canada, for Canadians. This is the practical side of self-help. It's the wages paid to the workers that represents the business done in the factories and the prosperity that affects everybody's pocket.

$200 FOR DR. GORDON FROM MEETINGS AT WOODSTOCK

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

With the close of the Christian citizenship campaign in this city Wednesday night, members of the committee of laymen which had charge of the meetings were busy today settling up financial arrangements, accounts, etc. Dr. Gordon has not yet left the city but before he does so tonight he will be presented with a marked cheque for $200 which is his share of moneys collected. As was announced the Doctor received the collections of the last two meetings. These amounted to about $150 and the committee made up the balance of the $200. Considering that cities like Peterboro and Ottawa gave $600 as Dr. Gordon's share, the result in Woodstock has been somewhat disappointing in the neighborhod of $300 being hoped for. The committee, however, realizes the demands made upon Woodstock people during the past few months and the members are extremely pleased that all expenses of the campaign were met.

WHO HAS THE MUFF?

On the night Hon. W. T. White was at the Grand Opera House, a lady sitting in one of the north boxes dropped her muff, accidentally of course. It alighted on an elderly gentleman's head below. It has disappeared and although suspicion pointed to the man it hit neither muff or said gentleman have since been located. The muff was a costly one and any one knowing about it would confer a favor on Chief Thompson by getting in touch with him immediately.

DELAY IN MAIL FOR SALISBURY

Faulty Addresses Said to be the Cause

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—Regarding the complaints which are being made of delays in delivering mail addressed to the Canadian division on Salisbury Plain or of letters not reaching their destination at all, the Post Office Department has been communicating with the Imperial authorities.

The view expressed in official circles here is that much of the difficulty is caused by faulty addresses. Many companies since the training began have been assigned to different regiments, or regiments have been assigned to different brigades than was the case at first. Where this has occurred, and new addresses have not been sent home, it is exceedingly difficult to locate the persons to whom the communications are addressed.

LION HUNT IN NEW YORK

Performing Animal Dashes Through Theatre Into Street

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A lion hunt was staged in the streets of New York yesterday afternoon. Five lions which escaped from the stage of the Eighty-sixth Theatre at a time when the house was filled with a matinee audience were attacked by scores of policemen with revolvers and finally subdued. Only one of the lions escaped to the street. It was killed in a tenement house after it had attacked two policemen and severely injured both of them. The other four lions were cornered in the theatre building and driven back to their cages.

A police sergeant and a policeman were shot, the former seriously by bullets intended for the lions. Two other men, it was reported, also were shot. Dozens of women fainted and more than one hundred were knocked down in the wild stampede to reach the doors when the lions walked off the stage.

Two hospitals sent ambulances to the theatre. The scene of the lion hunt, East Eighty-sixth street, near Lexington avenue, was the centre of a throng that numbered tens of thousands before the chase finally ended.

Commission To Inquire.

LONDON, Dec. 18.— A committee composed of Viscount Bryce, Sir Frederick Pollack, Sir Edward Clarke, Sir Alfred Hopkinson, Prof. Hal Fisher and Harold Cox has been appointed by Prime Minister Asquith to make an inquiry into the accusations of outrage and breaches of the laws of war committed by Germany.

The Premier had promised Parliament that he would appoint such a commission.

Col. Macdonell Is Injured.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 18. — Word was received here yesterday to the effect that Lt.-Col. A. H. Macdonell, general staff officer of the first division, and now on the headquarters' staff of the first contingent, has been seriously injured at Salisbury Plain by being thrown from his mount. Col. Macdonell, is a brother of Claude Macdonell, M.P., of Toronto, and had a distinguished career in the South African war.

Overdue Liner Safe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The steamer Florida, overdue here ten days, will arrive to-day. The steamer has been delayed because of bad weather.

GROUND GAINED

Allies Turning Enemy's Left Centre in Flanders

PARIS, Dec. 18. — The Germans' left centre in Flanders is slowly but surely being turned by the allies.

Last night's official statement contains the following significant passage:

"In Belgium our troops have gained ground to the north of the road from Ypres to Menin."

This, taken in conjunction with the other advances made by the allies to the east of Ypres, shows that the Ypres salient has been straightened to the southeast, and it is now apparent that the line has been connected with that established by the British, which advanced to Passchendaele a week ago.

The advance made at Gheluvelt, where the afternoon statement says the allies have been able to strengthen their positions, enables the troops of Gen. Joffre to strongly support this new battle-front. The fighting in this region has been continuous since the allies resumed the offensive three days ago.

The terrible battle to the north, where, following the debouchment of the French and Belgians from Nieuport to occupy the line from the west of Lombeaertzyde to the St. Georges farms, the Germans braved the combined fire of the French land batteries and of the British naval guns bombarding from the sea to attempt recapture of their lost ground, still rages violently.

The advance made to the western suburbs of Ostend Wednesday was in a great measure owing to the activity of the warships. The shelling by the heavy guns of the battleships made the German positions untenable, and owing to the punishment inflicted a number of their trenches were evacuated

Lost Case Raised.

A wound in the right arm, which Fritz Kreisler, the famous violinist, has sustained when fighting in the Austrian army, may raise an interesting question of insurance law. All great instrumentalists now insure their hands, arms, etc. Paderewski, for instance, has insured each finger separately for $25,000. Kreisler, no doubt, has taken similar precautions. The question is whether wounds received in battle can be regarded as accidents and come under the cover of general insurance.

DEAD MAY REACH 100.

Official List In Hartlepool Is Now Placed at 82.

HARTLEPOOL, Eng., Dec. 18.—(Via London.) — An inquest began here yesterday over the bodies of 79 victims of the German bombardment, killed in Hartlepool and West Hartlepool.

In opening the court, the coroner said that never before in English history had an inquest been held under similar circumstances, and that he hoped the occasion would never occur again. The shelling of the Hartlepools, he added, afforded a faint idea of what Belgium and France had suffered through the German invasion.

The evidence, though mostly of a formal character, brought to light some pathetic cases. An old woman was picking up coal dropped from cars on the railway embankment when she was killed by a shell. An old man and his two daughters were just starting breakfast in the kitchen when a shell burst in the room, killing all three of them. A young woman went to the house of her aged mother, intending to conduct her to a place of safety. Entering the passageway she stumbled across her mother's body. A shell had pierced the roof and killed her. An elderly man, who thought the gun-firing was that of British ships at practice, sat down unconcernedly to breakfast. A shell carried away the corner of his house, killing his two little grandchildren.

The verdict rendered by the coroner's jury was that the deaths of the 79 persons weer due to bombardment of the twin boroughs "by an enemy who, under cover of a dense fog, fired shot and shell into the towns, killing many unarmed civilians."

Although at a late hour last night the official estimate of the casualties was 82 persons killed and about 250 injured, many of the wrecked houses have not been explored,, and it is believed the list of dead eventually will reach 100.

WAS WOUNDED

the trenches, partially in the water, and their number growing less all the time, finally it was decided to take the German trenches. A charge was made at dusk across the 150 yards dividing them from the enemy and the trenches carried, killing over 100 Germans and losing 60 men. The night was spent in burying both their own and the German dead and sending the wounded to the rear. Fred was taken sick but kept his place as he expected they would be relieved, but one day about the 24th, he was wounded by shrapnel, when the doctor told him he had had pneumonia for several days. He was sent to two different hospitals in France and finally to England where he is now recovering.

KAISER'S ANCESTORS RATHER UNPROMISING

Father of Frederick the Great Undoubtedly Mad—Hohenzollerns the Youngest Royal European Family.

Had there been any science of eugenics in those days, its exponents would never have foretold the coming of Frederick the Great of Prussia, for his antecedents were distinctly unpromising. He was, however, a very great man indeed, and to him must go the credit of having made Prussia pre-eminent among the German kingdoms and states. The Hohenzollerns are a mere upstart family among European royalty, and date back only about five hundred years. This may seem a reasonably long time, but the fact remains that the Prussian Royal family is the youngest in Europe, and that it was long after the Hohenzollerns first appeared upon the page of German history that one of them became a king. It was in the beginning of the fifteenth century that the Marquisate of Brandenburg was bestowed upon the Hohenzollerns by the Emperor of Sigusmund. In the course of the next hundred years the family embraced Lutheranism, and early in the seventeenth century obtained from the King of Poland the investiture of the Duchy of Prussia.

An Unpromising Beginning

Even after this promotion the head of the Hohenzollerns could not rank with such other German princes as the Elector of Saxony and the Elector of Bavaria. The reason was not simply that the head of the Duchy of Prussia was not on his merits a man of outstanding ability, and, comparatively speaking, a parvenu, but that his estates were impoverished. The soil of Brandenburg was as a rule sterile, and even in the neighborhood of Berlin the country was like a desert. In some places the sand, and in other places the forest, discouraged agriculture, and where the soil was rich it was generally marshy and unhealthy. In fact, in all Europe it might have been difficult three or four hundred years ago to find a State that appeared to have fewer natural advantages than Prussia, and one less calculated to become the centre of a great nation.

A Self-made King

Frederick William, who has been called the Great Elector, was the first Hohenzollern to attempt to lift the family out of the mediocrity to which it seemed predestined. By the peace of Westphalia he secured the rich city of Magdeburg, and so was able to leave his son Frederick a much improved and more powerful State, and one that was second only to the recognized kingdoms. Frederick, indeed, determined that it should be a kingdom, an in the year 1700 he assume the title of King of Prussia. It was some time, however, before he could induce the other kings of Europe to recognize him. When Austria consented to recognize him he was made to pay a heavy price for the honor, but as he was a man given wholly to vanities he probably did not repent his bargain. By the time his son, Frederick William, succeeded him his right to be called a king was not questioned.

The new king was a man of considerable administrative abilities, but of odious vices, and his eccentricities brought him perilously near the borderland of insanity. However this half-mad king was the first Prussian War Lord. His ambition was to raise Prussia to a place among the European kingdoms that neither her population nor her wealth entitled her to. By practising great economies he raised a large Prussian army.

A Regiment of Supermen

His military ambitions became a mania, and it was he who sought to form a brigade of giants. Every country was ransacked for men of unusual height and strength, and at a time when the people of Berlin were almost on the verge of starvation he spent tremendous sums in inducing tall Irishmen, Italians and Scandinavians to take the oath of allegiance to Frederick William.

The King thought that if he could secure a sufficient supply of unusually large women and marry them to his giant guards he and his followers would be assured of a steady supply of mammoth soldiers, but it is not recorded that this theory worked out. Toward the end of his career the King was undoubtedly mad. He had an intense hatred for his daughter Wilhelmina, and for his son, who was afterwards Frederick the Great. When he walked abroad the populace fled before him. If he encountered a woman, his favorite greeting was to give her a kick and tell her to go home to her brats. In 1740 he died, and Frederick the Great succeeded him. It is less, therefore, than 200 years since Prussia began to play a great part on the stage of Europe.

German Vessel Sunk.

Only two Turkish officers and twelve soldiers obeyed the order, and the others went down with the ship.

Kerasunt is a seaport of Asiatic Turkey, 70 miles west of Trebizond, on the Black Sea.

Not a Government Measure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — Assurances have been given the British Government by the State Department that the bill introduced by Senator Hitchcock to prohibit entirely the export of munitions of war and arms and war supplies to belligerent countries was not fathered by the administration.

Secretary Bryan declined yesterday to make any comment upon the merits of the measure, and no other official of the administration has discussed it.

Two Persons Drowned.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Dec. 17. — A double drowning occurred in the St. Lawrence river at Ogdensburg, the first fatality of the skating season on the St. Lawrence, when Gordon Runion, 23 years old; Kenneth Runion, 17 years old, and Clara Runion, 11 years old, broke through the ice. Clara Runion perished and the other two were brought ashore by John Mashaw. Gordon died within a few minutes and his brother is still in a precarious condition from shock.

Auto Bank Bandit Captured.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 18. — Two hours after the robbery of the Provident Bank, the Liberty Banking & Savings Co. at Liberty and Freeman avenues, ten blocks away, was entered by a man who is supposed to be the same automobile bandit, and another bundle of money, value not known, was obtained. The bandit again escaped in an automobile driven by himself.

George Winters, cashier of the Liberty Bank, was shot by the bandit and probably seriously injured.

After a pistol duel with three policemen, one of whom he wounded, the automobile bandit was captured.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

LOCAL AND OPEN 'SPIELS WILL BE HELD AS USUAL

Substitute Will be Allowed to Play Three Games in Inter-rink Series

Curling prospects look just about as promising this winter as the most ardent follower of the great winter game could wish for. It was pretty easy to size up the outlook at an enthusiastic meeting of curlers held in the rink recreation rooms last night where thirty-five members of the club gathered and talked over matters and decided to hold both an open and local bonspiel this winter the same as usual. Regarding the question of prizes and trophies nothing was done as the season is insufficiently advanced to know what will be forthcoming in that line.

Bonspiel Committees.

It was decided to hold the open bonspiel on Tuesday, January 12th, and the two succeeding days. The selection of a date for the local bonspiel was left in the hands of the schedule committee. The committee appointed to look after the open event consists of W. G. Morrow (chairman), Robert Harstone, Robert Neill, W. G. Ferguson, G. H. Giroux and the president ex-officio. This committee was given power to add to their number. The committee on the local "spiel" is composed of E. L. Bowes (chairman), A. H. Webb, J. H. Metheral, A. W. Archibald, and Alex. C. Kay.

Inter-Rink Matches.

At the close of the club meeting the committee of management met to revise the rules governing inter-rink matches, but only one small change was made in clause 5, B which allows a substitute to play three times instead of twice as formerly.

The matter of prizes was left with the bonspiel committee to arrange.

Season is Early.

It is impossible to forecast any degree of accuracy when the brothers of the broom will get away to a start this year but "ice-maker" Angus McIntosh says that with good cold weather it will be much earlier than last year, which was late, there being no ice until New Years. He has flooded the floor all week and gave it another bath last evening.

Classy Club Rooms.

The club quarters are pretty classy this year and are bound to prove a popular rendezvous with curlers and members of the club. The recreation room on the second floor is spacious and finely decorated with trophies of other years and group photographs of winning teams in the years that have past who have triumphed in many a close and exciting contest.

Quarters for the ladies are being fixed up and when the feminine players get busy they will find things quite cosy and comfortable. On the third floor there is another large hall which will likely be used for functions of a banquet character and the like.

Good Illumination.

Curlers will also find superior lighting facilities on the ice this year, brought about by the installation of electric light to supersede the gas. They cast a bright clear glow over the entire ice. Mr. Robert Neill's gift of three large ornamented chandeliers are also greatly appreciated for the recreation rooms.

There is to be another meeting Saturday night to make further arrangements.

Peterboro Intermediates and Juniors Hold Workout in Presence of Many Fans

So anxious were the fans to get a line on the Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. teams that some three hundred railbirds were present at Brock Street Rink last night to see the initial workout. Only a few of the Intermediates were out as the others had been out earlier in the day. Hunter and Pethick who are expected to form the defence were absentees while neither Dwyer, Kelly, nor Jones put in an appearance.

Maurice Park, Grover Halpin and Cyril Giroux of last season's Intermediates were out and it being the first night they took things rather easy. Grover Halpin should have a great winter. Last year he went strong after jumping to the Intermediate class and he'll have very little difficulty landing a place this year. Park and he should be the centre ice men with Kelly on left wing. Just who will be playing right is hard to state. Widdifield turned out last night with an Osgoode Hall sweater on and made a fairly good impression on the railbirds. He's a left hand shot but might do on the other wing. Murray the product of Omemee, who was out a few times last year, was present for a while.

Juniors Galore.

The call for Juniors was responded to by a multitude. No goal custodian donned the pads but the rest of the team was complete. Long and Morrow were out and with each of them weighing around 180 avoirdupois the defence is to be what a fan last night called a "hum dinger," whatever that is. Jackson, Knapman, Richardson, O'Connell, Picard, Martin and Austin were on hand. The speed of Jackson was quite a surprise and from his showing last evening has every chance to secure a centre ice berth. Knapman and Richardson were going strong and O'Connell who is trying out for wing also passed the board of censors. The lad has the weight and is a deadly right had shot but somehow or other he is a little slow getting started. With a few more workouts he should keep well in line with Jackson, Richardson and Knapman.

Picard who is an aspirant has abundance of weight and speed but is not what one would call a perfect stick handler. It is said that Lornie Rose will not be out at all this year owing to parental objections. If so one of the speediest of the Juniors will be missing. He went very well last year despite his light weight and should have made a big name this season. Rose has signed a certificate and that in itself is encouraging.

Ice Good.

The ice was exceptionally good, in fact far better than expected. There has been a good solid foundation made and the surface held up well under the wear of last night. The Intermediates work out today and the Juniors tonight at seven.

BOWLING

In the Y. M. C. A. Bowling League the Brighten-Up team celebrated their acquisition of the old Harrier franchise by taking the last game from the Shop team last night. The scores—

Farmers Were Suspicious.

Farmers in the Counties of Wellington, Perth and Huron reported to Ottawa the erection of certain towers at long distances apart on which lights were seen at night.

It was suspected that this was a signal system used by alien enemies within the country. The Government found that the towers were erected by a party sent out by Dr. King of the observatory at Ottawa to make geodetic surveys. The lights were placed on the towers at night to establish accurate distances.

JUNIORS WILL BE OUT TONIGHT

All Candidates Wanted at Seven O'clock

The Peterboro junior O. H. A. team will practise again tonight at 7 o'clock at Brock street rink, and every player who wants a chance should be out tonight, as the squad will be weeded out after this practice. With a big crowd on the ice there is little chance for real work, and on this account it is necessary that the squad should be cut down as soon as possible. Thanks to the Junior City League, Church League and Mercantile League, the management has had a good chance to size up the different players, and it will not be a difficult matter to cut down. Young players who may not be selected for the first squad this year need not feel discouraged. Their turn is coming, and they should try for places on the Church League teams or in other local leagues where their work will be watched and from which they will have a chance to graduate into O. H. A. Company.

BANKERS LOST TO EXCELSIORS

Highlanders Defeated the Allies in Intermediate Schedule

Last night saw another fast game of basketball in the Y. M. C. A., when the Bankers and the Excelsiors met to play off their postponed game. The first half was very fast and even. At no time did either team have the advantage to any extent. In fact, the game was in doubt right up to the last. Bartlett at centre for the Bankers played a most aggressive game for his team, but all of the other men on the team worked well and enabled Bartlett to score nine baskets. Smith and Jeppson held down the forward positions for the Bankers, while Panter and Mulhern played a good game at defence. The Excelsiors showed their old-time pep, and their scoring machine started right from the first to do business. Knapman and Long divided honors at forward, while Stuart, with his long reach, was a tower of strength for his team at centre. What Hamilton and Lewis lacked in size they made up in grit and sticking ability as guards, and both proved themselves to be able to hold down their job in good shape. The first half ended with a score of 13-12 in favor of the Excelsiors, while the final score was 35-28 in favor of the Excelsiors.

Intermediate League.

In the Intermediate League, Jones' Highlanders clashed with Hamilton's Allies, and one of the fastest games in this league was the result. During most of the game it was see-saw back and forth, first one team leading, and then the other. It would be hard to pick any individual stars, as the boys all played well and proved that there is a great future in basketball for the local association. The Highlanders succeeded in winning by the small margin of two points, the final score being 12-10.

Lineup of the seniors—

BANKERS—Jeppson, Smith, Bartlett, Panter, Mulhern.

EXCELSIORS — Long, Knapman, Stuart, Hamilton, Lewis.

Intermediates—

ALLIES — Hamilton, Pringle, Lehar, Dorrill, Blake.

HIGHLANDERS—Jones, Pidgeon, Thorndyke, Gray, Williams.

BELATED WISDOM

Second thoughts the better—
  That perhaps is true.
But, pray, tell what uses
  One may put them to.
In the time for action
  Man must take a stand
And for lack of others
  Use the first at hand.

If a bear is bearing
  Down upon a chap.
No time for reflection
  Or to set a trap.
If he paused and waited
  For the second thought
Any one could tell him
  That he would be caught.

In asking if a lady
  Will tie for life to him.
Unless she takes him quickly,
  His chance is pretty slim.
Her second thought might tell her
  That there perhaps might be
A bunch of better fishes
  Uncaptured in the sea.

For persons building railroads
  Or making flywheels spin
Or tying up with flying
  The second thought may win,
But to the common person
  The problems come like scat—
He must decide offhanded
  And let it go at that.

Victimized by Changing Times.

"Now, then, Cousin Emma, let me give you a bit off the breast."

"Yes, please. I should like to taste that, for in my young days they always gave it to the grownups, and now they keep it for the children, so I've always missed it."—London Punch.

Plenty of Excitement.

Fire Insurance a Tax.

Fire insurance is no doubt an institution of great benefit, especially after a fire loss. Nevertheless, it is a striking commentary upon the business judgment of the Canadian citizen that fire insurance is now also characterized as a tax, distributed, through the buying and selling process, upon the entire community; that every additional fire and every extra fire hazard tends to increase this tax, while every precaution for fire prevention and for the reduction in the number of fire losses tends to lessen the insurance rate. The business man must shift the cost of insuring his goods to the consumer, and, not only is the amount of this tax added, but, as this is part of the cost of doing business, he is entitled to a profit on it as well. Moreover the amount of rent which the business man has to pay is influenced by the cost of insuring the premises occupied, and this tax, too, is concealed in the selling price of his goods. This fire insurance tax must also be added to the selling cost at every handling between the original raw material and the finished article.—"Conservation."

An Opinion of Marriage.

A maid who had been employed in the Benner home for several years took unto herself a husband and went to a nearby town to live. One day about a month after the wedding she came to call on her former mistress, who said:

"Well, Phoebe, I hope that you are happy in your new home. How is your husband?"

To this the bride of a month made reply:

"Well, I reckon I'm happy enough, but the chimney in the kitchen don't draw none too good, an' the water in the well is so brackish I ain't never goin' to git used to it. As for my husband—well, ma'am, it's with him as it is with your man an' all the rest of 'em—if the Lord had 'em to make over he could improve some on the job. Ain't eggs turrible high?"

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

GREEN—HARRON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Riddell, Newton, Ont., when Emily Violet, fifth daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Harron, of Mornington, was united in marriage to Percy Charles Green of Port Hope, Rev. C. Williams of Milverton Anglican Church performing the ceremony. The bride, attired in a handsome gown of Alice blue satin with bodice of duchess lace and fur trimmings, and carrying a large bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley, was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. David Riddell, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, beautifully rendered by the bride's niece, Miss Hazel Riddell. The happy couple left on a short honeymoon, the bride travelling in nigger brown broadcloth, mink furs and hat to match. On their return they will reside in Port Hope.

HUTCHINSON—ELLIOTT.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at Cavan Station on Wednesday, Dec. 9, when Pearl Irene Elliott and Sidney Carlton Hutchinson were united in the bonds of matrimony. Rev. J. R. Butler officiated. The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. Albert Elliott, wore a navy blue tailored suit. On account of a recent bereavement the wedding was a quiet one. The happy couple left for a short visit to Ottawa.

Mr. L. Downer, of Frobisher, Sask., is visiting relatives in East City.

Sympathy will be extended to Dr. and Mrs. McPherson in the death of their infant child, which occurred this morning. The funeral was held this afternoon.

GOING HOME FOR XMAS HOLIDAYS

Normal School Students Were Entertained by the Teachers

The Normal School closed for the Christmas holidays today. Students are leaving the city for their homes to spend their vacation and will not be back until January 5th when school reopens.

Preparatory to leaving they were the guests at a reception tendered them by the teaching staff of the Normal last night. Only students and teachers were present and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The program consisted of musical and vocal numbers by Miss Jean Hill, Maurice Park, Marjorie Mather, and Dr. Park.

The room and halls were beautifully decorated with patriotic colors, the Union Jack predominating.

Following the program games were played and slides cast on the screen, showing scenes of general interest. Refreshments were served in the library.

WAS PROMINENT IN CANADIAN LIFE

One of the well-known men of Canada in years gone by, Mr. F. Hurdon, of Toronto, passed away there on Thursday. In spite of his former prominence he had lived quietly in Toronto for several years. He was one of the few surviving members of the early Parliament of Canada, having represented South Bruce from 1857 to 1874 as a Conservative. He was of sufficient importance to have such a candidate against him, when he was defeated, as the late Hon Edward Blake. He had occupied a position under the Dominion Government for several years afterward, until advancing years compelled him to retire. He was about 85 years of age.

The deceased was a brother-in-law of Mrs. H. Waddell, of Peterborough, who, in company with Mr. R. M. Waddell, is in Toronto attending the funeral.

BUSY DAYS AT OTTAWA

Military Officials in the Capital Are Working Day and Night.

Military offices in Ottawa present the appearance of the proverbial beehive so busy are they in preparing equipment for the Canadian soldiers. Everywhere is the spirit of duty. Possibly the busiest offices are those having charge of the inspection of all materials which must be forwarded to the front. Saddles, field glasses, tent pegs, transports of all kinds, blankets, ropes, gun carriages and guns, ammunition of all kinds—these and countless other little details occupy the sole attention of scores of officers and men who are responsible to the Militia Department for every particle of war material that goes from Canada.

When a special article is needed it is invariably called for, for immediate delivery. That entails long hours, but those in charge are working day and night in the knowledge that they are performing their duty and they disregard the number of hours they put in.

Lt.-Col. W. G. Hurdman arrived in Ottawa the other day after a motoring test, to find his desk piled high with correspondence and work which had accumulated during his absence. In his department all materials connected with artillery and transport and supplies for both are inspected. Special machinery is installed for the purpose of testing steel. In a few cases piled in one corner there was $20,000 worth of field glasses waiting to be gone through.

One day not long ago an order arrived for a certain field gun. Plans had to be gotten out (there were over 200 for this particular piece), and forwarded to a factory. This alone kept the staff busy until into the night. Then such things as mess tins, tarpaulins, wheels, bolts; whiffletrees and a hundred and one other details are constantly calling for attention.

In another building such things as blankets and clothing are tested. Here every article is stamped with the Government stamp before being reshipped to the front. The staff in this case works day and night. On an average from 2,500 to 3,200 blankets are inspected a day.

The clothing is put through a severe test for both weight and strength. When the conditions are complied with reshipping commences. If, however, the goods will not stand the test they are not used.

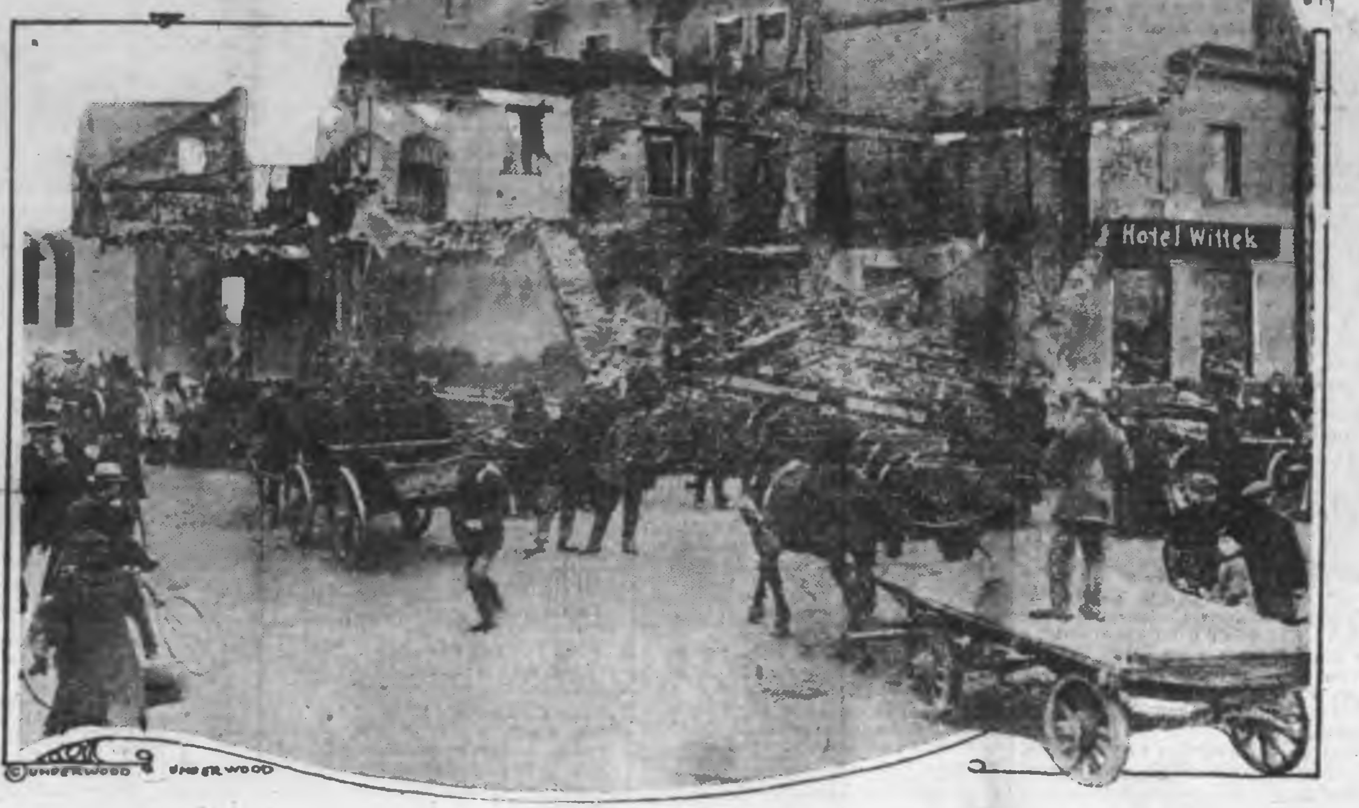
There is a constant stream of teams arriving and departing from these offices all day long. "I have often waited three hours to get my load off," said a teamster the other day. Thousands of cases have been received, inspected and sent along their way since the opening of the war. Preparations are now being made for the handling of many thousands more.

The military offices are now putting to actual use the many contrivances which have come into play only under camp conditions. Plans of the latest war machinery are being gotten out and in some cases new ones made. Any who believe the equipping of an army is a small job need only visit these military headquarters to see the amount of work that is entailed when a Canadian division is sent to war.

Where Fishing Pays.

Salmon fishermen in British Columbia earn $15 a day, and some instances when one catch is exceptionally good as much as $25 a day.

WAR'S RUIN BREAKS ACROSS BORDER INTO GERMANY



Ortelburg, whose ruins are shown in the photo, is a German town in East Prussia. The Russians, in their march on East Prussia, bombarded the town with telling effect, as shown by the ruins, but were compelled to retire before the Germans under Field Marshall Von Hindenburg. Regardless of the ruins all about them, on regular market days merchants and hucksters took their accustomed places in the Market Platz with their supply of foodstuffs. The photo shows the scene.

AN INDIAN CARIBOU HUNT

A party of explorers returning from Ungava reports having seen the native method of hunting caribou.

A little herd was sighted feeding on a beaver meadow surrounded by woods. After a little consultation a young man and his wife stepped out cautiously from the woods, each one holding a red shawl fastened flagwise to a pole. Taking their stand about a dozen yards from the trees where their friends lay hidden, they stood motionless, resting their flag staffs on the ground.

After over an hour's waiting, four of the boldest of the caribou which had separated themselves from their companions approached the flags. With their noses outstretched in curiosity, they cautiously walked close up to the statuesque decoys, so close indeed that, like lightning, a knife was plunged right into the jugular vein of the one near to the man, and the squaw at the same moment dug her weapon, an old-fashioned bayonet, into the fore-quarter of the animal nearest to her.

The others fired at short range, the net result of the whole onset being three of the deer left dying on the snow. One escaped apparently uninjured and trotted away some 100 yards or so, when his companions met him, and there, within easy rifle range, the ten animals stood or lay placidly looking on until the work of skinning and quartering the victims was done and the hunters moved on.

GAS BELOW STANDARD

The gas inspectors of the Dominion Inland Revenue Department have found some remarkable conditions in a few Canadian cities, according to the annual report of the department issued at Ottawa.

In regard to illuminating power 21 tests out of 28 in Victoria, B.C., showed the gas to be below the standard. In Winnipeg 75 out of 102 tests were below the standard, in Ottawa 26 out of 82 tests were the same.

In Toronto, Montreal, St. John and the majority of the other cities and towns the gas was up to the standard for illuminating power.

The inspectors of gas meters in Toronto found that 196 had to be rejected, of which 124 were too fast, in Hamilton 73 were rejected, in Belleville 34, and in Peterboro, Woodstock and Ottawa none.

The report on electrical energy shows that the amount generated for use in Canada was almost exactly equal to the amount exported in the last fiscal year. There was 117,955 horsepower for home use and 118,207 for export. The chief exporting companies were the Ontario Power Co., which exported 43,000 out of its total of 106,000 horsepower generated, and the Canadian Niagara Co., which exported 61,241 out of 62,988. The total horsepower generated in the country was 236,169.

MISSION BOARDS NOT RETRENCHING

Are Maintaining Their Programs For the Year.

Apprehensive, but not despondent, would be, perhaps, a fair description of the attitude of the various Canadian churches towards the probable effect of the war on missions, whether at home or abroad.

"We Methodists," said the Rev. Dr. Endecott, "have one board for both home and foreign missions. And at its meeting last month, the appropriations covering both were equal to those of last year—in fact, slightly in advance of last year's. This plan can be carried out only at the cost of unusual sacrifices. We recognize that, aside from the question of unusual financial stringency, the war is making unusual calls on church members in the shape of subscriptions to the Patriotic Fund, and other cognate funds. We would not have anyone give a cent less to any of these. But, at the same time, we make an appeal to our church members for supreme loyalty and self-sacrifice. We must do our patriotic duty and religious duty too. 'Fear God, Honor the King.' Our duty in both directions is absolute and imperative.

"We are retaining all our missionaries in the foreign field, and are sending forward small reinforcements, especially to China. In Western China, we have one of the most complete missions in the world—one of great variety, with its medical, educational, and evangelistic branches, and with its press, which is the press for all missions there—and this is very expensive. In Japan, we have more than doubled our missionary staff in the last four years. In fact, during the last ten years we have been sending out an abnormal number of missionaries. Our main effort this next year will be to keep up maintenance so that the work may go on. Our reinforcements will be up to the full standard. But we are restricting expenditure on buildings and property.

"As regards home missions we mean to hold our ground. Our work west of Lake Superior will be carried on on the same scale as last year. But this is only rendered possible by the loyalty of our missionaries."

The Presbyterians consider that the present is a time to advance in the foreign mission field. They have twenty missionaries returning thither from furlough, and are sending out twenty-five new missionaries. Like the Methodists, however, they aim to keep down expenditure on buildings as much as possible.

"As regards home missions," said Mr. Edmison, "we intend to retrench, in the sense that we are not opening up new work. But we are not taking a single missionary out of the field. This is no time for retrenchment of that kind. Ours is warfare, too, and we can't recede at a moment like this. With regard to finance, church work has not suffered in lean years in the past. And, up to the present, the contributions to our home missions this year are up to the average, perhaps a little better than usual, although one can scarcely speak definitely as to this, as many people are accustomed to withhold their contributions until the end of the year."

Defence of the Toad

Our reference last week to the loafers who were hanging around this town as being of as little use to the Empire in this crisis as a hop toad, has brought forth a vigorous protest from a Brant farmer, who claims that it is slanderous libel on a good toad to compare it to a useless loafer who don't work and won't fight for his country. The toad is fighting the foes of vegetation all its life, and as an asset to the nation in keeping the grubs and insects down is enough to make idle loafers look cheaper than Mexican money with holes in it.—Bruce Times.

"For his money."

"For his money? Why, he has none!"

"Well, that is his fault."

"Is he?"

"Yes."

"Well, if I know anything about that job of his he'll be coming home sick."

Received News of Atrocities.

Miss Linda Boyd, Belleville, has received a letter from a friend in England, saying that in Vottingham, a village of about 500 people, within 20 miles of London, about 20 Belgian refugees were being cared for. Amongst these homeless people were five little children who had both hands and feet cut off, and one woman who had a thumb pulled out of her hand.

Elgin County for Refugees?

Dr. Bryce, of the Immigration Department, was in St. Thomas recently looking into the matter of having some 500 acres of farm land in Elgin County purchased and divided up into ten-acre farms for Belgian refugees. Other Western Ontario cities are to be visited by the official also.

A QUESTION OF ODORS

Bob Burman, record holder in motorcar racing, tells the following story:

Recently I was talking with a woman whose husband had acquired considerable wealth suddenly and who was quite new to the social world and its customs. She was particularly anxious to appear as if accustomed to all the luxuries of life.

She began a conversation with me on motoring.

"Have you purchased your new car this season?" I asked.

"No, Mr. Burman. Not yet," she said. "I can't make up my mind just which make of car to buy. Maybe you will help me."

"What is it that you cannot decide about them?" I asked.

"Why, I can't decide whether I should get a gasoline car or a limousine car. Tell me, does limousine smell as bad as gasoline?"

CULINARY HINTS.

One cupful of cornmeal makes six ounces.

To keep cheese from molding or from drying, wrap it in a cloth damped with vinegar and keep in a covered dish.

A teaspoonful of grated horseradish will keep a can of milk fresh for a day or two even in the hottest weather.

If lettuce when wilted is put into a pan of cold water and set in a cool place it will become fresh and crisp.

When boiling a ham leave it in the water in which it has been boiled until it is quite cold. This will make it juicy and tender.

When cooking cabbage, turnips or onions boil at the same time vinegar with a few spices. This will destroy all vegetable odor.

When food burns in a kettle set the kettle in cold water and you will not notice any burnt taste. The stain left is easily removed with ashes and sand.

Hard boiled eggs should be plunged into cold water as soon as they are removed from the saucepan. This prevents a dark ring from appearing round the yolk.

If you wish to prevent green vegetables from boiling over drop a piece of dripping the size of a walnut into the center of them, just as they commence to boil.

A Crop Equal to Fertilizer.

An Irish farmer was asked if he used any of the commercial fertilizers on his land.

"No, sorr," he replied. "To my notion there's nothing like the old barnyard kind."

"Nonsense, man," said the other. "The time is coming when a man can carry the fertilizer for an acre of land in one of his waistcoat pockets."

"Maybe he will, sorr," returned Pat. "An' he'll be able to carry the crop in the other pocket, I'm thinkin'."

Mr. Nemo

By EUNICE BLAKE

When Tim Bradford married Ella Strong they were both young, and one was foolish. Tim was the foolish one, and there was no excuse for him because he was twenty-five years old, an age when if a man is ever going to have any sense it will surely have appeared. Ella was barely eighteen and looked to Tim for guidance.

Tim was a good looking chap and found conquests of empty headed girls quite easy. The consequence was that he was fond of that kind of amusement. He was a very deep thinker—in his own opinion—and his thoughts took shape to serve his desires. When he became engaged to Ella Strong he propounded a new idea—that is, new to her, though it was becoming quite fashionable. It was that a married couple should have a great deal of liberty and be married only so long as they were satisfied with each other. This didn't trouble Ella, because she didn't wish any liberty, and she had perfect confidence in Tim's love for her.

For several years after they were married Tim let other women alone, devoting himself to his wife and a couple of children. Then he renewed his flirtations.

Ella by this time was twenty-three years old. If a man is expected to have any sense at twenty-five a woman certainly should have gained some wisdom by twenty-three. Ella's complaisance to Tim's theories had vanished. She didn't mind his flirtations so long as they were scattered, but when his name began to be connected with that of another woman to his wife's mortification she objected very seriously.

But she said nothing to Tim about it. She had grown sufficiently experienced to know that when a husband or a wife begins to find fault through jealousy the matrimonial situation is in a very serious condition. Not every woman of twenty-three would realise that, but Ella did.

One day Tim received an anonymous note which warned him that his wife was maintaining a correspondence with a certain friend of his. The writer, who was evidently a woman, said that she disliked very much to tell tales, but she could not bear to see a husband and father so abominably treated. His wife was deceiving him. She hoped that her information would be in time to enable him to prevent the breaking up of his home on account of his innocent children, if on no other.

This was a terrible blow to Bradford. His wife had shown no objection to his attentions to any other women, not even the one who had occasioned the talk. He had sometimes wondered at this, but attributed it largely to the fact that when they were married it had been understood that both he and Ella should have a great deal of liberty. He had had his liberty, and now his wife was taking hers with a vengeance.

The anonymous note he had received had come to him by an afternoon mail at his office. He hurried home, to find his wife in the hall, as usual, for the connubial kiss. She put up her lips, but instead of meeting them with his he drew back with a thundercloud on his brow.

"Read that," he said, handing her the note he had received.

Ella read the note and said: "As for this, I am above making a reply to anonymous accusations or to bits of information given you concerning me by any one. But in this case that is of no importance, because what this woman says I admit. But I am surprised that you should take any notice of it, for it is perfectly understood between us that we were both to have every liberty in such matters."

"But"—

"What 'buts' are there? Have I ever complained of any of your affaires de coeur?"

"But mine were innocent. I am a man; you are a woman and the mother of children."

"I consider myself as well able to flirt innocently as you are."

"But the world"—

"What is the world to me beside my own conscience? Besides, the world is throwing off its antiquated morality. The time is coming when this matter of marriage will not be riveted chains, but a daisy chain, to be broken without a tussle."

"For heaven's sake, Ella, where did you pick up such nonsense?"

"I learned it from you."

"Then unlearn it from me. It's rot."

"And leave you to practice it?"

"I? No; my flirtations are of no consequence in comparison to our family comfort and happiness."

"Then you will cease them?"

"Certainly, if you object to them."

"Very well. I will cease mine till I see that you have begun again; then I will begin anew."

But Tim never began again. He was completely cured. He soon insisted that he and his wife should give up society in order that they might the better enjoy their home.

"By the bye, Ella, who was the fellow that I was warned of in the anonymous note to look out for?"

"Mr. Nemo."

Going to her desk, she unlocked a drawer, took out a paper and handed it to him. It was the original of the anonymous note. She had written it herself.

"You're a jim dandy!" he exclaimed, folding her in his arms.

GERMANS ARE SENDING THEIR MONEY HOME

Although it greatly surprised Britishers to read a few days ago that a courier service was kept in operation between London and Berlin, it may surprise Canadians even more to learn that a regular channel of transferring money from Canada to Germany is being put to daily use. This is nothing more nor less than the enclosing of German bank bills, of which there are large quantities in Toronto, in sealed packets which are carried by courier to Buffalo and there despatched to Germany as part of Uncle Sam's mail.

Under war conditions none of the Canadian banks or express companies maintain connections with German or Austrian correspondents or agents, and, of course, the postoffice can sell no money orders to the country of the enemy. This blockade of the regular channels caused much worry and some hardship to Canadian men and women interned at German resorts for the period of the war, and in one or two instances those at the Canadian end were able to use the good offices of the American Ambassadors abroad, through friends in the United States, to relieve immediate financial necessities. This, however, was a roundabout and a doubtful method.

Since the beginning of the war a great many thousands of dollars have actually been sent to the hostile countries by German and Austrian residents of Canada and by Canadians who were obliged to come to the aid of stranded families and relatives. The predicament of money transfer was to a considerable extent solved by the production through a well-known tourist agency of bank notes of German institutions. How such quantities of these bills happened to be in Canada at this time cannot be explained, but the fact remains. The agency in question suggested that the bills were in the possession of German residents of Canada "by accident," just as any Canadian going to Berlin might carry some notes of Canadian banks.

These German bank notes are not openly for sale but can be procured up to any quantity for those who urgently require them. As the Canadian postoffices have authority to open all letters or packets addressed to Germany or Austria, or to any other countries or persons, no registration could be secured in this country, and in any event the letter would be opened, examined, and returned to the sender.

CONTENTMENT.

I SAW a little bird today
That from a tall and stately tree
Sang to the world in joyful note,
Poured forth a flood of melody
So full of love and life and hope,
So far from hint of care or woe.
And did I wish I was that bird?
If any one should ask you, no.

I sat beside a sylvan stream,
And in its crystal shades below
I saw a fish with silver scales
In movements listless glide below.
So full of pleasure seemed his life,
So peaceful, calm, serene, his lot!
And did I wish I was that fish?
Well, on the whole, I reckon not.

I ran against a Mexican
Who sat before his cabin door,
And as the morning sun advanced
He moved around a little more.
When he was hungry nature had Provided him a food supply.
And did I wish I was that man?
Well, for the trade I did not sigh.

The quiet life allurement has,
And nothing doing all the day
May strike one for a little while,
But where's the profits and the pay?
I'd rather have a little stress,
Get in the mixup and the throng
And live while I was on the earth
Although I might not live so long.

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

An Army Campaign

It Was Planned and Executed by Women

By F. A. MITCHEL

Colonel Edgar Garrison was a soldier from the crown of his head to the sole of his feet. He considered his profession the noblest of all and contended that nothing should be permitted to creep into the army to destroy its efficiency. He looked with concern upon the many weddings that were taking place among the officers and declared that unless the matrimonial fever were checked the army would become useless except for show purposes.

"What is a soldier intended for?" he would say. "To be killed. He is paid to hold himself in readiness by the government for that especial purpose. Then, too, women and children are encumbrances to an army even in peaceful garrison life. An officer is ordered from one post to another. What does this involve? The transfer of gun and caisson, of sword and bayonet? No. The bulk of the impedimenta is women and children."

A number of officers' wives were accustomed to gather mornings on the porch of the quarters pertaining to one of them, when, seated in rocking chairs, they sewed, chatted and rocked. One morning the colonel, whose remarks upon matrimony in the army had been repeated by the husband of one of them to his wife the night before, passed this "rocking chair brigade," as he had dubbed them. He took off his forage cap with a flourish and smiled benignly on them—for it is a matter of fact that a man who inveighs against the softer sex is especially deferential to them—and passed over the parade with a strut intended to show them that if he had the power he would banish every one of them.

Forthwith the rocking chair brigade resolved themselves into a council of war to consider the most advantageous method of making the colonel eat his words. But, first and foremost, every rocker was pledged not to reveal to her husband any plan that might be decided upon. And before going further I would say that the softer sex has been much maligned as to the keeping of a secret, for of the eight ladies who composed the brigade not one was found to betray the camp, though it must be admitted that each and every one confessed afterward to her husband that it almost killed her to keep "mum."

The ladies having kept the secret, far be it from the narrator of this story to give it away. Suffice it to say that on the very morning that the colonel shrugged his shoulders at the rocking chair brigade and showed his back to them, never turning till he had disappeared within the portals of his office, a plan of attack was decided upon, to be executed by Mrs. Major MacCallum, the ranking lady of the post, the commandant being a bachelor.

However, before the campaign was inaugurated there was a long period of watchful waiting, during which the ladies of the post smiled on the colonel, the colonel became more and more careless in the expression of his army-matrimonial opinions and the leaks through the married officers widened. As the ocean wave tosses its head most defiantly before breaking, so did the colonel, ignorant of the impression he was creating, air his opinions that the noblest work of God is a soldier—except one encumbered with a family, when it is his bounden duty to resign and give way in the line of promotion.

One morning the colonel while crossing the parade to his office saw the post carryall drawn by a pair of mules go by. At the window appeared the face of a girl about eighteen years of age. Whether this lady was fair or not makes no difference in this story. She was young. Every other woman at the post had reached middle age, and all had borne their husbands more children than the army regulations provide. Some of them had lost whatever beauty they may have once possessed.

SHE SAT AND CHATTED WITH HIM.

But the face at the coach window! The colonel had seen nothing like it since he had been promoted and ordered to this frontier post. Its owner had evidently just arrived, for on the rack in the rear was a trunk big enough, the colonel thought, to fill an army wagon without any other baggage. The commandant went on to his office, sat down at his desk and went to work looking over a bundle of requisitions left by the quartermaster for his approval. But somehow that mild face at the coach window, wearing the pleased look of one visiting new and attractive scenes, got between the man and the requisitions. He turned down one for repairs on the guardhouse, which were badly needed, and approved one for laundry implements without noticing that had it not been for an overplus of married soldiers at the post the present supply would have been ample.

Be it remembered that Colonel Garrison was forty-two years old, a period when a man feels that he has passed beyond the time when he has any attraction for young girls; that he had seen no woman for more than a year, except those attached to the post he commanded, none of whom was either young or beautiful. When, therefore, the next day he passed Mrs. MacCallum sitting on her porch in front of her quarters with the girl he had seen at the coach window he stopped to pass a few compliments. Mrs. MacCallum introduced Miss Madeline Badger, her niece, who had come to make her a brief visit.

"I fear, colonel," said the lady, "that you are such a devotee to bachelor habits that we shall see nothing of you while my niece is here; otherwise I should hope to have you aid in entertaining her."

"I assure you, madam, with several youngsters having nothing to do but an occasional tour of duty the young lady will not need the attention of an old fellow like me."

Miss Madeline Badger made no reply to this whatever in words, but sat looking at the colonel with admiring eyes. One would have thought she was looking at an Apollo. There is something very attractive to a middle aged man in an admiring gaze from a young girl who has not yet learned to keep her admiration to herself. The colonel was much affected, and as he walked away, feeling that those mild eyes were following, he felt more proud of himself than ever before in his life. But probably, he thought, when the youngsters appeared they would be turned in another direction.

Mrs. MacCallum decided to give a dance for her niece, and great preparations were making therefor.

"Colonel Garrison," she said, "I am in trouble about the matter of opening the ball. I assigned Mr. Twining to open it with the guest of honor, my niece, and she has refused him for a first partner."

"What's the matter with Twining?" asked the colonel.

"Nothing. Madeline has no objection to him whatever. But she considers that since the ball is given for her it is her right to open it with the commandant."

"What! Does she wish to open it with me?"

"She declares that she will open it with no one else."

"My dear madam, please tell your niece that I shall be charmed to open the ball with her."

The colonel dancing with Miss Madeline Badger was surely an interesting sight. To be preferred to young men who had been recent girl killers at West Point was a triumph that he had supposed impossible for a man of his age. Jupiter leading Terpsichore in the dance could not have appeared more godly. Nor was the first dance all. When it was over Miss Badger led the commandant to a window seat, where she sat and chatted with him, and since none of his inferior officers would venture to take her away from him and she made no excuse to leave him he was forced whether or not to stay where he was till the man who had been assigned to her for the next dance approached.

Mrs. MacCallum had seen to it that the colonel was down on Miss Badger's card for a number of dances, and when the function was over he went to his quarters, his head whirling as his heels had whirled during the evening. The major's wife had gained a victory in the very beginning of the campagin.

Miss Badger instead of making a short visit made a long one. But she made short work of the colonel. Those who were in the secret that she was being used to put him hors de combat in his fight against women in the army did not dream but that she would throw him over in the end for one of the younger officers, any one of whom would have been glad to get her. Those unadvised wondered what it all meant.

Every one knows that in the choice of a mate a man is subject to influence, and what he will do may be foretold from those influences. As for a woman, in the matter of her choice she resembles a crab. No one can tell whether she will go forward or backward or sidewise. Miss Badger in the end astonished those who had put her forward to sting the colonel by suddenly announcing her engagement to him.

The conspirators builded better than they knew.

Colonel Garrison in speaking of women in the army has all the enthusiasm of a new convert.

"Why, my dear fellow," he will say to a brother officer, "what would become of the discipline necessary to the army were it not for the softening influence of women? There would be perpetual mutiny."

ON INSTALLMENTS.

In Newport town there lives a man
Who went on the installment plan
He always saved his matches, pard,
And soon he had a lumber yard.

To buy an auto he applied
That he might have a car to ride.
He said. "A dollar down I'll pay."
The salesman turned and said, "Good day."

He never did a deed so rash
As paying for a thing in cash.
If he could pay a nickel down
He'd buy up everything in town.

He asked a lady for her hand,
But claimed he didn't understand
And to complete the deal was loath,
When she said, "Honey, take them both."

Of clocks and books and desks and chairs
And garments that a fellow wears
Or anything that they would charge
He had an ample stock and large.

In eating meals he looped the loop
In one place he would go for soup
And to another one close by
For meat and to a third for pie.

And when at last, by doubts oppressed,
He laid down to his final rest
To payment make on nature's debt
He died by inches, you can bet.

"Foolish?"

"Yes."

"Why, think how embarrassing it would be to the mature if the poor things were anything else."

Startled Him.

"I notice Old Sokum has straightened up some."

"Yes; he has made a great discovery."

"What is that?"

"That water isn't poison."

No Consideration.

"Jones has got to go to work."

"What's the matter now?"

"His wife refuses to support him any longer."

"Some women are so heartless."

Warped, but Direct.

"Tell me the straight of it," said the irate bank president.

"The straight of it," said the trembling clerk, "is that I have been crooked."

To the Shareholders of the Bank of Ottawa,

We have examined the books and accounts of the Bank of Ottawa at its Chief Office and at five of its principal branches, and have been duly furnished with certified returns from the remaining branches, and we find that the above statement of Liabilities and Assets at November 30th, 1914 is in accordance therewith. The Bank's investments and the securities and cash on hand at the Chief Office and at the branches visited were verified by us as at the close of business, November 30th, 1914, and in addition we visited the Chief Office and certain branches of the Bank during the year, when we checked the cash and verified the securities and found them to be in agreement with the books. We have obtained all information and explanations required, and all transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have, in our opinion, been within the powers of the Bank. And we certify that the above statement of Liabilities and Assets as at November 30th, 1914, is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs, according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank. In arriving at the profits for the year ending November 30th, 1914, sufficient reserves have, in our opinion, been made to provide for shrinkages in the values of the Bank's investments.

PRISONERS RECEIVE NO PAY

The Germans Are Well Treated They Get no Money.

The "charge" has been made, if charge it can be termed, that the German and Austrian prisoners interned at Stanley Barracks, are treated with undue consideration. So firm a hold has this idea got in the imagination of some portion of the public at least, that the assertion is freely made by the fellow "who knows it for a fact," that the prisoners even receive a dollar a day for any work they may do around their place of confinement. Such rumors, stories and "relations of facts" increase, multiply and become prolific simply as a result of the close guard that is kept over the prisoners, and the fact that they are cut off so completely from everyday life that the general public knows next to nothing as to how they fare.

When it became necessary to have a detention camp in Toronto, the military authorities altered and "fortified" the old Dragoon building to make is suitable for its new class of occupants. The windows were all closely barred with heavy steel rods, the wooden doors were sheathed in iron, and even the small port-holes, part of the original ventilating system, through which a large-sized rabbit couldn't have squirmed, were barricaded up with sheet iron.

In each of the five dormitories there are sixteen cots of the same pattern. Make and quality the same as those supplied to the non-commissioned officers at the Exhibition camp. The rooms are well-heated, and so far as physical comfort is concerned, the prisoners have no cause to complain. The bugle does not sound the "lights out" in the detention camp. The lights burn the whole night through, so that the guard outside may peep through the small glass aperture in the door and satisfy himself that all is well within. In wet weather these dormitories are the prisoners' sitting rooms, as well as their sleeping apartments. Here, during the day time, when the weather is unfavorable outside, and they are not needed to do fatigue duty, they may retire and read books on any subject almost from the Descent of Man to Higher Civilization.

But they must not see a newspaper or a magazine. Some of them think that the denial of this luxury is a welcome relief, but from the anxiety expressed in the questions put to the guards, others would give all their worldly wealth for a resume of the war's events to date. In the daytime, when the weather is not too unpleasant, the prisoners live in the open air. An erection, colloqually referred to as the "bull-pen," is provided for them on the lawn in front of their sleeping quarters. This area is enclosed by a high wire and steel fence, inside of which the interned exercise themselves by playing games, walking lying, sitting, rolling or loitering. It is needless to add that the guards are never absent and never asleep. On high pedestals they stand with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets, and the six men thus armed in the day time, and the double guard at night, is all-sufficient to keep splendid order and prevent any outbreak of riotous conduct.

Exactly the same rations, in quantity and quality, are supplied to the prisoners as are supplied to the overseas contingent in the adjoining camp. The work they have to do is not heavy. It consists chiefly of tidying up the barrack square, cutting the lawns, sometimes they may have to repair a sewer pipe that is out of order, or help in the routine work if assistance is needed.

Dustless Street Cleaning.

Canada's climatic conditions, to a certain extent peculiar to herself, impose handicaps in the care of pavements which are hard to overcome.

The dust of the asphalt pavements on business streets is the admitted cause of immense damage to stocks of merchandise, and also is very disagreeable to the individual. This is especially so in early spring and late autumn, when the water sprinkled on the pavements freezes, resulting in accidents to horses and pedestrians.

Water used on pavements at such times is also the cause of serious damage to them, as it soaks into the crevices in the pavement, and freezing, causes the upheaval and disintegration of the asphalt. This is especially noticeable along the curbs and street car lines.

Dustless street cleaners, operated on the combined vacuum and sweeper principle, are in use in a number of North American cities. It is claimed that their work is entirely satisfactory, that after cleaning, no sprinkling is necessary, as the dust has been thoroughly removed. The advantages of this system are numerous, including the absence of the dust nuisance, resulting in conservation of both health and property; the saving of water and a large percentage of the cost of sprinkling; the saving of labor in street cleaning, and the avoidance of damage done by water to pavements in frosty weather.—Saturday Night.

Consideration for Prisoners.

Prisoners at Kingston Penitentiary will no longer suffer from being gased at by the public. Warden Creighton has received orders from the Department of Justice that sightseers will in future be barred. Only people on business will be admitted.

Half as Much Again.

That 50 per cent. more land had been prepared for crops in the prairie provinces this fall than a year ago, was the statement made by J. H. Grisdale of Ottawa, director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, after an extensive tour through the west.

A GERMAN SCARE

Railway Guards Uncovered a Real Live Plot—For a Few Minutes.

"What's this?" ejaculated the first man, holding up a small can.

"Lemme see," came the answer.

A moment's pause. Then a frightened scream from the second person and two pairs of feet scampering away, a maddened rush, a frenzied dash.

"What's — what's the matter?" gasped the first man, after he had followed the second at a dead heat for some five minutes.

"That was — nitro-glycerine — in that can," gasped the second in turn.

"Nitro-glycerine!" echoed the first, pronouncing every syllable, his eyes bulging. The two stared at each other without speaking. They were bridge guards on a railway in old Ontario and, as was their custom, they made an examination of the ground under their bridge every morning.

"Well, we'd better tell the boss. I'll find him. You go back," said the second guard.

"Oh, no! I'll find the boss," said the first guard, his cheeks paling.

"We'll both go," they eventually agreed, and in fifteen minutes three forms could be seen on a handcar dashing madly along the track toward the bridge. They stopped about twenty yards from the bridge and under the direction of the two shivering guards "the boss" descended into the hollow under the bridge. Gingerly he approached the spot where the can lay Gingerly he stooped and as carefully lifted it up. The brave guards were now standing beside him looking on.

Then "the boss's" eyes gleamed, his nostrils dilated. "Fatheads!" he roared, "that's brass polish!"

Dogs as Artillery Horses.

The First Army Corps of France is said to be considering the adoption of dogs for hauling artillery. The dogs in question are the big Flemish animals, which are largely utilized in the north of France for dragging milk carts and other vehicles.

A good Flemish dog can be bought for 100 francs, and the cost of feeding it does not exceed 50 centimes a day. The lowest-price of an artillery horse is 400 francs and the daily cost of its upkeep amounts to two francs. In other words, the first cost of the horse is at least four times as great and it costs four times as much to feed. Moreover, for 100 francs it is possible to buy a dog in much better condition than the majority of the French artillery horses.

Chicken Hash.

Cut fine a quart or more of cold boiled potatoes (do not chop) and put them in a hot frying pan with a tablespoonful of butter which has been melted, but not browned. Let them cook slowly, loosening frequently with a spatula. After they are partly browned (adding more butter as needed) add a pint or a quart of cold chicken cut fine and cook fifteen or twenty minutes longer, salt and add one-half cupful of sweet cream and a teaspoonful of chopped sweet green peppers. The quantity of chicken used in this recipe may vary according to the amount on hand.

A CLERICAL RACONTEUR

Very Rev. J. J. Craven of Hamilton, is Noted as a Story-Teller.

If you have 'one on Pat," a good and new one—and, mind you, it has to be good and new, for there isn't a blessed one otherwise, born or manufactured, that isn't in the list of the genial priest—tell it to Very Rev. J. J. Craven, the new Dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Hamilton, formerly of Galt, and you have a listener with an appreciation so keen and a manifestation thereof so hearty and wholesome, that your effort is rewarded to soul's content.

Troth, it's a question whether Father Craven wouldn't sooner have the laugh on than with his countryman—more especially when the story points a moral. "Come, come!" he will reason with a despondent parishioner who has sought counsel of him. "Cheer up! You know the old song:

"Be a man, be a man,
Stare fate in the face!
Shure, the heart will be aisy
If it's in the right place."

"Did I ever tell you about McKenna, the troublesome old grouch, who was always declaring it would have been money in his pocket if he'd never been born?"

And so the jolly priest laughs the gloomy fellow out of his doldrums

Or if it happens to be a particularly obstinate case, the good father, after soberly admonishing, will have recourse again to anecdotal antidote.

"We all know, as Rafferty puts it, that this is a quare world—nobody comes into it that ever goes out of it alive. And you want to live? To be sure, you do! That's why Mike and Dan couldn't suicide. You see, the pair were a trifle down in their luck, and they agreed to go into a barn, cover up with blankets, and pass peacefully away. Fifteen minutes later Mike, in his corner, uncovered his head and asked: 'Are ye there, Dan!' The answer came from the other corner: 'I am!' 'An' ye're not dead, yet?' 'Sorra a bit o' me!' 'Nayther am I, Dan. I can't die for the life o' me!'"

Nor is Father Craven's stock of laugh-makers confined to products of the Emerald Isle. He relishes, and can repeat effectively, an English, Scotch, or German jokelet. When on the subject he will tell you that the funniest story he ever heard—apart, of course, from the Poor Pat variety—is that of the inebriated reporter in the British Upper House, who, during an unlooked-for lull in a momentous debate, involving one of the gravest issues in national affair, leaned over the gallery rail and blandly preferred the request: "While we're (hic) waitin', will shome (hic) noble lord pleash (hic) shing a comic shong?"

All this discloses but one side of Rev. Father Craven's nature and characteristics. Primarily and essentially he is a true type of the well-born, scholarly, cultured, Catholic gentleman. He has a fine presence and a face that beams with benignity and sheds sunny smiles. Well-informed, polished, graceful, and fluent in conversation, an earnest, eloquent preacher, and zealous, devoted minister, he is revered and beloved by all creeds and classes in the town of Galt, where he has labored for fifteen years before going to Hamilton a short time ago, a model ecclesiastic and exemplar of all-round good citizenship.

And if, in this connection one were to tell a bit av a shtory—the same being on the good dean's own cherished "light," if I am not mistaken—maybe it might not detract from the dignity nor impair the sincerity of this passing tribute to the virtues, character, and capabilities of the new Dean of St. Patrick's, Hamilton.

Hefferman and Murphy, at the noon hour, were discussing the work in hand.

"'Tis har-rd labor, this dhrain-diggin'," declared the former.

"'Tis that, indade," assented the latter. "Now, for a nice, clane, daciat, as well as aisy job, Hefferman, gimme a bishop!"
